Broncos dispatch Alpine

By Griffin B. Cole
DRN Editor

FORT STOCKTON - The Sonora Broncos broke open a tight game with 17 fourth quarter points on their way to a 31-14 bidistrict playoff victory over Alpine Saturday night.

With the victory, Sonora (7-4) advances to the area playoffs for a rematch with undefeated and third-ranked Ballinger. The Bearkats defeated Sonora 40-20 during the regular season.

The area match up will be played in San Angelo Friday night at 7:30.

After Alpine came back to tie the game at 14-14 Sonora scored 17 unanswered points in the fourth quarter.

The eventual winning touchdown was scored at the 9 1/2-minute mark as Eric Espinosa burst down the right side line and broke a couple of tackles to score. The touchdown was set up by a 37-yard pass from David Mirike to Adam Youngblood on a third down and four situation.

"In the fourth quarter we got the wind to our back and decided to take advantage," said Mirike. "It was a great catch."

RECEIVING - Sonora, Youngblood 1-37. Alpine, Lujan 1-9, Hardin 1-6.

It was also the only pass Mirike completed on the evening, but it could not have come at a better time.

The Bronco defense then took over and forced the Fighting Bucks into a fourth and long situation.

Alpine head coach Ronnie Reeger called for a fake punt, but Sonora was ready. The Broncos had nine men on the line of scrimmage and nobody deep. The option pitch was dropped and the play lost six yards giving the Broncos the ball at the Alpine 44.

"If (Danny Rojo, Alpine quarterback) had got it, I would have held them," said Bronco defensive back Oscar Perez.

Sonora took advantage as Perez hit a 30-yard field goal, his first of the year, to extend the Bronco lead to 24-14.

Alpine ran just two plays before turning the ball back over to the Broncos on an interception. Danny Mata rambled 24 yards through the middle for his second touchdown, this one icing the game.

The interception was just another spectacular play by the Sonora defense which played well for most of the contest.

As Rojo went back to pass, Robert Gallion jumped to bat it. Please see Broncos, page 4

Merchants Association prepares for annual Christmas give away

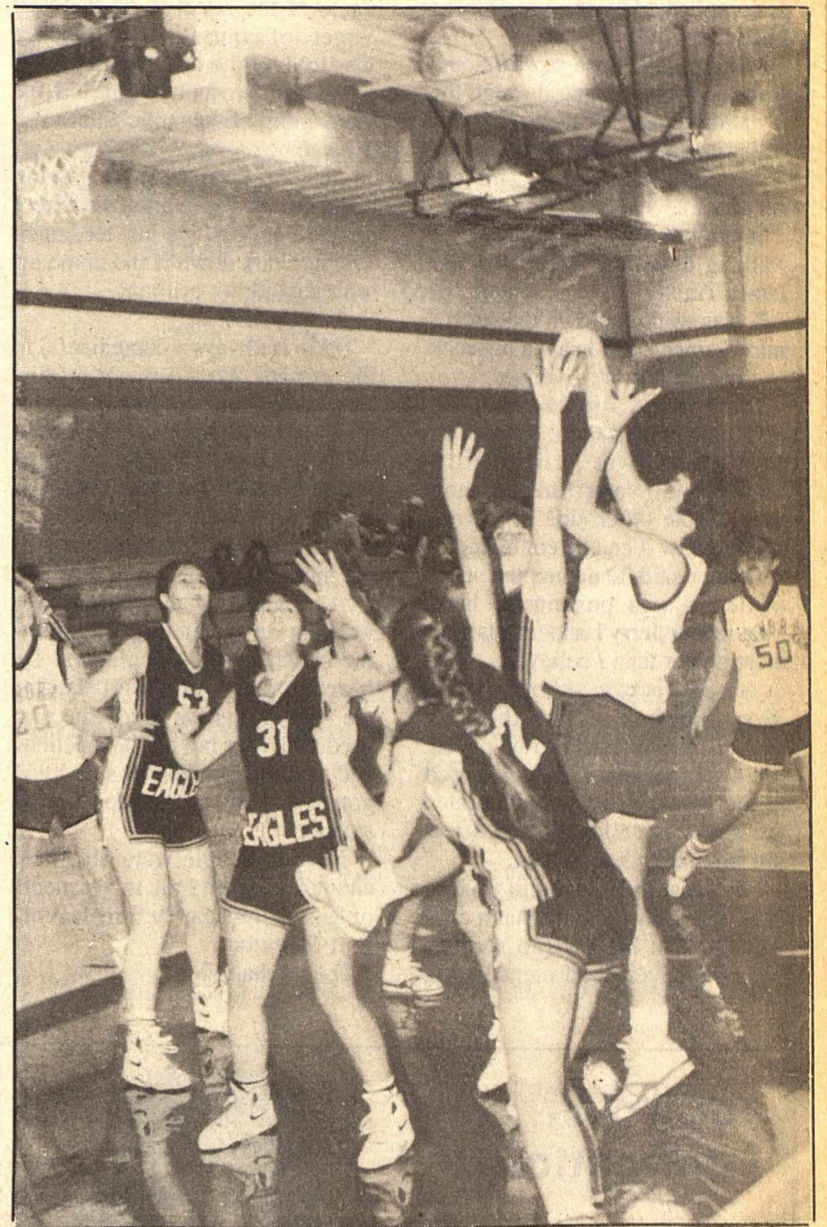

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas. An easy way to tell is the annual Sonora Business Association's: Share the Pride drawings which will begin Dec. 8.

Ronny Cox said the association decided to go back to the traditional use of tickets purchased for the drawing. Those who shop in Sonora will be able to get tickets beginning Nov. 23 at participating businesses. Interested businesses who may have been missed may call the Chamber of Commerce at 387-2880.

Four drawings will be held starting Dec. 8 and continuing to Dec. 15, 22 and 24. The drawings will be held at the Perry's parking lot Dec. 8 and 22, with the drawings moving to downtown Dec 15 and 24. All drawings will begin at 2 p.m.

Cox said several winners will be selected at each drawing.

The annual Christmas tree lighting is scheduled for 7 p.m. at the courthouse lawn Nov. 30.

Lady Broncos sweep opening week's games

By Griffin B. Cole
DRN Editor

The Sonora Lady Broncos used a powerful inside game to sweep the opening week's ball games at the high school gymnasium.

In the opening game Nov. 13, Sonora got 18 points from forward Dana Evans and 14 points from center Amy Reston to defeat McCamey 66-53.

The Lady Broncos started using their height advantage in the second half after trailing 29-27 after two quarters.

Using the inside game, the Lady Broncos outscored McCamey 18-11 in the third quarter to build a 5-point lead. Reston provided the scoring punch with eight points, most of them coming on offensive rebounds.

Sonora continued to pad its lead in the fourth quarter behind Evans who scored 10 points.

McCamey was able to stay in the game in the first half thanks to Lawanda Bend who scored 12 of the Badgers' 29 points. Bend was out the entire second half with a knee injury.

The Lady Broncos were cold from the field in the opening two quarters as they bombed away from 3-point range. Sonora hit on just 2-12 3-point attempts before making the adjustment of going inside.

Overall the Lady Broncos hit on 5-16 3-pointers.

Starting point-guard Monica Gonzalez was in foul trouble for most of the game which limited her playing time. Laura Chalk filled in and contributed four points.

Others in double-figures for Sonora were Tana Churchill and Susen McCleery both with 11 points.

Sonora moved to 2-0 on the year with a 53-25 beating of Junction Friday night. It was a rough and tumble game which saw Junction center Tara Doyal kicked out.

The Lady Broncos put this game out of reach early outscoring Junction 14-3 in the first quarter. Sonora then outscored the Lady Eagles 26-1 in the third quarter on the way to the blow out.

Golf course looks for closer ties with city

By Griffin B. Cole
DRN Editor

A tough year, mostly due to poor weather conditions, has caused changes to be made at the Municipal Golf Course.

At Tuesday's Sonora city council meeting, golf club board member Devoe Smith said, "Looking at (the profit-loss statement) you might think we're here to ask for money, but we're not."

Despite the comment, Smith did ask the city if it is possible for workers at the golf course to be part of the city's workman compensation since the golf course's group canceled having the policy at all. They also asked for help in fixing hole number nine which was washed out repeatedly due to rains and the possibility of having some roads paved.

The board would like for these things to be put in the budget.

Twice during the year the number nine hole was repaired by Cahill and both times the golf course did not have to pay for it. The board members would prefer not going back to the same source a third time for the money.

The council withheld any action on the golf course.

Matt Davis, board member, said "Financially something had to be done."

That was due to having two of the six golf tournaments washed out. Davis said the tournaments are the major money maker for the golf course along with green fees.

Smith said George Johnson, who currently runs the course, will be replaced at the beginning of the year by Brian Rhodes.

The council voiced some concern over the operation of the course due to the equipment owned by Johnson. Davis said

Just Chatting

Learn something new

I believe very much in that popular saying someone came up with, "You learn something new every day." I still haven't learned who said that.

I did learn something extremely important Tuesday morning during the city council meeting. It is not as complicated to name a street as I had thought.

Reading all those stories about cities and states going through the legislature and alike, it was my belief it is a very involved process in naming a new street. This just isn't so.

It turns out it's just a matter of walking down the street. Just ask James Trainer.

"I was walking down the street," said Trainer, "and I saw a big rock so I named it Rock Avenue."

Oh.
If I understand right, Rock Ave. at the time was called Water Street. But, Water Street is now over on the other side of town. I can see how it can be confusing.

Trainer said he named the street while he was postmaster here. That means Jerry Landers has a lot more power than I believed.

All of this came about when a Mrs. Sanchez asked the city council for her street to be paved. Then the conversation got turned to the point where she mentioned the street is called Torres Street but isn't really named that.

It was then brought to the attention of the council that a man way back in history (no specific date was given) had named Uno, Dos and Tres Streets. This guy has been long gone yet these rather boring names have stuck.

I don't see anything particularly wrong here, only a lack of imagination on the man's part.

To get back to my point, Mrs. Sanchez said she would like the name of the street to be Sanchez Street (of course). Mrs. Sanchez was told by the commission there is a certain procedure to follow for the naming of the street and to see if it can be paved.

I'm not sure about the paving part, but if she wants the street named I suggest we just let James Trainer walk down it and come up with something brilliant.

There is always a comedian(s) in the crowd. What I mean is this: Juana Mesa was kidding me about how she liked to watch me running around the sideline of the football like I know what I'm doing.

So, I fooled her by staying in the press box all game.

At the end of the game I was walking on the field to interview the coaches and the players. On Monday, Sue Moore said she saw me walking on the field. She was used to seeing me on the sidelines and said she thought for sure I had gotten lost and just made it to the stadium.

Several people were also kind enough to remind me to get plenty of gas in my car before leaving Fort Stockton.

Ha, ha, ha.

Dear Editor,

I know it doesn't deserve an answer but what the heck.

Well, we know who wears the pants in the Castaneda family. Mrs. Castaneda ought to let Mr. Castaneda do the writing, surely he can do a better job of getting his point across.

Let me answer point by point:

(1) About the shearing crews and the ranchers, my point was that since everybody was saying that people should spend their money here in Sonora (as opposed to San Angelo) we should be given an opportunity to earn it here.

(2) County, County Officials and the Judicial System; It's not the system, it's certain officials whom I have never hesitated to name by name. Besides I'm right and I'll prove it when the time comes. Right Junior?

(3) Tardiada money; Why does

Letters to the editor

Mrs. Castaneda think her brother is still roaming the streets. The tardiadas didn't even cover all my phone bills.

(4) Taxes; Instead of taxes, I pay about $3,000 dollars a year for rent. As for not working, I guess sheep shearing is a sport. By the way the last job I had in the oilfield was telling people like Mr. Castaneda what to do.

(5) La Raza issue; When I use that term I use it to mean hispanics who are not ashamed of their heritage and the history of their ancestors. I do not include "Coconuts" like Mrs. Castaneda. (I did not know it was possible to work yourself up out of your own race.)

(6) As for the rest, I'm still trying to get it to make sense.

Seriously, folks, even though the wife isn't too happy ("asciendo chile" as the Raza would put it), I'm sitting here laughing.

Case closed,
Ernest Barrera

Dear Editor,

My great-grandfather, Washington Moody Mathis, died near Sonora, Texas in what was at the turn of the century, Wentworth, Texas. The town is no longer there, however his grave remains and is the only grave there. It is on a ranch some miles out of Sonora on the San Antonio highway. I was there in 1954 and saw the grave but cannot remember exactly where it was.

It would be greatly appreciated if this could be placed in your news and perhaps some of the ranchers along the road toward San Antonio may know of a grave there. I remember speaking to a lady at one of the ranches in 1954 and she told me that there was a grave on their ranch.

Any assistance that you could give would be most appreciated. My great-grandfather had been run over by a cotton wagon in the late 1800's and was buried there. When the town was moved to San Angelo and to Sonora all the graves were also moved; his being the exception. My great-grandmother had requested that his grave remain.

Many thanks for your kind assistance.

Sincerely,
Dan Willis Brown

4-H Food Fair is a treat for all ages

By Griffin B. Cole
DRN Editor

It didn't take long for the taste buds to start watering of those who attended the annual 4-H Food Fair Monday night at the Junior High School snack bar.

Some 20 dishes in four categories were prepared by 4-H students to be judged for competition and consumed by the general public.

Lolabeth Jones, county extension agent for home economics, said each of the kids make their own choices on the dishes they prepare. Each dish is placed in one of four categories; breads and cereals, fruits and vegetables, nutritious snack and desserts, and main dish.

Jones said the competition is judged by out of town, "4-H leaders and county agents who know what our prerequisites are."

The judges base their decisions on two criteria. First, 75 percent of the score is on the actual food exhibit and a private interview. Jones said the interview for the children includes questions about nutrition and the preparation of their dish.

The interview is not unique to the food preparation area of 4-H. Jones said in almost every area of 4-H, the participant is required to go through an interview.

Jones sees the interview as the key, "By the time a 4-Her is in high school...they can interview on the same skill level of many adults."

The other 25 percent of the participants score is based on written work.

"They have to record what they do," said Jones.

The written work is not just tossed away. After the competition, the recipes are collected and made into a cookbook.

Jones said there has been a change in the home economics area of 4-H which has been going on for about 20 years. The kitchen is not just for women anymore. About thirty percent of the dishes presented this year were by boys.

Competition for this year included beginner, pre-junior, junior and senior divisions. Each division had the four categories mentioned above, although not all categories were covered in each division.

Winner in the beginner division was Thomas Schenkel in the fruits and vegetables category.

In the pre-junior division winners included; Zuirina Perez, main dish; Janea Crowder, fruits and vegetables; Erin Marrs, breads and cereals and Russell Dempsey nutritious snacks and desserts.

Becky Whitaker and Caleb Taylor placed second and third respectively in the desserts category.

Winners in the junior division were; main dish, Andrew Dempsey first, Candie Sessom second, and Shawna Faris third.

Breads and cereals winner was Brandi Bible while the fruits and vegetables winner was David Fisher.

Sarah Marrs won the nutritious snack and desserts category with Lora Hale second and Callie Moore third.

Julie Jones won the senior division main dish and Laura Barlemann won the breads and cereals category.

Healthcare

By M. Scott Gilmore
Hospital Administrator

The healthcare paradox

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of time," so begins Dickens' A Tale of Two Cities, and his paradox remains a good way to describe health care in the United States today. Miracle drugs, such as antibiotics and blood pressure medicine, now control many diseases which caused many premature deaths in the past. Organ transplants, once only a prediction, are now a common occurrence. In 1900, life expectancy was 50 years. Today it's 75 years and some believe we can expect it to approach 100 years sometime in the next century.

On the other hand, a series of problems relating to access, quality, and cost now seem to engulf American health care. As the seeds of medical success were sown in the last century by doctors, scientists, and public health agencies, along with improvements in general standards of living, housing, sanitation, nutrition, and education, society was slow to recognize that these very successes have contributed to today's sense of a health crisis. Every newspaper and magazine, it seems, has an article addressing a problem in medicine.

Health costs have risen for the past decade at a rate exceeding three times that of inflation. The U. S. is expected to spend $650 billion on health care in 1990, about 12 percent of the gross national product; many experts take it for granted that this figure will rise to 15 percent of G. N. P. by the year 2000.

In 1990 the U. S. will spend $2,500 on health care for each man, woman, and child, 50 percent more per capita than will be spent in Canada, the next highest spending nation. We will spend; more than twice that of Japan and almost triple that of Britain, yet each of these nations and many other developed nations had lower infant mortality rates and similar longevity. Public health analysts conclude that the results as measured by generally accepted indices do not reflect increased value for all this extra expenditure.

The cost crisis is dramatically illustrated by the health insurance rates paid by most companies. Since 1981, one large banking company in Pennsylvania has had a 26 percent compound growth rate in medical insurance costs and the escalation continues as rates increase again this year by 33 percent. In absolute dollars, health care costs for this company have grown from $100,000 to $1,000,000 a year over the past decade. Health care is a big corporate expense which is out of control and has become a serious worry for most of corporate America.

Next week in part II of the Health Care Paradox, we will examine access to health care.

AN AWAKENING

I was searching today in the back of my mind,
Where my album of time is quite often confined;
When I noticed a moment, not faded or blurred,
Just as vivid and clear as the day it occurred.

It was Sunday at dusk, on an August Fourteenth.
Overwhelming misfortunes devoured my strength.
I was yearning for death to but whisk me away,
And to deliver me far from a life of dismay.

Entertaining that though, I let wonder my eye,
Til it halted and gazed on a light in the sky.
From the dark and unknown, it was pulling at me,
Like a siren who lures from an island at sea.

When at last I let go, with no reason to stay,
Every star disappeared from the spacial array.
It was then that I felt an unsettling release,
And a pleasure forgotten, the feeling of peace.

In an instant of time I was being propelled,
At a rate of velocity unparalleled,
Through a tunnel or void with a deafening roar,
Where my consciousness soared into something much more.

My ascent came to end at a quadrille of light,
Whose proportions defied my perception of sight.
I perceived it to be the pure essence of man,
That has given him life since existence began.

With a wondering thought and the absence of fear,
I moved slowly ahead and then ventured quite near,
When an entity beckoned and bade me away,
To the place of his keeping, a place we could stay.

It conveyed without words that my problems were wrought,
By progressions evolving from negative thought.
They are merely beliefs with no substance to bear,
And are governed with ease, with appropriate care.

We determine our fate by deciding to act,
And then following through by making it fact.
When we master the skills that are given each soul,
We develop the strength and the means to control.

All at once I arose and was looking at stars,
And was startled by sounds and the passing of cars.
It was later I knew that it wasn't a dream,
For the changes in me were by far, too extreme.

Now my album of time has the date on display,
In the back of my mind where I wonder each day.
I completely emerged from that person before,
As an entity awakened by something much more.

Ramblin'

By Jim Fish

An answer from beyond

Before August 14, 1977, my state of being was burdened by events which had occurred over the previous eighteen years. Self pity and resentment were the catalysts causing me not only to constantly rehash those events, but to completely ignore the good things which had come my way. In my then state of mind, everyone had ulterior motives for their generosity and compassion toward others. My conclusion was that the good times occurred mainly to accentuate the negative feelings resulting from the bad times.

It was on that Sunday morning I found myself in my Fiat Sport Spider Coupe, heading directly toward a semi-tractor trailer rig. My accelerator was fully depressed and my eyes were closed, unable to bring myself to watch the impact.

Some force, either deep within me or from outside my being, caused me to turn from the path of the truck in the last second. Fear was not a factor due to my state of absolute despair. Besides, fright was a minimal barrier as a result of previous experiences. I cannot explain the last-minute action, but it is responsible for me being here now.

My emotional condition had deteriorated to such a degree immediately afterward, I would have been ashamed to be seen by anyone with whom I was acquainted. When my car headed west out of San Antonio I had no destination in mind. However, when the sun set I was pulling into a roadside park some two hundred miles north of the city, on a lonely highway outside of Fredericksburg.

What follows can be classified as both insanity and acute delusion. Most will label it a dream, few might even accept it as fact, but no one will be able to prove it, one way or another. For me, the account conveyed in the poem I wrote five years later is correct and reflects exactly what my memory recorded of the event.

I offer it to you for entertainment purposes only. I'll leave it for your realm of thought to decide whether or not to ponder the profundity of its meaning and the validity of its implications.

and Blayze Sykes came down with the ball.

Sonora built a 14-0 lead at half time, but the Fighting Bucks dominated the third quarter and tied the game on a pair of touchdown runs by Martin Acosta.

The Broncos aided Alpine's comeback by turning the ball over on their first possession of the second half.

Sonora head coach Bob Bellard took the blame, "We gave them an excellent opportunity at the start (of the second half.) I started all that stuff. I called that option play and the pitch went into the dirt. We didn't need to do that, I should have called something else."

The Fighting Bucks sliced the lead to 14-7 as they drove the 45 yards in 8 plays with Acosta carrying the ball on the last three plays including the touchdown.

Alpine then tied the ball game at 14-14 as they drove 70 yards in less than two minutes and Acosta scored from a yard out.

Bellard said it was the inside running of Alpine which allowed them to get back in the game.

"They hit us on the draw. We didn't play the draw very well. We'll shore that up.

Defensive tackle Eric Galindo said it was difficult to tell what Alpine was going to do.

"They ran that draw and (we) couldn't tell what was happening. He faked real well," said Galindo.

There were plenty of opportunities for Sonora to put the ballgame out of reach in the first half.

"We missed some opportunities to put the score comfortably on our side," said Bellard, "but, when we had to have it we turned the big plays."

The missed chances started late in the first quarter.

With a 7-0 lead, on the first touchdown run by Espinosa, Sonora forced Alpine running back Brian Duanagan to fumble and Blayze Sykes jumped on it at the Alpine 46.

Sonora moved the ball to the 15 before returning the favor as Espinosa fumbled.

Two plays later Alpine gave the ball up again, on a fumble. But Mirike was intercepted.

Once again, Alpine turned the ball over when Youngblood intercepted a pass and returned it to the Alpine 22. Perez missed his first field goal attempt of the year from the far left hash mark.

Sonora was able to extend the lead to 14-0 when Mata scored from 8 yards out.

For most of the game Sonora relied on the inside rushing game of fullback Oscar Perez who carried the ball 21 times for 122 yards. Mata, back after missing six weeks, carried five times for 50 yards as a back up to Perez.

The outside game belonged to Espinosa who gained 92 yards on 14 carries.

PUBLIC NOTICE

On July 19, 1990, GTE Southwest Incorporated ("GTE-SW") filed revisions to the company's tariff pertaining to the features and associated equipment for providing emergency number services (9-1-1).

In this filing, GTE-SW proposes to modify its existing 9-1-1 tariff and to add more than 200 new service offerings. The new items of service and equipment in this application have been added to meet the company's increasing 9-1-1 customer demands and to allow GTE-SW to compete more effectively in the 9-1-1 equipment market.

The product line in the new offerings consists of a mini-computer and specialized console package for larger communities, as well as a personal computer with Automatic Number Identification (ANI) display for smaller communities. (ANI displays a caller's telephone number on the emergency dispatcher's computer screen.) In addition, the product line will include ANI and Automatic Location Information (ALI) display units compatible with, and similar to, those offered by Southwestern Bell Telephone Company and other local exchange carriers in Texas. (The ALI feature displays a caller's address on the computer screen.) The rate charged existing 9-1-1 customers may be revised at the expiration of their contracts with GTE-SW if the proposed tariff is approved.

This filing has been assigned Docket No 9667. The hearing on the merits is scheduled for February 25, 1991, at the offices of the Public Utility Commission of Texas. The deadline to intervene in this docket is December 31, 1990.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify the commission as soon as possible. A request to intervene, participate, or for further information, should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas, 78757. Further information also may be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0223 or (512) 458-0227, or (512) 458-0221, teletypewriter for the deaf.

Focus on education

Reading is active - not passive

by Smith Neal

All people improve their reading ability by reading, and by reading, and by reading, and by reading some more.

A recent study conducted by the U. S. Department of Education found that a child's reading success depends upon how much time he spends reading each day.

More than half of all fifth graders nationwide spend only four minutes a day reading at home.

Research shows that kids who spend 30 minutes a day at home reading books, magazines, and newspapers are more likely to do better in high school and college.

According to Mark Bricklin in an article in the November, 1990 issue of Prevention magazine, the average American youngster spends 28 hours a week watching TV--more time than he spends on any other single activity except sleeping. These 28 hours do not include the time he spends watching video tapes, playing video games, or listening to records, audio tapes, or CD's.

Bricklin says not only are these non readers not reading, they are doing nothing that is active. They are passive. We have, for the most part, become a spectator society. In the past, kids were active at play. They rode a bike, played cowboy, fished, or even read a book. Play should be active--physically, mentally and often both. Bricklin states, "A kid watching TV cannot build a model at the same time or let his or her imagination soar in a good book. Instead, the viewer is cut off from participation, from imagination, and even from the rest of the family."

According to an article on page 8A of the November 14 edition of the San Angelo Standard Times, too much TV for kids results in too little exercise, overweight, bad eating habits, and a real danger of having high cholesterol.

The teachers at Sonora Junior High have instituted an incentive reading program for students that allows them to earn prizes for reading books. One could call that bribery, I suppose; but if it works to get kids to read, then it can't be all bad. The program is called The Accelerated Reader, and it is a reading enrichment program that runs on Apple and Commodore computers. It motivates students age 8 to 18 to read more and better books while freeing teachers from reading and grading book reports and keeping administrative records.

The student checks out a book to read and reads it. When he finishes, he takes a computerized test over the content of the book; he must score a passing grade to get credit for reading the book. (There are 200 books--all quality books--in the Junior High program.) Each book has a point value. The point value of the book and the grade he makes determines the points he earns. With these points, the student can purchase such items as a tee-shirt, a cap, note pad, a poster, bookmark, blizzard, pencils, pizza, movies, canned soft drink, book covers, signs for his bedroom doorknobs, etc.

This reading incentive program has been very successful. Several local merchants have given financial support to the program. Some of these businesses are Pizza Hut, Perry's, and Dairy Queen.

Whether the program has cut down on the amount of time kids spend watching TV is not known, but it has definitely caused kids to read more and better books. They are learning to read and they are learning what they are reading about. Reading is active, not passive.

Seventh grade girls beat Iraan

The Sonora seventh grade girls opened up their 1990-91 season on a positive note defeating Iraan 26-20 at the Junior High Gymnasium.

Elaine Ortiz led Sonora in scoring with 12 points. Others to score included Megan Meyer with 4 points and Lily Trevino, Betty Samaniego, Melissa Hearn, Becca Chalk and Elisa Yanez with two points each.

Sonora built a 14-7 halftime lead into a 20-12 third quarter lead.

Coach Carol Sessom said the girls played very well for their first game. She said the team will try to improve and correct mistakes that were made.

The seventh-graders next game will be against Ozona.

Winners named in golf tournament

The Championship Tournament for the Sonora Golf Club members was held on Saturday and Sunday, November 10 and 11. The scoring was determined by a point system with one point for a double bogie, two points for a bogie, three points for a par, four points for a birdie, five points for an eagle and ten points for a double eagle or hole-in-one, with points being compiled for 18 holes of play each day. The total points for each player were then added to the individual player's handicap. After Saturday's scores were tallied, the players were divided into two flights.

Winners were as follows: Championship flight - 1st, Phil Browning; 2nd, Jim Covington and 3rd, (tie) Gary Hardgrave and Devoe Smith. First flight - 1st, James Edmondson; 2nd, Ed Price and 3rd, (tie) Richard Gonzales and Preston Joy.

Eighth grade girls defeat Iraan

Sara Reston's 10 points sparked the Sonora eighth-grade girls basketball team to a 22-17 win over Iraan.

Sonora jumped to a 14-7 lead, but Iraan closed to 16-15 after three quarters. Sonora was able to hold Iraan to just 2 points in the fourth quarter.
