Amoco Plans To Drill 140 Wells In SW Texas

Amoco Production Company presently has plans to drill some 140 wells this year on the 650,000 acres it is exploring in a six-county area in Southwestern Texas, John Phenicie, Amoco vice president and Houston division manager, announced today.

The wells will be drilled in an area which encompasses Sutton, Schleicher, Crockett, Edwards, Val Verde, and Terrell Counties and which today comprises one of the most active natural gas exploration and development areas in the country. According to Phenicie, Amoco presently has six rigs working in the area with the capability of drilling 20 wells every 45 days, on the average. Phenicie says that Amoco, the U.S. exploration and production subsidiary of Standard Oil Company (Indiana), had drilled a total of 187 wells in the area by the end of 1975. Of these wells, 147 were commercial, a success ratio of 79 per cent, which is substantially better than the industry's national average. Production from 84 of the commercial wells which were connected to sales ranged up to a total of 50 million cubic feet of gas daily at the end of 1975.

Production from the Amoco wells will be routed through a 50 per cent, Amoco-owned processing plant slated for completion near Sonora, later this year. When operating at full capacity, the plant will process up to 90 million cubic feet of gas and recover some 7,300 barrels of liquids per

The history and the future of the large Amoco project in Southwestern Texas are detailed in the most recent issue of "Span" magazine, Standard Oil's stockholder publication, now in the mail to the company's stockholders and employees worldwide. In an article entitled "Ozona--Sonora", "Span" says that the pace of activity is likely to increase during the next several years in the sixcounty area which is roughly 10,500 square miles and the size of Maryland. According to the article, between 1960 and 1963, fewer than 15 wells a year were drilled in the Ozona--Sonora area. In the late 60's and early 70's, "Span" says, this increased to about 50 a year. But in 1975, some 540 wells were put down by the industry in the area.

The "Span" article says that the reason for the dramatic increase in drilling in the area was due to increased prices producers were receiving for natural gas sold intrastate--that is, gas produced and sold in Texas as opposed to interstate gas that is price-controlled by the federal government.

"Although the gas-producng potential of the area had been known for years, the ndustry shied away from making the financial investment necessary to develop the area," Phenicie says. An increase in the price of gas produced in Texas for Texas markets was needed because wells in the Ozona-Sonora area are normally ow-volume producers and, at old prices would have been uneconomical.

"However, the price of gas produced and sold within Texas began to rise and Amoco decided to take the risk," Phenicie says. Amoco started leasing acreage in the area in October, 1971, and drilling began in early 1973. The company recently opened a new sub-area office in Sonora to house company personnel directly involved in Amoco's drilling and producion operations in the vicinity.

The Ozona-Sonora play is another example of how price ncentives can convert formerly uneconomic hydrocarbon deposits into profitable and valuable additions of new reserves," Phenicie says. 'We're only in the early development phases, but we've already proven the existence of major gas eserves which have the potential to develop into the 'giant' reserve category, given a favorable economic climate."

But at the same time, Phenicie cautions, "Projects like this are risky. We're spending our money and manpower today with the hope that in the near future our efforts will pay off financially through the necessary higher prices. If the incentive of higher prices is taken away, it would have a Five to seven cases of overaged, leaking dynamite were uncovered recently at N. D. Noel's Fort Terrett Ranch. The local sheriff's office was notified of the find and the 47th Ordinance Detachment's Explosive Disposal Unit in Fort Hood was called in.

On February 26 three explosive demolition experts, accompanied by two pilots and a crew chief, landed at the local airport in a Bell troop carrier helicopter.

Deputy Sheriff Mack West met the crew and drove them to the Fort Terrett Ranch, located several miles east of Sonora, to dispose of the explosives.

Ordinance detachment per-

Many items on their disposal list were, they stated, war souvenirs brought home or sent home by G.I.'s of past wars.

THE DEVIL'S RIVER PHILOSOPHER SEZ.....

Nobody's Figured Out How To Meter Solar Energy

River Philosopher on his bitterweed ranch on the Dry Devil's River takes a peculiar look at solar energy this

Dear Editor:

A lot of people are wondering why we haven't made more progress on solar energy, and I think I know the answer.

Here's the situation: It's no doubt true the greatest source of heat in the entire universe is the sun. We talk about oil playing out and it's true--eventually the earth is going to run dry of oil, man is going to pump it all out and the Arab sheiks will have to go back to raising camels. But the sun, it's always there, and if it plays out, that's all she wrote anyway. Now man has already discovered that you can heat a house, warm your bath water and cool off in summer with solar energy. With a little more investment, say the price of one aircraft carrier or two sessions of Congress, solar energy could be perfected and become as commonplace as electricity or gas or running water.

But there's one scientific hitch that's holding the whole program up. Nobody's figenergy.

On the next clear day go outside and look around. See that sunshine splattered all over everything? How are you going to get it to go through a meter? And if you can't get it to go through a meter, how're you going to charge for it?

Like it is, a man might go up on the roof of his house, capture the sun's rays and heat his home scot free. You know the economy is not going to stand for that.

Unless science can figure out a way to run solar heat through a meter, who's going to be interested in perfecting the stuff? Might as well try to charge for the use of gravity.

The only way I can figure out to get solar energy readily available to everybody is to lease the sun to a small

Editor's note: The Devil's | group of far-sighted people and let them charge royalty on every sunbeam that reaches the earth, with rates adjusted to see that the company gets fair compensation on cloudy days.

Yours faithfully,

More than 180,000 cows have been enrolled in TPR by some 1,200 Hereford breeders as a means to more accurately determine those individuals which excel in the economically important traits. The traits measured, re-

Cotton Crops Take Big Jump

Cotton acreage should take big jump in Texas this year, contends a cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has projected a 10 per cent increase in the cotton crop--a half million more acres than last year's crop of 4.3 million acres. However, total plantings could move as high as five million acres if sorghum and soybean prices soften before planting starts.

Cotton acreage should double in the Rio Grande Valley over 1975 plantings. Large increases are also expected in the Coastal Bend and in the Central Texas Blacklands. Nationwide, cotton acreage should increase about 17 per cent over 1975

selecting a channel for your station, it is very important that the following factors be considered:

a. There are a total of 23 channels available to all CB stations on a shared basis:

b. Channel 11 may be used only for calling purposes (i.e. to establish initial contact for the purpose of moving to one of the other 22 channels); c. Channel 9 may be used only for communications involving immediate or potential emergency situations and/or assistance motorists; d. You may select any of the remaining 21 channels to conduct your normal personal or business radio communications. e. To prevent unintentional

'bleedover'' interference to Channels 9 and 11, the FCC recommends that all transmissions involving highway travelers be conducted on a channel other than Channel 10, preferably one of several channels removed from Channels 9 or 11.

2. Channel Usage Cooperate with all CBers to the fullest extent possible in sharing the CB channels-always try to be courteous and considerate when using a channel. In order to assure that all CB operators will have an equal opportunity to use the frequencies, radio communications between CB stations (interstation) must be limited to no longer than 5 continuous minutes to be followed by a silent period of at least one minute. Every CBer should restrict their time on the air to a practical minimum. We can not stress enough the importance for all CBers to discipline themselves from needlessly transmitting for long periods of time.

3. Identification - Identify your radio transmissions with our own FCC issued call sign before and after each transmission. This call sign is unique in that it is unlike any other CB radio station call

1. Channel Selection - In sign. Be proud to identify your radio transmissions with it. "Nicknames" or "handles" may also be used to identify your radio transmissions provided they are accompanied by the FCC assigned call sign. It is not necessary to transmit the call sign of the station with whom you are talking. 4. Equipment - Have frequency, power and modulation measurements made at regular intervals. Do not tamper with the equipment. A licensed commercial operator is required for any adjustments that might affect the proper operation of the

5. Keep Informed - You may obtain the FCC Rules and Regulations (Volume VI, Part 95) governing the Citizens Radio Service (for $5.35) from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. Copies of these Rules are also available at many radio equipment stores at a nominal cost.

6. Promote "Good CB Practice" - Encourage other CB users to follow the above suggested practices.

If all CB users make a serious attempt to understand and follow the above recommended practices, we believe efficient utilization of the 23 shared CB channels will be naximized.

It seems worthwhile, then, to describe the meaning of the vote on the debt ceiling. Congress has for years been adding to the national debt. This means that the federal government has been spending more money that it takes in, and has thereby been borrowing from future generations, putting them in debt, to pay expenses for the goods and services which the government provides daily at the expense of those who many of us have tried hard to turn around by voting against large spending bills, by voting against tax cuts that lessen government revenues, and by trying to restore strength to a free enterprise system. Nonetheless, the national debt has increased, and has thereby added to the inflationary pressures on our economy. At some point in the process of adding to the national debt, a law was established to set a debt ceiling. The debt ceiling quickly became a meaningless item, however, because the Congress has continued to raise the debt ceiling as it has continued to spend more than it has taken in. The debt ceiling became, therefore, simply a symbol. It served no real purpose, it has no real effect, and therefore the whole matter of raising or lowering the debt ceiling became a regular example of fruitless enterprise.

The problem is that the vote on the debt ceiling comes after spending bills have already been authorized. Therefore, the decision to spend the money has already been made. The vote on the debt ceiling is simply a vote on whether or not the government will pay its bills. If the debt ceiling is not raised, social security cannot be paid, government employees do not receive their checks, our servicemen receive no salary, anyone doing business with the government cannot collect on his debts. If the debt ceiling is not raised, the government is placed in the position of being in legal bankruptcy for it cannot pay its debts. Obviously, this cannot be allowed to happen. A vote against raising the debt ceiling is similar to a company's decision, after it has already acquired goods and services, not to pay its bills. Of all the bad things that the federal government does. I would hate to be a party to the notion that our government would not pay its

As Mr. Ullman, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said in debate, 'No vote against this limitation will save one dollar in spending. The funds needed for the limitation here are irretrievably beyond our recall. The only effect of voting down this limitation is to require a reconsideration of it in the very near future. Congress in the last analysis, knows that it must meet the financial debts that it is already obligated to. The only result of voting against the debt limitation is to bring about chaos in the financial markets and force the Freasury to expensive and questionable debt techniques which in the long run will cost the taxpayer more."

It is the easiest sort of political demagogy for some people to say that they have voted for fiscal responsibility by voting against raising the debt limit, but that position is irresponsible and lacks honesty. A review of many of the names of those who voted against lifting the debt ceiling will show some who are genuinely fiscally responsible, but reveals many more who vote for every spending bill that comes along and then turn around and vote against paying the bills. This is not the sort of example the government of the United States or its Congress should set for its citizens.

by Rodger McKown Texas Parks & Wildlife Department

Every West Texas fishernan is well familiar with the malady known as "fishing fever." While it's not a real illness, fishermen know that a case of this fever can cause real discomfort.

There is only one known cure for fishing fever. That is to go fishing.

Unfortunately, there usually is a period of time before the fisherman can get away to take the cure, especially in dry West Texas where we have to travel farther to do our fishing. And there is no guarantee that the cure will last more than a couple of days after the fisherman returns home. Often the malady comes right back.

While there is nothing to take the place of the fishing-trip-cure, some fishermen have come up with a way of easing the discomfort until they can get back on the water. For most who use this method, there are several advantages. Not only does it ease the discomfort, but it makes the next trip more enjoyable and it can even save a little money.

The method is to develop a ishing-related hobby to occupy spare time at home during those periods when it is mpossible to get out and go fishing. In other words, join the do-it-yourself group of fishermen who make their own fishing lures.

Making certain types of ures at home is not difficult. It is a lot of fun. The fishermen who make their own lures say they get a lot more enjoyment out of catching a fish on a lure they made, than on a store-bought model. And finally, the fisherman who purchases the parts and puts together his own lures gets them a little cheaper than the one who buys all factory-made models. Two of the easiest lures to make at home are two of the most effective on Texas' most popular freshwater game fish, the largemouth bass. Those lures are the plastic worm and the weighted spinner, known by most bass fishermen as the "spinnerbait."

It doesn't take much to get started making either of those lures. The plastic worms are made by heating a liquid plastic, adding the desired color to the molten liquid and pouring it into a mold. All that is needed is the plastic, a couple of small, aluminum pouring pans, some molds and a few bottles of the concentrated liquid color.

An advantage to making plastic worms is that the fisherman can come up with his own color combinations, that can't be purchased on the market. And many fishermen are soon making their own molds so they can design their own special shaped worms.

It's a hobby, like most, that grows and expands with time. Some who make spinners, purchase the unpainted lead heads already molded on hooks and shafts. Others like to start from scratch and get a mold to make their own

The Devil's River News, Sonora, Texas Thursday, March 4, 1976 Page 5

Once the heads are molded and painted, the next step is to add beads, swivels and spinner blades. A plastic skirt is usually added to cover the hook. But some real custom spinners can be produced by dressing the hooks with bucktail or feathers.

Again, the homemade spinnerbaits give the fisherman a lot of latitude to come up with designs and color combinations that can't be bought from the sporting goods shelves. Half the fun is trying to come up with your own special lure that will catch fish.

If your local sporting goods store doesn't handle supplies and equipment for the do-it-yourself lure maker, there are a number of mail-order firms that specialize in these supplies. Addresses for ording their catalogs can usually be found in the classified sections of the outdoor magazines.

Get some supplies and give lure-making a try. It's a good way to get added enjoyment from fishing.

But before you take off to ry out that first batch of homemade lures, be sure vou are familiar with the fishing regulations in the "Guide to Texas Hunting and Sport Fishing Regulations, 1975-76" that is printed by the Parks and Wildlife Department.

And be sure that your fishing license is current. Remember, fishing licenses now expire one year from date of purchase in Texas.

A FLAG OF LIBERTY

General Washington, when the Star-Spangled Banner was first flown, is said to have described its symbolism as follows, according to the U.S. Marine Corps Reserve: "We take the stars from heaven, the red from our mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her, and the white stripes shall go down to posterity representing liberty.

Veterans Land Program Bonds, Not Immediate Program Re-opening

Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong emphasized recently that the decision to sell new bonds for the Veterans Land Program does not mean the immediate reopening of the program.

"The Veterans Land Board today has decided to go the bond market the first week in April if conditions are favorable. However this does not necessarily mean we will begin taking new applications as soon as new bonds are sold," Armstrong said.

"We still have to work through this backlog of 3,721 applications on hand before we can reopen the program to new applicants. Existing applications will use more than the available money we have on hand. The sale will let us handle all of the existing applicants plus about 300 more. If the sale is successful and we can get to market again in the fall then we will be able to open up the program to new applicants."

Armstrong said he did not anticipate beginning taking new applications for loans under the program until at least mid-summer of 1976. Armstrong explained that inless the processing most of the applications on hand is completed before the program reopens, new delays will await veterans who may apply for loans. Acceptance of new applicaions for veterans' real estate oans under the programs was temporarily suspended December 31, 1975. Bond money available for loans had been committed more quickly than anticipated because of an unexpected flood of applications.

More than 1,700 applicaions were received during he month of December alone.

Armstrong said that more han 500 loans had been closed during the six weeks the program has been suspended and that his staff s increasing its percentage of closings each week.

"I am proud of the staff's efficiency in processing the packlog," Armstrong said, But until the backlog is educed substantially, it won't be possible to take new applications. We will do so just as soon as possible."

Candidates May Violate Law By Erecting Campaign Signs

Candidates for political office may violate the law if they erect campaign signs on some private property.

Candidates or their campaign managers are urged to contact Supervising Right-of-Way Engineer, Franklin Jordan, of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for further information if they are considering erecting campaign signs. Jordan may be reached at the District 7 offices near the intersection of Knickerbocker Road and Loop 306, telephone number 944-1501, mailing address P.O. Box 1841, San Angelo, ways. Anyone desiring to erect a new sign must have a State license to engage in outdoor advertising and a permit for each sign. The law does not apply to Farm to Market Roads.

Existing signs may be epainted or repapered; however, they may not be enlarged nor may lighting be added unless approved by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation or the city which issued the sign permit. Subject to city ordinances, signs may be erected in front of stores or homes used as campaign neadquarters.

No signs except official raffic control signs are permitted within the rightsof-way of State highways. Maintenance crews will remove any signs not conforming to State law.

Agent Warns Against Insects

Before planting your vegetable garden this year, take precautions against harmful insects, advises Clint Langford, county agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension

Wireworms, white grubs, mole crickets, cutworms, flea beetle larvae, fly larvae and maggots are among the insects that feed on the seeds, roots and other underground parts of vege-

Langford says that areas which have been in sod for over two years, that have had the same crops every year, or areas that have large amounts of organic matter are most susceptible to soil

"It's important to use the right kind of insecticide on your garden," stresses the county agent. "Many insecticides may be harmful to certain vegetables and only a few can be used safely."

Diazinon and chlordane are two commonly used insecticides that are safe for gardens. However, root crops should not be planted in soil treated with chlordane.

Apply the insecticide about two to four weeks before the garden is to be planted, says Langford. Work the insecticide into the top four to six inches of soil and make sure it is evenly distributed.

To cover 1,000 square feet of soil with diazinon, use six fluid ounces of 25 per cent emulsifiable concentrate, says the county agent. Mix it with enough water to cover the entire soil area. If you use powder, use ½ cup of 50 per cent wettable powder mixed with adequate water.

To cover 1,000 square feet of garden area with chlordane, use two fluid ounces of 72 per cent emulsifiable concentrate mixed with water of 3/4 cup of 40 per cent wettable powder mixed with
