Olney opens its doors in Sonora

Eleven Texas Thrifts opened their doors on October 17, 1988 as Olney Savings and Loan Association.

The announcement made on October 14, was for FSLIC's Southwest Plan, which is the active recovery plan of the thrift industry in Texas, expected to be completed in mid-1989.

Mr. Alan D. Myers, Jr., chairman and chief executive officer said, "As always, all deposits in Olney Savings and Loan Association are safe--insured under the terms and conditions of FSLIC--with the full faith and credit of the Federal Government."

If any depositor carries more than $100,000, by the combining of these associations, the FSLIC grants a grace period of six months, or up to the first maturity date, for the depositor to work out satisfactory arrangements.

Myers stated, "We are standing by, ready and eager, to answer every question. We invite everyone to call or drop by and see us at any time.

"At Olney Savings and Loan, we never forget that each of our customers chooses us. Every time we get the opportunity to conduct a business transaction it's one more opportunity for us to get to show our customer how much we want their business and how much we appreciate it," Myers commented.

"Olney Savings and Loan will specialize in checking, savings and leading Central and West Texas, serving our customers and each of our communities with a full range of financial services. We are certainly proud to be a Family Financial Center," he said.

"We are committed to providing excellent service and special attention to each one of our customers. We are excited about the opportunity to earn the trust and confidence of each "new" Olney Savings and Loan customer," he concluded.

Following the election, there was a tour of areas that have been treated with a variety of chemicals for brush control. The tour was conducted on land owned by Glen Fisher and Vestal Askew. Following the tour, Dow Chemical sponsored a luncheon at the Sutton County Steakhouse. Slides were shown of other areas in Sutton County that have also been treated with chemicals for brush control and a discussion period was held.

Ward elected to membership

John A. Ward III has been elected to membership in the American Angus Association, reports Dick Spader, executive vice-president of the national organization with headquarters in St. Joseph, Missouri.

The American Angus Association, with over 30,000 active adults and junior members, is the largest beef cattle registry association in the world. Its computerized records include detailed information on nearly eleven million registered Angus.

The Association records ancestral information and keeps records of production on individual animals for its members. These permanent records help members select and mate the best animals in their herds to produce high quality, efficient breeding cattle which are then recorded with the association. Most of the registered Angus are used by the U.S. farmers and ranchers who raise high quality beef for U.S. consumption.

Experiment Station holds Field Day

by Nick Garza

On Tuesday October 18 the Experiment Station, located between Sonora and Rocksprings on highway 55, held a grazing management field day. About 130 person attended the all-day program which included five talks in the morning, a catered lunch and several field tours in the afternoon.

The title for this year's program was "Grazing Management-Integrating Diverse Resources". The speakers highlighted the results of research projects which have been conducted on the Station for the last several years, as well as information compiled by other Experiment Station and Extension Service Personnel. Titles of the talks included, "Managing the Range Resource: Where Do I Start?" by Dr. Larry White; "Deer and Livestock Competition: A New Look" by Dr. Richard Conner; "Range Improvement: When Does it Happen?" by Dr. Fred Smeins; "Grazing Systems: Are They Worth the Trouble?" by Dr. Charles Taylor; and "Flushing Angora Goats: Can it Make a Difference" by Dr. Ed Huston. The morning speakers all discussed information of interest to the producers living in the "Hill Country".

After lunch, the program participants had a chance to visit with the morning speakers as well as tour several locations on the Station property. The stops included a demonstration by Dr. Dale Rollins on building quail feeders and pulling deer jaws for aging deer; a discussion by Terry Brooks on prescribed burning and how it can be used to improve the rangeland, and a demonstration by Nick Garza on how to use photographs to help determine stocking rate. An optional tour was also offered to look at several species of bluestem grasses that had been planted on the Station.

Station personnel were very pleased with the turnout, especially all the people from the local area, and they encourage anyone who may have any additional questions to feel free to call or come by to discuss them. They also would like to announce that all of the talks and presentations will be highlighted in more detail in later issues of this newspaper.

Anyone wanting copies of the field day program should call the Experiment Station at (915) 387-3168.

Wildlife asset to ranching profit

The theme of this years annual meeting of the Texas Section of the Society for Range Management was "Ranching Today-A Way of Life and a Way to Make it Pay". The meeting, held in Kerrville, drew a crowd of 320 people interested in ranching and range management. Seven Texas ranchers spoke of their ranching operations, and how they are attempting to make ranching pay.

According to SCS Biologist, Steve Nelle, five of the seven ranchers described how wildlife is an important part of their ranching enterprise. Capitalizing on the great need that many Americans have for outdoor recreation, these ranchers along with thousands of others realize that proper wildlife management combined with good marketing skills can help make ranching a profitable business.

Rancher Debbie Gillan owner of Slator Ranch in Llano County described how they are producing large-antlered bucks in an area known for its abundant but small deer. The ranch has greatly reduced deer number to the point where native range vegetation is providing the nutritional quality needed to grow big deer. The Slator ranch targets their management to an abundant market-hunters who want big deer, lots of meat at a reasonable price.

Nearby in Bandera County ranchers Paul Garrison is utilizing a supplemental feeding program to have both lots of deer and big deer. Admitting that a feeding program is expensive, Garrison made it clear however that his hunters are making it well worth his labor and expense to hunt on the ranch.

Another Hill Country rancher, Henry Welge in Gillespie County is capitalizing not on big deer, but on lots of deer. It is a well known fact that Welge reaps a handsome return from his hunting enterprise. Welge claims that an important key to his operation is human relations. He spends lots of time with his hunters and provides courteous service to each one, knowing that word-of-mouth advertising of satisfied hunters is the best promotion there is.

According to Nelle, the keys of ranching success that were repeated by most of the speakers were: range management; animal management; and business management. These ranchers are all integrating traditional livestock production with wildlife enterprises to help make ranching not only a desirable way of life but also profitable.

Landowners interested in beginning or improving a wildlife management program are urged to seek the advice of wildlife biologist. Landowner assistance is available through the Soil Conservation Service, Texas Parks and Wildlife, Texas Agricultural Extension Service as well as numerous private biologists.

Some don't like phone hearings

Commissioner

Mary Scott Nabers

Texas Business Today

Dear Commissioner Nabers: I recently had a telephone hearing and the referee would not include in the conference call a witness I had who was located in another city. Why does the Texas Employment Commission refuse to do this when technology has made it possible?

M.T.
Brownsville, Texas

DEAR M.T.: There are two main reasons for refusing to hook up witnesses in multiple locations. First, even if the parties can hear each other, each additional line diminishes the quality of communication for recording purposes. Often times it is hard enough to get a good connection and a good recording from two locations, much less three or four. Second, there is concern that allowing multiple hook-ups would not be fair to parties who are having in person hearings and must arrange for their witnesses to be present at the hearing location. In essence, the same rules which apply to in-person hearings apply to telephone hearings.

DEAR COMMISSIONER NABERS: I just applied for a job and noticed at the bottom of the application that the company is going to run a credit check on me. I went ahead and signed the form but now I'm feeling like I shouldn't have. Is this legal and why should it be any of their business.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

by T. Driskell

The national insomnia cure, alias the Presidential Campaign, drones on with the media attention seeking a new focus and finding it in man's gross misdirection of resources in an attempt to attain a temporary repeal of the one of nature's fundamental laws. The media has reached a conclusion on the insomnia cure; diverting a undue proportion of its attention off Point Barrow, Alaska to the errant whales which nature has sentenced to death.

The approach is the usual light surface one, chosen and orchestrated to create sensationalism and pity. A conversation help with an Eskimo leader in 1970 at Point Barrow led me to believe that every spring thaw reveals the decaying remains from twelve or twenty whales. It would seem that nature has one penalty for whales overstaying the visit to the arctic feeding grounds. Perhaps it is a mechanization to prevent the whale herd population from expanding beyond the ability of their habitat to support them, too bad that man does not have a similar mechanism, or does he? Really, considering that several million species have passed into extinction, one must wonder if we should cast sentiment aside and conduct a realistic investigation of man's likelihood of taking the same trip.

The media, along with their polls have more or less given the election to the Bush-Quayle side of their ticket and seemingly diverted some of the needed attention from it. There is however, one big stone which the best of polls never seem to reach adequately. That unreached segment of the electorate can conceal some real surprises of which the Truman versus Dewey contest and the demise of a national news magazine are examples. It would seem to cast a bright light on the sheer audacity of rapid polls claim of a plus or minus four percent, or less, error.

The group that furnishes surprises are the unemployed through the bottom ten percent in earning power. They are the lottery players (the long odd players) whose beliefs in the feasibility of something for nothing make them favor extreme liberals. Yet they represent a group that polls cannot reach; many are without phones, they may vote, or they may not. Even if you reach them it is extremely difficult to obtain a valid answer. The group is particularly strong in ethnic and racial groupings in California, New York and Texas. It would be advisable to remember that Dukakis won the Democratic Primary in Texas simply by speaking in Spanish, promising the sky, and concentrating on South Texas.

It seems this election, and the next two Congressional elections are three of the most critical in our recent history and it would appear more appropriate for the media to return to the tasks of informing objectively. Determination of what is going on in the unpolled segment of the electorate should be high on the list. Meanwhile, overconfidence in either party might be somewhat inopportune. The prudent thing for you and I to do is VOTE! ABSENTEE OR OTHERWISE!

HEALTH CARE

by Scott Gilmore, Hospital Administrator

Cholesterol countdown

Medical research report continue to be dramatic and clear: reducing the level of blood cholesterol lowers the rate of sickness and death from heart disease. Diet and drug therapy can slow or even reverse the production of fatty deposits that clog arteries and cause heart attacks.

New national guidelines for doctors spell out a unified plan of attack on heart disease. First, every American should be treated for blood cholesterol levels from the age of 20 on. Depending on the results of that test, there are several options:

Under 200: advice is to eat sensibly and have it checked again in five years. 200-239 is considered borderline. People in this range should cut total fats in their diet to 30% of the day's total calories, limit saturated fat to 10% of their total calories, and eat no more than 300 milligrams of dietary cholesterol each day. The blood test should be repeated each year. 240 and above (HIGH RISK): the diet should be modified as for the borderline group. Blood should be further analyzed to study the levels of "bad" low density lipoproteins (LDL) and high density lipoproteins (HDL). High HDL cholesterol levels protect against heart disease while high LDL levels increase the risk.

Two new drugs, Lovastatin and Gemfibrozil, have recently been added to the weapons doctors use in the battle against heart disease. Lovastatin cuts total cholesterol, including LDL, and slightly increase HDL. It can reduce very high cholesterol levels to normal, but its effect on heart attack rate and potential long-term side effects are still under study.

Gemfibrozil slightly cuts total cholesterol, moderately increases HDL, and moderately reduces LDL. It has been shown to lower heart attack rate. Some people have mild gastrointestinal problems as a side effect.

NOTE: Even with powerful drugs, a low-cholesterol diet is still essential.

Excuses, excuses

According to Driveline, a publication distributed by the Safety and Traffic Operations Section of Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, drivers come up with some pretty good excuses for traffic accidents.

Here are some actual statements found on insurance forms where drivers try to summarize an accident in the fewest words possible:

"I had been driving for forty years when I fell asleep at the wheel and had an accident."

"I was on my way to the doctor with rear end trouble when my universal joint gave way, causing me to have an accident."

"As I approached the intersection, a sign suddenly appeared in a place where no stop sign had ever appeared before. I was unable to stop in time to avoid the accident."

"To avoid hitting the bumper of a car in front, I struck the pedestrian."

"I pulled away from the side of the road, glanced at my mother-in-law, and headed over the embankment."

"In an attempt to kill a fly, I drove into a telephone pole."

'SELF' CONTROL

by J. Michael Fish

Turning traps into springboards

Due to a production error the copy was scrambled making it difficult to comprehend, therefore we are rerunning the same article this week.

Psychological 'traps' are created when we believe negative ideas about our 'self.' Ideas and beliefs become 'traps' when they are unrealistic and keep us from achieving the fulfillment life offers each of us.

'Spring boards' are positive ideas and beliefs concerning our 'self.' They are realistic—they work in a real world and are a part of the process of fulfilling our individual purposes.

Facts and experience are the raw material, the 'building blocks' with which we erect the framework of our reality pertaining to our 'self' and our relationship with our surroundings. They provide a base, reinforcement and wisdom with which to weather the challenges (problems) of today and the future.

Opinions, feelings and fears are products of an active imagination. They color, adorn and arrange the "building blocks" to suit the 'tenant,' either a positive or a negative state of mind.

Facts can never be changed once they have occurred; this is not true of opinions, feeling and fears. As easily as we change our mind or an opinion, we can turn a 'trap' into a 'spring board.'

All of us have been held back by snares. They happen as early as childhood and, in many cases, last a lifetime.

My first experience with mental entrapment was devastating at first, and held me securely within its grip for more than twelve years with a negative state of mind.

It began with the loss of two things I dearly loved, my father and my lifestyle.

Bitterness and self pity 'trapped' me and was magnified by subsequent, negative experiences which occurred during that twelve year period. My mother's marriage to an alcoholic, Viet Nam, the cold welcome home from the war, and my involvement with drugs, all served to place me at the 'door' of my own death.

Certainly, there was positive things going on in my life, most of which concerned my job, but those things ended each time I left the working place. A person with a negative state of mind considers only the negatives.

Looking at my life as a whole led me to believe the struggle was not worthwhile and hopeless. "You live, you suffer, you die." Therefore, ending this life and continuing on to the next 'step' seemed more efficient somehow.

It was at the point of 'do-or-die' the realization occurred to me. There must be a way to turn it all around and make for a more fulfilling life.

Then came the desire.

Desire. The first step in any undertaking, followed by a sense of direction, a goal or target.

The goal? A better me.

I "shot for the moon," I wanted my life to be perfect, at least as near perfect as humanly possible.

Humanly perfect is dealing with experiences and problems in a positive effort, "a little bit of goodness," in all things attempted and accomplished.

The next step was to incorporate a set of standards and values that would strengthen and represent the type of person I most wanted to be, honorable enough to strive toward, and realistic enough to function in a 'real' world.

Adopting a perspective, or method in which to relate with fellow man was the next issue. Phrase by phrase, line by line; I fitted "Desiderata," by Max Ehrman, into my realm of thinking.

The results were incredible. My confidence, self-esteem, my whole concept of 'me', even my appearance did a complete turn around, virtually overnight.

What followed was a period of research in psychology and studies of human behavior, which led to what was available on the paranormal. It was during this period of research I developed a healthy concept toward God and strengthened my faith and relationship with Him.

With my recently gained knowledge and 'new' positive attitude, I set out to conquer my world; to free myself from the psychological traps that kept me from realizing the extent of my potential for fulfillment.

I remembered all of my negative memories in as much detail as possible. Extracting the negative feelings and opinions from each one, I changed them into positive reinforcement by replacing them with appropriate impressions and concepts; turned 'traps' into 'spring boards.'

Now, I am in a period of application. I expect this period to endure the rest of my life, applying the principles of "Self Control" to the different areas of my existence.

Having a very enjoyable family life, a realistic concept of the person that I am, my efforts are involved in attaining the lifestyle that fits our family's desires.

At this point, I feel that I am at the very threshold of the achievement of that which I consider is to be fulfilling; a point where hopes and dreams, the magic of life, and cause and effect come together in harmony, assuring that fantasy is about to be realized.

Spending time together

Any family can grow closer, develop more cohesiveness and become stronger—given the time. However, many families never develop the habit of spending time together or let their "family time" be taken up with other activities. While there is no "money-back guarantee", research indicates that strong families share time together.

It's especially important to start doing things together when the children are young. Children soon realize that being a part of their family is fun. They feel secure with family members and gradually learn that siblings and parents have much to share with them that enriches their lives.

Start the family time habit by tracking the family's current activities. Each day for seven days, write on the calendar the times family members did things together. You may wish to include the times you spent with one child alone, as well as entire family activities, including family meal time.

At the end of the week, when the family is together, look at the calendar. Count up the time spent together and discuss what time was special for each family member.

Then begin to plan for family activities. Spend more time talking about activities that would be fun and reasonable for the family to do together. Make a family calendar for the month and place it where family members will see it daily and remember what is planned.

In addition to deciding on special activities, you may want to set aside a short period every day to do something as a family. This time might be used for a family devotional, a reading or a special book together or playing a game or crafts.

Strong families work hard to plan and protect the time they spend together.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serves people of all ages regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

BRONCO TAILS

by Cynthia Kepler

Last Friday's football game looked great. For those of you that had not heard, Sonora rumbled over Bandera 39-0. Way to go, guys! Captains for the game were all of the Broncos. We want Sonora to really come out and support the Broncos in Hondo on Friday.

Plans for the Halloween Carnival are in full swing! The classes picked their nominees for Halloween Queen last Tuesday. They are: Freshman-Holly Grider, Sophomore-Lori Mesa, Junior-Christi Adkins, and Senior-Rosa Madera. The student body will vote on these nominees, and the new queen will be crowned at the Halloween Carnival on Monday. Everyone is reminded that the juniors are still selling raffle tickets. These tickets are three dollars a piece for a chance on a Nintendo video game, a Remington shotgun, a 243 Winchester rifle, or a day hunt on the Cahill ranch. Junior fundraisers are mostly applied on prom expenses, so the seniors also encourage everyone to support the juniors.

More news from the junior class - the TEAMS tests are over. The junior class took the exit level TEAMS tests on Tuesday and Wednesday this week. These tests must be passed before a student can graduate. The juniors will have three more opportunities to pass the test if they fail to pass this time around.

A note to the seniors--do not forget to make an appointment to get senior pictures taken. Also--Mrs. Fields has lots of scholarship, college, and College Board test applications in her office. Now is the time to start thinking to the future. The school year is already one sixth over.

The big news from the Mighty Bronco Band this week was marching contest at Brady. The band received a II Division Rating (excellent) for their performance. The band would like to thank everyone who supported them in their efforts this year. Special thanks go out to the Band Boosters and the cheerleaders for all of their tremendous support. Also, thanks go out to the Red Raider from the seniors.

A reminder to every high school student that the Halloween Spanish Club dance will be on October 29 in the high school foyer from 8 p.m. to 12 midnight. Prices will be higher at the door for those who come uncostumed, and prizes will be awarded to costumes in several different categories. Everybody come on and have a good time. That's about it for this week. Keep yourself safe this weekend, and as the like seniors to say, "Don't Worry--Be Happy".

Bronco Football 1988

Broncos Bury Bandera ,39-0

by Decky Spiller

On Friday the 21st the Broncos proved to themselves and the people of Sonora that they are still in the running for a playoff spot. They also became a closer, more tightly knit team as a result of that victory and the work it took to achieve it.

Offensively the Broncos piled up the yardage. Rushing for Sonora number twenty-one, Todd Keller carried six times for twenty-seven yards; number thirty-one, Erasmo Perez carried twice for eighteen yards; number thirty-two, Tracy Love carried twice for thirteen yards, and number forty, Chacho Cahill carried five times for seventeen yards and a touchdown.

Number eleven Michael Harris passed fifteen times and completed ten with one interception for a total of 212 yards in the first half.

Number eighty-four, Eddie Virgen was on the receiving end of six of Harris's passes for 124 yards, and a touchdown, and Love caught four for eighty-eight yards.

The Bronco offensive linemen have come a long way but they still have some work to do on pass protection. When our quarter back goes through four quarters without being touched, then we will be satisfied.

On special teams the Broncos had some outstanding players Friday night. On punt returns, Keller, Love, and number twenty-three Eric Espinosa did the honors for a total of twenty-four yards. Sonora punted three times in the first half and Harris averaged thirty-four yards. Number thirty, Manuel Martinez kicked off three times averaging fifty-four yards and was one for two on extra point tries.

Under the leadership of number seventy-five, Sonny Sentena, number sixty three Jeff Lowder, and number fifty-one, Decky Spiller the Bronco defense shut down Bandera's offense. Harris intercepted one pass, the only turnover of the game. At the end of the first half the score stood Sonora 13, Bandera 0.

Carrying the ball for Sonora were Martinez, Espinosa, Love, Keller, Perez, Cahill, and Harris for a combined yardage of 193 yards. Both Cahill and Perez pushed through for touchdowns.

Number forty-one Jake Kimbrel was hot on kickoff coverage with most of the tackles.

The Broncos had great success in the air again in the second half as Harris completed five of his six passes for 101 yards. Virgen caught four of those passes for sixty-one yards and a touchdown and Keller caught a forty yarder for a touchdown.

On kick returns Espinosa returned one punt for six yards and Kimbrel returned a kickoff for seventeen yards.

Martinez kicked off four times averaging forty-three yards and was good on two of his four extra point attempts.

Del Rio Rams beat 7th Grade Colts

by Jason Morley

The 7th grade Colts played an outstanding game against the Del Rio Rams, but lost 28-14.

Jamie Espinosa had a twenty yard run. Joel Cox had a fifteen yard run and then Jamie Espinosa went in

The Broncos are on their way to two more wins, and maybe even more, this season and they need your support.

8th Grade Colts loss game to Rams

by Jason Morley

The 8th grade Colts played well against the Del Rio Rams. Although the Colts scored twice before the Rams got on the scoreboard, the Colts lost 28-16. Shane Keller had a sixty-five yard run for a touchdown. Matthew Smith threw several passes and completed two for ten and fifteen yards. Joe Buitron rushed for fifty yards total.

The last game will be Thursday October 27 against Iraan, in Iraan.
