Judge declares mistrial in Beto case

By Griffin B. Cole DRN Editor

A seven-man, five-woman jury delibertated eight hours Thursday, but failed to reach a verdict in the drug trial of Eriberto "Beto" Bernal resulting in a mistrial.

District Judge Brock Jones declared a mistrial at 8 p.m. after a poll of the jurors showed they believed further deliberations would not result in a decision.

"You, the jurors, are required to listen to the testimony and apply that testimony to the charges, but are not required to reach a verdict as long you vote consciously," said Jones in announcing the mistrial.

Bernal, his attorney Randy

Stout and 112th Judicial District Attorney J.W. Johnson all refused to comment following the mistrial Thursday night.

Testimony provided only a couple of differences.

Agent William Lonnie Hood testified he purchased 1.22 grams of methamphetamine from Bernal on Feb. 26, 1989 outside Beto's Restaurant. Hood said Bernal had told him he had the drugs in his truck and he had to go home and Beto testified his truck was being used that day by his wife and son to go to a doctor's appointment in San Angelo. Bernal also said he did not sell the methamphetamine to Hood.

Following Bernal's testimony

Wednesday, Stout called for a recess to confer with Jose Galindo's attorney about the possibility of Galindo testifying.

Galindo's attorney, Domir.go Garcia of Dallas, did not allow Galindo to testify.

In final statements, Stout encouraged the jury to use common experience to test the credibility of the testimony. He repeatedly mentioned the crossed testimony of Hood and Deputy Rusty Frazier.

Hood had testified after he sold the drugs to Beto, he called Frazier at his home and talked directly to him to set up the meeting for field-testing the drugs. Frazier testified he was on duty that evening and Hood talked with his wife who then relayed the message to Frazier.

Stout called the case a test of credibility of the witnesses. Johnson continued with his systematic approach during his closing statements. He pointed out to the jurors how the state had proven each portion of the indictment against Bernal.

Johnson also implored on the jury to remember they could convict Beto if the state had proved his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, not shadow of a doubt. District Clerk Bobbie Smith said she was informed it is up to the state whether Bernal will be tried again. No decision has yet been made according to Smith. Bernal remains free on bond.

By Griffin B. Cole DRN Editor

Herman Moore is not the easiest person to find these days. Since his retirement from Sutton County as Justice of the Peace, Moore spends a good portion of time fishing at Lake Amistad.

Since he was not readily available, it was up to his friends to heap the praise on.

Moore has affected a lot of people in his many years of service around Sutton County. In talking with those who worked with Herman, respect, nappiness and a sense of closeness were common threads of conversation.

In the 1950s, Moore started his career in Sutton County as a trooper with the Department of Public Safety. Despite moving to other jobs, Moore always retained a kinship with the state troopers.

For instance, L.D. Whitton, who has been in Sonora for five years as a trooper said, "Herman has an immense sense of wisdom about him."

Whitton said when he first started as a trooper he asked for some advice from Herman and got this, "Always do what's right and always be fair and everything will always be right and fair for you."

"That reflects the way he is," said Whitton. "We all can gain from Herman. He's been in law enforcement so long you can learn from him."

Whitton added, "(Herman) was always there for people. He gave a lot of time as a public servant....he wanted to be there and my understanding is he always was.

Bobbie Smith, Sutton County Clerk, swore in Herman in 1965 when he became Sutton County Sheriff. Smith said it was just by chance she got the opportunity to swear in Herman. The county clerk at the time was gone so Smith got the honors.

"It was exciting for me," said Please see Gone, page 5

It was in a festive atmosphere, one which fit the person being honored, in which Herman Moore was honored for his long years in public service to those in Sutton

County. Friends gathered Feb. 7 at the courthouse annex to bid a happy retirement to Moore, who is noted for his unfailing sense of humor as much as for his outstanding service over the years.

Moore spent some 37 years in service to Sutton County as, first, a trooper in the Department of Public Safety, then as sheriff and last as Justice of the Peace.

Charles Graves, Sutton County

Auditor, touched upon each aspect during a short speech recounting Moore's career.

About Moore's trooper days Graves said, "There are plenty of your friends here who can appreciate your performance of these duties back before radar and high-tech communications.'

Graves said about Moore as sheriff, "There are many testimonies to your wisdom as you worked with these young people. There were many times that you were able to let a young person's first offense be their last offense." And about Moore's 10 years as

Letters to the Editor

Throughout the current Middle East Crisis, we must remember where America's true strength lies.

Thomas Paine, one of the Founding Fathers of America, described the way wars start. "Each government accuses the other of perfidy, intrigue and ambition, as a means of heating the imagination of their respected nations, and incensing them to hostilities. Man is not the enemy of man, but through the medium of a false system of government."

Well known author L. Ron Hubbard wrote in his best selling book Dianetics, "In actuality a weakness and insecurity of government causes war. If a government were very strong and felt secure it would employ the most peaceful quiet methods of getting cooperation from its potential enemies. It wouldn't fight a war. One doesn't find an educated secure man fighting with his neighbors." In these terrible times, America must do all it can to bring the Middle East toward sanity such as Hubbard describes.

Healthcare

By M. Scott Gilmore

Hospital Administrator

What makes a good hospital?

An old friend and mentor who had spent his first career in the army before a distinguished career in health care stimulated my thinking about effective hospitals. He remarked that after 20 years in the army with more than 10 years as colonel, he could walk onto any military base of any country in the world and within five minutes could tell if it was a well-run base.

"How can you tell?" I asked. After spending 20 years around military bases, he said you develop a "feel". The skeptical look on my face made him prove his point. "With all the time you've spent in health care, I bet you can do it too. I bet you can tell if a hospital is well-run, if it is a good hospital, after only a short time walking through its halls." After thinking about this, I realized that he was right. Some hospitals just have the "feel" of effectiveness, compassion, competence, and caring, and other hospitals do not. Further, this "feel" or the lack of it, can be picked up in a very short time.

Then I wondered just exactly what was behind that "feel," what makes a "good" hospital? At first I looked for objective, measurable factors that could create the feel of a "good" hospital. Financial viability. . . measured in terms of a healthy margin and strong reserve. . .immediately came to mind. But no. I had been in many financially strapped hospitals that had the feel, and conversely, I had been in many financially well-off hospitals that did not exude the feel of a good hospital.

Well, what about other measures? Accreditation status, university-affiliation, bed size, quality assurance and improvement programs, hospitals where all the physicians were board certified and all the nurses were bachelors or masters prepared, for-profit hospitals, not-for-profit hospitals, religious hospitals, secular hospitals, high-tech hospitals, and so on. I concluded that the presence or abscence of any of these or other objective and measurable characteristics did not necessarily create or preclude the feel of a good hospital.

Why? Because a hospital is not a product that can be accurately or completely assessed by one or two objective measures. A hospital is a service organization. It depends upon everyone's performance, all the time. So most objective measures are only snapshot indicators of past performance. They don't necessarily tell me what's happening today, or tomorrow, or on a regular, ongoing basis in the hospital.

A hospital is a social organization with its own distinctive culture, its own particular way of doing things. Many of the components of the culture are intangible, but they are easily perceptible. It is the underlying factors that create and sustain the culture and enable the perception of it that most contribute to the feel of a good hospital. These underlying factors form the foundation that supports and continuously reinforces the culture and translates into the feel of a good hospital.

So what are the factors that nurture a "good" hospital? Here are my picks: Organizational Indicators of "Good" Institutions: 1. The leaders of the institution operate from a common base of mission and service and communicate this throughout the hospital.

2. The people in the institution have a strong sense of service and mission and understand the meaning and purpose behind their jobs.

3. Both people and the different jobs they do are clearly valued by the leaders of the organization, as well as by all of the staff.

A premium is placed on performance. The performance of all employees and staff is emphasized, measured and valued. The importance of continuous, excellent performance is constantly communicated throughout the hospital, as is the goal of constant improvement.

How can you perceive these factors and conclude that a particular hospital is "good"? Often by simply walking through the hospital and observing. How do the staff and physicians treat you? How do they interact with the patients, and with each other? Do they exude competence, courtesy, caring, and compassion? Or, do they exhibit rudeness, impatience, indifference and burnout?

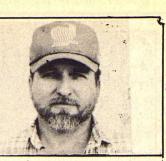

Why do I pick those particular indicators of a "good" hospital? Very simply because the way the staff and physicians feel about working in the hospital is a direct result of the presence or abscense of those organizational factors. The way they feel, about their work and themselves, influences how they act toward each other, patients, and visitors. This, in turn, creates the "feel" of a hospital, the perception that the hospital is "good" or not.

So. How does YOUR hospital make you feel when you walk through it? It's yours, y'know. Check it out.

Overhauling a state of mind

Depression is treated with drugs to correct chemical imbalances within the neurological system. Results in recent years have been startling. When there are no physical causes, however; the drugs merely mask the symptoms, elevate moods temporarily and can create chemical dependencies.

Even severe negative states of mind can be changed and prevented with the development of an internal mental maintenance program. Thirty or forty years ago, psychologists and certain lay persons vehemently opposed such procedures when a number of selfhelp books hit the open market. Public awareness has increased since then. Now, many individuals can help themselves, even though economic restrictions are a factor. Nonetheless, this is not psychological therapy.

Most depressives overestimate their problems and underestimate their ability to deal with them. They draw conclusions based on assumptions, rather than facts. Without considering positive elements, they expend a good deal of their time pondering over negative events and positive events in negative ways.

Another distortion frequently clung to, is the belief that they are victim of every ill or mishap that comes along. This is nothing more than a vicious cycle which can be broken with common sense and realistic trains of thought. Often, the depressed will overgeneralize; i. e., "Nobody loves me. . . Everybody hates me!"

As in the above and in your own experiences, you can see how negative thoughts can be monotonous. They are dire villains that will rob you of any hope of entertaining peace of

For our own sakes, our health, happiness, and even our longevity; we must educate ourselves with good mental health habits and maintain positive rationale. We need to approach our problems and view our life in a realistic perspective. We should become aware of what we are thinking and how we are feeling. Try to remember what caused a mood swing. Explore the reasons we do certain things and why we feel the way we do about them. We must embark on a discovery of self, as it were.

Dissect your negative thoughts. Grab a hold of the facts regarding any matter and get rid of all the crap, the emotional details, and deal with the bare facts. You will find, more often than not, that they are quite insignificant compared to how they must have appeared under the guise of negative feelings and doubts.

one through the following test, adapted from "Psycho-Cybernetics", by Dr. Maxwell 1. Is there any rational reason thoughts and feelings. Put each

Next, cross-examine your

to entertain such a thought or feeling?

2. Could it be that I am mistaken in this regard?

3. Would I come to the same conclusion about some other person in a similar situation?

4. Why should I continue to act and feel as if this were true, if there is no good reason to do so?

Finally, take action on the conclusions drawn from your psychological detective work. Review you life's negative events and replace the minus factors with positive reinforcement. "Sure, I wrecked the car because I was watching the girl cross the street. Next time I will keep my attention on the road ahead."

In time, you will have created a firm psychological foundation on which to base mental faculties, build courage and self-esteem. It's okay to like and believe in yourself. Certainly, some people carry it to an extreme, but that's their problem.

Don't be afraid to look at the humorous side of any serious situation. The more serious something becomes, the more potential it has to be funny. Finding amusement in anything keeps you from being so involved that you loose a realistic perspective and then become controlled by it.

Practicing these skills until desired results are attained will increase your ability to control depression. They will ensure maximum prosperity in the living experience and make your life longer, healthier and happier.

put the Lady Broncos into the position of just having to beat Kermit to win district.

The Lady Broncos win over Reagan County was somewhat of a stunner as the Lady Owls had easily handled Sonora at home. Dukes said the difference was

"We set a goal to limit the opposition to 12 offensive rebounds a game," said Dukes. "We held Big Lake to 13 and only one in the last quarter."

Dukes said there was a lot of work and talk put into rebounding during practices since Reagan County held a size advantage.

Shooting percentage has also been up for the Lady Broncos as of late. They shot 45 percent against the Lady Owls and were ght around that mark again Fine in the win against Kermit.

While the Sonora offense rolled against Kermit, the defense was extremely tough. Kermit did not score for the first 3:48 of the game and then went frozen in the fourth quarter when they were held scoreless for the first 4:30.

Thanks to the early cold streak by Kermit, Sonora built an 8-0 lead from the outset. Kermit managed a 5-0 run to close to 8-5, but Sonora closed the quarter with a 6-0 for a 14-5 lead at the end of the first quarter.

Tana Churchill had the hot hand scoring seven points in the first quarter on her way to 15 in the Sonora put the game in their pocket in the second quarter as Dana Evans hit for 13 of her 16 points in the quarter including a 3pointer from almost halfcourt at the buzzer.

Sonora built the lead to 36-15 after one half of play.

Monica Gonzales controlled the second half for Sonora as she was able to consistently drive to the basket. Gonzales scored 10 of her game high 19 points in the second half. Most of those points came from the free throw line where she hit on seven of nine.

Kermit made one run in the second half to get in the game. They cutscored the Lady Broncos 11-1 in one stretch before Yvonne Mata hit a basket to stop the Advancing to the playoffs with Sonora from District 6AAA will be Reagan County.

Deputy hired by Sheriff's department

The new gentleman around town in the Sutton County Sheriff's Department uniform is Joe Reyes who started his new job as a deputy Feb. 1.

Reyes, 27, is fulfilling his childhood dream by working in law enforcement.

"Like a lot of kids, I had a dream as a kid to be a policeman," said Reyes.

The dream had to wait a while though. After graduating Central High School in San Angelo, Reyes received 54 hours of OSHA training and then worked for four and a half years in Tom Green County as a health inspector.

The job trained him in the the welfare of workers, doing inspections and the like.

Reyes attended the Concho Valley Regional Law Enforcement Academy in San Angelo where he graduated in the same class as new Sonora Police officer Tim Jarratt. Following graduation Reyes applied to various positions. around the area.

JOE REYES

Reyes said he was attracted to the Sutton County Sheriff's position because of the various responsibilities.

Smith. "I've always thought a lot about him.'

Bobbie said Herman's laugh and good nature is what stood out.

"(Being good natured) is a rare quality, most of us are too gloomy," said Smith.

Adelita Smalling spent six years as Herman's secretary in the JP's office before taking over as JP this

"I want to thank him now for encouraging me to run for JP," said Adelita. "He is one of the best bosses I ever had....He's been my second father, grandad and my kid's grandad. I learned what's right and what's wrong from him."

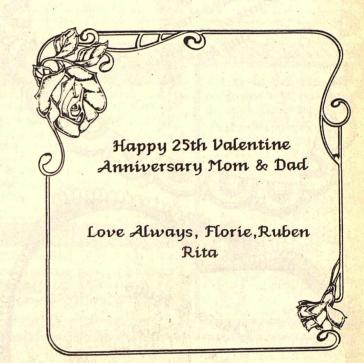

Charles Graves, Sutton County Auditor said, "As far as my Moore was then presented a plaque by his wife, Maedell, association with Judge Moore as which honored his years of Sutton County Justice of the Peace, it was his combination of experience, disposition and sense of fair play that made him a natural for the requirements of that office....Our personal friendship was always such a pleasure because of Herman's determination to see the good side of everybody."

Archie Crenwelge started as a trooper when Herman was the sheriff, but what stood out to Archie was his time as JP.

"He was as fair and as respectable as a judge should be," said Crenwelge.

The respect others give to Herman is based so much on his fairness. His lovely wife of almost 50 years, Maedell also sees it, "I just wish I could be as honest as
