to compete in the Sonora Wool and Mohair Show and win overall high team honors.

Mark Van Hoozer's father, Calvin Van Hoozer, was a member of the 1952 Kerrville F.F.A. team that won overall high team honors; Paula's father, Turney Friess, was a member of the 1955 Sutton County 4-H team that won overall high team honors. Rick Powers' mother, Claire, was the overall high individual of the 1957 show and a member of the Sutton County 4-H judging team that was the overall high team in 1958.

Team coaches included four former Sutton County 4-H Club overall high team judges in the show. They include Corky Schwiening, a member of the 1949 team; Diana Baggett, a member of the 1962 team, and Turney Friess and Claire Powers.

The continued support of former 4-H members as trained adult 4-H leaders in Sutton County is greatly appreciated and should aid in expanding the 4-H program to include more boys and girls in 4-H activities.

64 Weeks Older, 220 Pounds Slimmer

by Shirley Hill

No fads, miracle drugs, or strenuous exercises involved... just a matter of eating the right foods and the right amounts were involved in a weight loss of 220 pounds during a period of 64 weeks.

After being overweight for most of his life, Royce Mears on July 2 reached his weight goal with the Weight Watchers' Club and was awarded a pair of cuff links in ceremonies held to celebrate his 64 weeks of 'sticking with it'.

Royce, who graduated from Sonora High School in 1968, where he played tackle for the Bronco football team, stated that during these 64 weeks of dieting he could truthfully say that he had never felt hungry and would strongly recommend the weight watchers' diet to anyone desiring to lose weight.

But, Royce added...one must really have a desire to lose and must make up their mind entirely before beginning in order to really reach the goal they desire.

Beginning with his recommended weight goal, Royce now enters into a new segment of the club's dieting plan... maintenance...which means that he may now begin eating things his diet has not allowed before. Royce said he would now be able to try luncheon meats and pies, just to name a few. With each week of adding a new food to his diet, Royce must weigh in and if the new food has caused a weight gain, these will be the foods that he will have to avoid, probably for the rest of his life. But Royce quickly added that he had no intention of gaining his weight back. After his eight weeks of maintenance, he will become a lifetime member and will have to attend only one meeting per month. Prior to this Royce had attended a meeting each week, where upon he was weighed in and his weight loss or gain recorded by a fellow clubmember.

During the time since joining the club in April of 1973, (at which time he weighed 410 pounds) Royce lost on the average of 3 1/2 pounds weekly. At one time during his early weight loss period he lost a total of 12 1/2 pounds. His mother, Mrs. Freeman (Irene) Mears, joined the club at the same time Royce did, and some time ago reached her weight goal and is now a member of the lifetime club.

Royce said that the diet for weight watchers was not one of those starvation diets, it was just a matter of eating the right foods. The ex-football tackle said he was never much of a vegetable eater although his mother always had them on the table at mealtimes. Meat, bread and gravy, and potatoes were his mainstay. The weight watching club changed his eating habits quite a bit and along with many vegetables, he was able to have four pieces of bread daily, raw fruits and vegetables, in addition to his meats, eggs and as he put it "nearly everything you normally eat."

Royce denied the cravings for anything in particular during his 64 week dieting stint, but did add that a cake or pie sitting around the house had from time to time been somewhat of a temptation. But you can surely tell from looking at Royce that he hasn't ventured too far away from his diet.

Royce Mears, a member of Weight Watcher's Club lost a total of 220 pounds during 64 weeks of dieting. He was awarded a pair of cuff links by the club for his efforts. His mother, Mrs. Freeman (Irene) Mears, joined the club at the same time and has recently attained her weight loss.

News Letter

By O. C. Fisher

Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA), the scourge of small businessmen and farmers, would by a House amendment adopted last week be prohibited from inspecting firms with fewer than 25 employees.

But the amendment was adopted by a narrow margin of 190 to 182. It was attached to the big multi-billion-dollar HEW-Labor appropriation bill, and will soon be considered by the Senate where in the past Labor-oriented pro-OSHA sentiment has predominated. Therefore, it appears quite likely that our achievement in the House will be short lived.

OSHA was enacted in 1971 under the sponsorship of AFL-CIO. In Texas, which had an on-going health and safety law, the federal law was totally unnecessary. I was one of those who voted against it, and during the three years that followed, my judgment has been more than vindicated.

This law has become a bureaucratic monster. It gives the agency (labor department) virtual life or death control over those covered. While many can satisfy OSHA's hundreds of safety and health regulations, many find it next to impossible due to excessive conversion costs. And the Congress gave OSHA inspectors the right to invade premises, make compliance decisions on the spot and apply fines of up to $10,000 for violations.

A San Angelo supply and warehouseman recently informed me that although there has not been an accident of any type in his business in 20 years, OSHA imposed conversion orders the cost of which would require him to close.

Some of the OSHA safety and health standards are utterly ridiculous. For example, an Atlanta firm was fined by an OSHA inspector for having ice in ice water! Another regulation requires split toilet seats rather than round toilet seats, two bath facilities in each business where men and women are employed, including the mom and pop establishments.

Probably never in American history has so much power been delegated by the Congress to a federal bureau. Under it the inspector becomes the investigator, the policeman, and the judge...with little right of appeal or review.

Anything Is Possible

To look at it, you wouldn't expect great things from the krill. The microscopic creature spends its days floating aimlessly about the ocean depths. Yet viewed in large numbers, this member of the plankton family is crucial to the marine food chain. We are much like the krill. We drift along life's byways, often passing up chances to help change the world around us because it seems one person's actions are unimportant. How wrong that supposition is!

Each of us is part of a whole which, in our case, is the United States of America. Individually, we may not be able to rock the world, but multiply our efforts by the millions, and we can make history. Now we are approaching the 200-year mark in the epic of our national existence and attempts to enhance and further the American way of life must continue or the world structure, which depends upon U.S. leadership to keep the interchange of goods and ideas flowing, may very well crumble. Do not think for one moment that you are unimportant. The fate of future generations virtually rests in your hands.

Who's To Pay For Health Care

Before cheering too loudly at the prospect of passage of a National Health Insurance program, the tax-burdened public should realize one thing. No matter what political sleight-of-hand techniques are used to obscure the true costs of medical care, those costs must, in the end, be paid by consumers and taxpayers.

The Charleston, South Carolina Post has analyzed the $40 billion-a-year National Health Insurance program proposed by the administration. The plan provides that no family would have to pay more than $1,600 per year for medical expenses... at first blush an apparent bargain. The Post then goes on, "As Secretary Weinberger explains the measure, employers would pay 75 percent of the estimated $320 annual premium. Employees would pay the rest." The catch is the illusion that employers will be paying the lion's share of the cost. Commerce Secretary Frederick B. Dent warns that 75 percent "contribution" to the health plan on the part of employers would be too costly for businessmen. In the words of the Post, "employers already face possible increases in costs of unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation benefits and pension plan reforms. They also are bracing themselves for increases in Social Security taxes, minimum wage requirements and new costs for safety standards...Employers do not have printing presses in their basements on which to turn out money to meet those taxes and bills. Any added costs of doing business imposed on them by the government must come out of profits. Added costs often pose the choice between going out of business or raising prices. 'Employers', in short, would not pay 75 percent of the insurance plan's cost...The cost will be paid one way or another by the nation's consumers."

There is no way under the sun of achieving free or cheap medical care anymore than the prices of groceries can be returned to a preinflation era. Acceptance of this irrevocable fact would do much to clear the way for reasonable and sound improvements in the nation's health care system.

Savannah in June is still hot, Charleston is a little cooler, Atlanta a real scorcher with 96 degrees F and a relative humidity in the high 80's. A man's natural air conditioning system works like a shower...not much cooling, but plenty of moisture. They are interesting cities, but somehow in the summer San Francisco has a certain endearment in the temperature area.
Another series of observations on the trip indicates that the gasoline prices and to a greater degree the 55 mph speed limit are imposing a sociological change. The upper middle class, it seems, instead of driving their gasoline gulping limousines down a thousand miles of asphalt show an increased tendency to fly to their destination and rent a puddle jumper for local excursions.
A lot has been said about the "Ugly American" with somewhat isolated specimens as justification. Observing and talking to Americans and comparing them to the peoples I have met, it can hardly be said that they are diplomatic, but they are interesting, and out of their environment rather overt and direct. I have, for example, never seen such a fine analysis as that made by a 15 year old Georgian of the spread of pot smoking through her peer group in a conservative Georgia high school. She was so articulate and precise that one listened with assurance, that regardless of how badly my generation "blew" it, there is hope in the coming generation.

Viewpoint

by T. Driskell

After a two week absence some of the readers indubitably thought this column was gone, with the resulting varying degrees of glee. No such luck, just like athlete's foot and income tax it is still here, occasionally subject to the summertime "lazies".

For five days week before last, I made like a rich man's wife; you know, spending the heck out of somebody else's money, without knowing, or caring, from whence, nor how, it came. I attended two auctions and made selected bids on several clocks. It was highly educational, but a little scary. One clock was purchased at considerably higher cost than the original estimate. Apparently my contact with antiques was a long way out of date. It left me slack-jawed, agape as it were, to see brass candlesticks going at $100 to $127 a pair and a blue Meissen fruit stand for $495. A Chippendale dining table and chairs (which smelled Edwardian to me) fell under the hammer for $9,400. The auctions, to put it mildly were no places for casual collectors.

Reconsideration, however, leads to the conclusion that there are a lot of people with vast amounts of money who're betting on the collapse of the American dollar and want to convert surplus funds into goods which have a possibility of value increase. The same is true of houses...it is a lucrative business to buy an old wrecked worn out mansion, restore it and sell it, a real joy to hobby carpenters. It is somewhat humorous to see a successful trial lawyer jacking up beams to level the floor of a pre-war (Civil war that is) wreck. Maybe the English are right when they assert, "You can sell anything to an American," anyway Americans are proving it.

The upper middle class, it seems, instead of driving their gasoline gulping limousines down a thousand miles of asphalt show an increased tendency to fly to their destination and rent a puddle jumper for local excursions.

The Devil's River Philosopher Sez.....

Major Cities Asking For Funds To Pay For Transit Systems

Editor's note: The Devil's River Philosopher on his bitterweed ranch on the Dry Devil's River tries to come to the rescue of the big cities this week, we think.

Dear editor:
The mayors of the major big cities in the U.S., according to an article I read in a newspaper yesterday are asking the Federal Government for 18 billion dollars to help pay for mass transit systems.

Their argument is that automobiles are choking the cities, that modern subways and other mass transit systems are needed if cities are going to continue to function, and that the cost of building and operating the system is too great for any city to bear.

Now at first thought you might ask, why should somebody living on a place like this bitterweed ranch out here have to help pay for a big city's subway system? If Boston or New York or Los Angeles people for example haven't got the ability to operate their cities, let them close them down.

Then I got to thinking further. You shut down the big cities and what's going to happen? The people will spread out and ruin the countryside. It's the last thing I'd want to see happen. It's bad enough with all the bottles and beer cans we have to contend with, but you add people too and the countryside is gone.

Up to now, by some crafty propoganda, we country people have managed to keep most of the population cooped up in big cities where everybody thought all the advantages were, and if it takes an extra tax on this bitterweed ranch to keep them from catching on and breaking out, I'm willing to pay it.

Furthermore, if us country people are on our toes we'll start a campaign to keep cities from spreading out. Look at nearly any big city and you'll see rows and rows of houses about three feet apart going up on the outskirts and extending further and further out in the country. Those houses ought to be stacked on top of each other back inside the city limits. I'm not interested in paying for a subway system that goes all over creation.

By the way, a developer came by the other day asking if I'd be interested in selling my farm. Said it'd make a good sub-division. I'm waiting to see what his offer is.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

-It's a great kindness to trust people with a secret. They feel so important when they tell it.

-An optimist is a husband who goes down to the marriage license bureau to see if his license has expired.

-A clever motorist figured out a way to avoid getting parking tickets. He removed the windshield wipers from his car.

-The heaviest thing a person can carry is a grudge.

-Counting calories has become for a lot of people a weigh of life.

-A bath mat is a little rug that children like to stand beside.

-Some families think the Sunday morning church service is like a convention. Each sends a delegate.

-Push buttons have taken the place of all kinds of cranks, except human ones.

-A vision at dinner is often a sight at breakfast.

-Nobody who can read is ever successful at cleaning out attics.

-Mary had a little lamb, her father shot it dead, and now it goes to school with her between two chunks of bread.

Johnny: "How will you do that?"
Coach: "I'll let you sit at the end of the bench, guard the water bucket, and tackle anybody who gets close to it."

TAYLORS RETURN HOME AFTER THREE WEEK TRIP

Mr. and Mrs. Cashes Taylor, Mrs. J.H. Emmons and Miss Roberta Finklea have recently returned from a three week vacation where they visited Mrs. Verna Mae Reynolds, Mrs. Taylor's sister, and her family in Portland, Oregon. While there Mrs. Emmons and Miss Finklea visited their aunt, Mrs. Gertrude Rushing and daughter, Miss Marion Rushing.

Miss Rushing served as hostess and guide to the group on tour of many points of interest including the Rose Festival at Portland, the Parade of Bonds, and the Cannon Beach on the Pacific Coast. From there the group continued to Seattle, Washington and then to Victoria, B.C. and saw the Butchart Gardens, Bonnaville Dam Fish Ladders on the Columbia River, and then traveled by ferry to Vancouver, B.C. in Canada. There they dined at the Olde English Inn and saw the replica of Shakespeare's home and the home where his wife resided.

The group returned home by plane from Seattle.

KEEPING IN STEP

You don't have to be "square" to go to church. The image of dour individuals with "holier-than-thou" attitudes is as old fashioned today as people dancing the minuet.

Take the Adamses, for example. They aren't youngsters, to be sure, but they are very much in step with the times, and their home is a haven for teenagers. Mr. Adams is a lawyer, who works with kids who have been in trouble. Mrs. Adams is on the local school committee and also helps the Girl Scouts.

The Adamses like to walk to church each Sunday and to discuss the sermon on the way home. Their minister is "with it" too—he strives to counsel his parishioners on the dilemmas that confront Christians today.

The Adamses, their minister, their church—all a part of today.

Are you?

in entering the contest has been shown from Abilene and the surrounding counties during the past few weeks and the necessary information for entrants will be available with the entry forms. Local entry deadline is August 10.

Miss Teenage Abilene is open to all girls between the ages of 13 and 17 who are in good scholastic standing. The Miss Teenage Abilene competition includes girls from 26 counties in the local area.

Screwworms in 71 Counties

The 628 confirmed screwworm infestations in Texas livestock last month came from 71 counties, reported Dr. M.E. Meadows, director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Screwworm Eradication Program.

Several counties in the Hill Country regions...Edwards, Hays, Williamson, San Saba, Menard, Upton and Crane...and Reeves in the Big Bend region, marked their first 1974 cases of the livestock pest in June.

June's total of 628 cases of the live flesh eating larvae in wounds in Texas livestock compares to 145 the same month last year, and 15,889 in June of 1972. Texas recorded 1,500 confirmed screwworm cases the first six months of this year, compared to 284 for the first half of 1973 and 21,097 the first half of 1972.

"Screwworms got an early start this year due to the mild winter," says Meadows, "but relatively dry spring and early summer weather is helping the screwworm program keep case numbers relatively low in many parts of Texas." Webb County, for example, with 148 cases the first half of the year, only recorded 22 cases in June.

The female screwworm fly mates only once in her lifetime. The Screwworm Eradication Program releases sterile flies in the area of known screwworm infestations. If a female mates with a sterile male, any eggs she produces will not hatch, thus ending the life cycle.

A Bishop Looks at Life

by Everett H. Jones, Retired Bishop of the Episcopal Church APPLIED CHRISTIANITY

One of my favorite teachers when I attended the old Main Avenue High School in San Antonio was the late Dr. Walter Prescott Webb. He later became a distinguished professor at the University of Texas and the author of several well-known books. As a boy Walter Webb lived in a small Texas town. One day in 1904 he wrote a letter to a paper called the Sunny South saying he wanted to be a writer and to get an education. He mentioned that his father was a teacher and had been crippled in an accident.

An answer to this letter came from a man named William E. Hines of Brooklyn, N.Y., offering to send him books and magazines, and later this man loaned him enough money to get thru college...Dr. Webb never saw him and a few years later he died.

But Dr. Webb never forgot. A few years before his own death he wrote an article in Harper's Magazine entitled "The Search for William E. Hines". It began as follows: "For more than fifty years now...since May 1904...I have been searching for a man I never saw. Though he died forty-five years ago, the search grows more intensive as I approach inevitably the time when I can no longer pursue it. "The reason I continue this search is that I owe this man a great debt. It would mean a lot to me if I could report to him how a long shot investment he made in Texas finally turned out."

"Since I cannot report to William E. Hines, I am doing the next best thing by reporting to other people...in hopes that at least some of them may be enriched by the spirit that animated this man. I think this would please him. Once when I tried to express my appreciation, he wrote:

"You cannot do anything for me, but because I help you now, perhaps in time you can help someone else!

"This is the nearest thing to applied Christianity that I know.

Coin Drive Nears Close

The South/Central Texas Chapter of the Leukemia Society of America, Inc., and Joe Namath of the New York Jets, have expressed sincere appreciation to the citizens of our city for its generous support of the Society's programs of research, patient-aid, and education, by their contributions to the coin board fund raising drive.

The chapter office, located in San Antonio, urges any retail establishments who have not as yet returned their coin board collections, or sent their personal contributions, to do so.

Due to the success of the coin boards, as well as other fund raising projects carried out, the National Leukemia Society will be putting $1.6 million into Leukemia research this year.

Anyone interested in further information about the society's programs may contact the chapter office at 106 Broadway in San Antonio.
