Screwworms Invade 30 More Counties In June

Screwworms moved into 30 more Texas counties during June as 2,305 infestations were recorded in 102 counties, says Dr. M.E. Cotton Meadows, Jr., director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Screwworm Eradication Program.

The parasite has been recorded in almost all Edwards Plateau and Hill Country counties. A total of 21 cases have been confirmed in Sutton County. They are steadily moving northward into Plains County, observes Meadows. To date Armstrong is the most northerly county to submit a positive sample.

In all, 110 Texas counties have tallied 4,274 lab identified cases of this parasite of warm blooded animals for the year. This compares to 1,744 the first half of last year, and 21,097 for the same portion of 1972.

Seventeen counties in the region counted their first 1976 case in June. They are Lampasas, Mills, Brown, Reagan, Upton, Crane, Midland, Ward, Nolan, Callahan, Dawson, Borden, Fisher, Lynn, Garza, Stonewall, and Armstrong.

Arizona has recorded 42 screwworm cases in nine counties this year. New Mexico's cases total 22 from six counties.

Revenue Funds Received For 21st District

The 21st District of Texas has received $34,806,777 since January, 1972 in revenue sharing funds according to Congressman Bob Krueger (D-Tx). The most recent quarterly payment (effective July 6, 1976) totals $2,053,251.

"I have supported the revenue sharing program," Krueger said, "precisely because of the amount of money that has been returned to Texas through the program. I would personally prefer that these monies be raised and spent at the local level," he added, "but I find it hard to believe that the federal government would reduce its spending by an amount equal to revenue sharing payments in order to make that type of shift possible."

The House of Representatives recently approved an extension of the federal revenue sharing program.

"That approval was crucial," Krueger said, "unless we were willing to increase taxes at the state or local level."

Mrs. J.F. Howell and Mrs. Manilla Trainer enjoy barbecue and all the trimmings.

A Bishop Looks at Life

By Everett H. Jones, Retired Bishop Of the Episcopal Church
WE ARE STILL UNFINISHED BUSINESS
As we come to the climax of our Bicentennial Year, this column will spend six weeks commenting on notable words by notable Americans in the course of our history.

My hope is that this series will help us, in some small way, to see anew the meaning of America, to recognize where we have lost our way, and to get back on course.
To begin with I quote

some words of Dr. Benjamin Rush written in 1787. (Rush was a distinguished American physician, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, and for a time the surgeon general of the Continental Army.)

He said: "The American war is over, but this is far from the case with the American Revolution. On the contrary, nothing but the first act of the great drama is closed."

There are two all-important insights in these statements. The first is that the American experiment (Rush called it "the great drama") is still going on. The world is still watching to see if people can be given maximum freedom and still govern themselves. There are those who have doubts and they have turned to various forms of dictatorship and autocracy. There are others who are hoping that we are right; they want democracy to win out; they want to share the blessings of self-government under officials responsible to the people.

The corollary of this insight is that each one of us is a participant in the drama. We help to decide the issue; we help to determine whether the experiment will be a success or a failure. We do so by our moral character, by our responsible actions as citizens, by our understanding of what democracy demands of us.

The other emphasis in the above statements is that there is always hope. We are still "unfinished business." Our mistakes need not be final or incurable. We can change. We can grow. We can be more than we are. The future is open, not closed.

The message I get is that God has not given up on us even if, at times, we give up on ourselves.

Preventing Crime

With millions of Americans spending their leisure time at choice vacation spots throughout the nation, thousands will fall victims to the casual as well as the professional thief. Losses will reach into the multiple millions and for most victims their individual loss will mean foregoing future excursions, especially if the victim is a senior citizen. After all, most of us can afford to invest moderately only once on recreational equipment. If we lose it to the thief, it will be almost impossible to replace.

There was a time when a family could go on vacation with relative assurance that they would not encounter a thief or vandal. Unfortunately, today's thief goes right along with everyone else. Therefore, we are never really apart from him, even when we are away on a trip. But most of our losses are the result of a basic error in judgement. We feel it necessary to guard our business investments and would never think of leaving our home unprotected, but take unnecessary risk when it comes to camping. It's like saving several years for a well vacation, only to be mugged when we walk out of the bank with the money in our hands. As a very good precaution, you would probably consider turning the cash into traveler's checks before leaving the bank. So why not take some basic steps that would allow you to preserve your personal safety and retain ownership of your valuable property.

We all agree that if we leave the keys in the ignition of our car, our four wheel chariot might be stolen. Yet we give little or no thought to preventing our boat, camper or other recreation vehicle from being towed away. A quick visit to the local R.V. Dealer will be of great value in obtaining special locking devices designed especially for R.V. units. These devices may range in cost from a couple of dollars to a sizable investment but are essential in protecting your equipment.

If your recreation vehicle is made reasonably secure and you leave the hitchhiker hitchhiking, you have only to follow a few basic suggestions in order to have a near perfect vacation: before leaving home, make sure all doors and windows are properly locked with locks that work; then contact your local police or sheriff's department and have them watch your home (most departments will attempt to drive by and check your property once a day while you are on vacation); leave the house key with a good neighbor so they can go inside and re-arrange lighting and curtains. They should also collect any papers, mail and leaflets that begin to accumulate.

As for the trip, don't take more items with you than you need, and after you arrive at your vacation spot and set up camp, don't walk off and leave cameras, portable electronic gear or expensive fishing tackle lying on the picnic table or hanging from a tree limb; when you leave camp, store your valuable gear properly. Be sure all valuables are properly marked with your driver's license number for future identification in case the item is lost or becomes stolen.

Foolish risks are a license for folly. So plan your vacation in advance and follow the rules of good judgement, good sportmanship and common sense.

Police Reports

Police were flooded with reports of fireworks being set off during the weekend. A city ordinance prevents the legal use of fireworks in the city limits of Sonora.

June 30, police answered a call from Monte Kimberling of the Devil's River Motel, who reported that a theft had occurred at the motel.

On June 30, simple assault charges were filed against Virginia Garcia Luna resulting from a fight that occurred at a local grocery store at 8:45 p.m.

Bob Krueger's Weekly Report

"People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to their ancestors," said Edmund Burke two centuries ago. The July 4th weekend has given us as good an opportunity to look backward to our ancestors as any other that we are likely to have. In this backward glance over travelled roads, we observe not a straight and certain course in democracy from the time the Pilgrims and the settling of this continent toward the present day, but rather a road with twists and turns that has not achieved all of its objectives as quickly as we might have hope, but one that has not run into deadends or run off mountain tops to lead its travelers to destruction.

The history of our republic has been one requiring of us an ever enlarging understanding of the meaning of self-government and opportunity. Abe Lincoln in 1864 could say "the present moment finds me in the White House, yet there is as good a chance for your children as there was for my father's to be here in the future." That is still true. Further, our history shows that we began by restricting the right to vote, which is the essence of self-government, to white men who owned property. Gradually, property restrictions were dropped, then sex discrimination was dropped as women were granted the right to vote and later people of all races were granted the franchise.

The opportunity for participation in government has expanded as we have increasingly recognized that self-government is meaningful only if our nation is what our forefathers wished it to be: a land of opportunity for all people. And as the opportunity to vote has been extended, so has our recognition that other opportunities should be open to all our citizens: opportunities for education, for self-improvement, for jobs and personal advancement, and most of all, the opportunity to be the fullest, most productive, and self-fulfilling person possible.

Such ideas can be stated briefly, but they take years to be achieved in this society, for there are always a few people who believe that their own way to the top is maintained only by keeping others down. Nothing could be farther from the truth of our best religious and political traditions, and America has done a better job over the centuries than any other nation in realizing that, as Martin Luther King, Jr. said, "I have a dream that one day this Nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal." Our society is continuing to move toward living out that creed, not always comfortably, not always happily, but nonetheless assuredly. And in that assurance lies happiness and comfort for future years. Therein, as well, lies the hope that the dreams of our founding fathers that this Nation would stand as a symbol of hope and promise to all nations will be fulfilled.

4-H Congress Set July 27-30

What youth has not dreamed of sitting in the legislative chambers in the State Capitol at Austin and actually getting involved in the law-making process?

Well, a host of Texas 4-H members will have that opportunity when they participate in the Texas 4-H Congress in Austin July 27-30. Preston O. Love, Jr., will represent Sutton County 4-H.

Headquarters for the annual Congress will be the Stephen F. Austin Hotel. This year's theme is "We The People..."

The Congress will be highlighted by a tour of the State Capitol Building and actual involvement in presenting a bill before the Texas Legislature, points out Dr. Kenneth Denmark, associate state 4-H and youth leader for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the parent organization of 4-H.

Keynote speakers during the Congress will be Reagan Brown, special assistant to the Governor of Texas, who will speak on "Government of the People..." and State Representative Sarah Weddington of Austin, who will talk on the topic, "We Hold These Truths". A special panel of Secretary of State Mark White, State Senator A.M. Aikin of Paris, and Judge Thomas M. Reavley of the Texas Supreme Court will discuss "Three Pillars of Texas State Government."

To orient the 4-Hers to the legislative process, the delegates will be divided into a senate group and a representative group and
