PERILOUS PROPHECY

Prophecy has always been a perilous occupation, but never more perilous than in these days when things move so fast.

Perhaps you will recall that a few years ago, when radio was beginning to become so extremely popular, prophecy was freely made that "canned music" over the air would be the death of the amateur musician who likes to drum out his own music at home.

So what happens? So the first six months of 1937 are the best six months the piano business has had in the past 15 years, with almost 50,000 pianos shipped in the period.

This proves two things. First, the love of "roll-your-own" music is not so easily killed as some people thought. And that even pianos can be sold if the maker will adjust his product to today's needs—the small house and apartment, and today's price scales. Business can be had by those who go out for it aggressively and intelligently.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By RODNEY DUTCHER Reporter-Telegram Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The close-shave election of Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky as Senate majority leader is likely to prove more important than defeat of the Roosevelt court plan. It depends on the degree to which Barkley, who will go straight down the line for Roosevelt, can exert Senate control.

Roosevelt has had real results from the court fight—not only a licking for himself, the extent and effect of which are to be determined, but also in transforming a conservative court into a liberal court. It is questionable whether the court will again assume its erstwhile habits of vetoing legislation.

But the chief significance of Barkley's 38 to 37 victory over Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, is its accentuation of the fact that the southern Old Guard in the Democratic party is making what may or may not be its last stand for power.

This is the first time a Democratic Senate has had a leader who wasn't from the deep south and representative of its conservatism.

It is highly significant that the assistant leader will be Senator Sherman Minton of Indiana, who isn't a southern conservative but a forceful, militant, able New Dealer.

Once Had Battle Won

"POWER TRUST" agents, manufacturers' association lobbyists and Harrison's close friend, B. M. Baruch, lobbied reverently for Harrison and so did nearly all the bitter court plan foes. The argument that Barkley was liberal and hence would allow anti-lynching legislation to come up was hammered at southern senators.

But there was also fast action for Barkley from the forces of Roosevelt, who had declared his strict neutrality."

Harrison had the battle won until some time around the middle of the night before the caucus vote.

At that point Senator William H. Dieterich of Illinois, who had pledged his vote to Harrison on the Joe Robinson funeral train, was caused by certain New Dealers—apparently aided by some had-bolled Chicago politicians—to change his mind.

Dieterich is up for renomination and election next year. The inducements which were offered to him may in time be revealed.

Anyway Dieterich telephoned Harrison early in the morning to say he was withdrawing his pledge.

Many Broken Pledges

At least a dozen "double-cross" votes were cast in that caucus, representing broken pledges. With 38 votes necessary for a choice, Har-ison was "dead certain" of 41 votes, and the Barkley-Roosevelt forces had 43 pledges.

It was apparent after the secret ballot that some senators had pledged themselves to both sides. Harrison obviously had been definitely knifed by four of his pledges and Barkley by five of his. Other senators are thought to have deserted one man or the other, their desertions canceling off some from the other side.

One administration tactician had decided Barkley must allow for five double-crossers and hence must have 43 pledges. Every nerve was strained until Dieterich, a few hours before voting time, became the 43rd. When the Barkley vote appeared as a bare 38, insiders felt the tactician's prediction had been uncanny.

The 38 to 37 vote wasn't a real showdown between Roosevelt's Democratic senatorial friends and foes.

At least a few voted for the popular Harrison from pure friendship and memories of favors or associations.

12-Mile Hog-Caller

SOME things to know about Barkley: He is genuinely liberal but not radical, tremendously energetic, bull-voiced and forceful, ardently partisan, companionable, an excellent parliamentarian, a strong rough and tumble broadswordman on the floor, a friend of organized labor and broad-shouldered.

In his youthful farm days he is said to have had a 12-mile hog-calling radius. He is 59 years old and exercises enough to keep in good physical trim.

He was elected eight times to the House and twice to the Senate. He was known in Kentucky as a brilliant lawyer who had worked through college doing odd jobs. His home is in Paducah. He is well-read and always has been keenly interested in the Russian experiment. He has a singing repertoire of "Wagon Wheels" and a very few other old-timers.

Some of the pre-war most of the post-war railroad legislation bears his imprint or name. He has conspicuously opposed high tariffs and championed the "Lame Duck" amendment. He had a hand in the SEC act, the 1933 Banking act, NRA, AAA, and other New Deal laws — especially the Holding Company act.

Staunchest of all Roosevelt supporters, he successfully handled the $1,500,000,000 relief bill recently when Robinson broke away with an amendment which would have reduced proposed relief expenditures.

Harrison, meanwhile, was opposing Roosevelt on relief and often was apathetic on other issues. He refused to speak for the court bill, to whose support Barkley leaped at once.

Today Barkley has at least as good a chance to be nominated for President in 1940 as any other Democrat. Knowledge of this fact was responsible for some of the opposition to his candidacy for the leadership.

Kicking Carol Is No 'Incident'

Even though pert, personable Carol Lathrop, above, of Washington, D. C., strolled too close to Japanese defense lines in Peiping and, with another woman visitor, was kicked and handled rather roughly by Japanese sentries, the United States will not become embroiled in a "foreign incident," the State Department indicated. American embassy officials in Peiping will make representations to the Japanese embassy about the treatment of the Washington girl and Mrs. Helen R. Jones of Detroit, and end the matter, it was said.

was built when Tennessee was still a part of the Carolinas. Mrs. King also has two low post beds, in maple and very much alike. One has turn finials, the other acorn. They are three-quarter beds, much more modest than the high poster beds. Originally they were used in attics for an unexpected guest or a poor relative. Today they are prized for their simple beauty.

Made Before Spring
A maple hand-made bedstead, made before the days of springs, when ropes were tied across from side to side, stands in the home of Mrs. D. M. Oldham, Jr. The posts are eight feet, six inches in height. Mrs. Oldham also has three sizes of spool beds, of the type called Jenny Lind beds, and a day bed of black walnut, nailed together with black square topped nails. It had a chaise longue effect, lost when Mrs. Oldham had springs put in it. One of the bed stands found in the Oldham home is a low poster, with spindle posts. That, though not her most beautiful bed, is one of the most interesting. Mrs. Oldham found it in an old bar near the Mississippi river, painted white and standing in a corner. She bought it for a few dollars, had the paint removed and had it polished. It doesn't come under the heading of beds, but the small, red plush sofa in Mrs. Oldham's house deserves mention. It is of the type called a love seat, with tasseled fringe on the edges. One like it stands in the White House at Washington. She doesn't collect antiques of any sort and she's far more interested in contemporary things than she is in furniture, but Mrs. Lee F. Signor has several things

Novel Idea for Anniversary

Wedding anniversaries are milestones of happiness that deserves special observance, and while any anniversary gift may be appreciated, the most original one usually affords the most pleasure. An unusually gift, recently received by a couple on their tin wedding anniversary was a lovely bouquet of choice gladioli and fragrant carnations arranged in a tin watering pot. To this was tied a number of inexpensive tin articles such as a measuring cup, funnel, large spoon, cookie cutter, and of course, a can opener. Twisted strips of tin among the flowers added to the spirit of the particular anniversary and the arrangement with all the accessories was delivered on a tin tray. It is needless to say that the lovely bouquet sent in such a novel way gave a lot of pleasure to the recipients and friends who saw it. Other wedding anniversaries, from the paper to the golden wedding anniversary may be equally well remembered with seasonal flowers used in a novel way. Gladioli, delphiniums, and the other garden flowers are appropriate for such gifts as well as hothouse blooms such as roses and carnations.

Museum Has Interesting Collection Of Manuscripts

18th Century Books Are Valuable Items

BIG SPRING, July 26.—Since its foundation the West Texas Memorial museum has received either as gifts or loans 289 volumes and manuscripts. Some of the contributors to the museum library are: Mrs. James Campbell, a book of rituals, prayers and psalms of the Episcopal church of England, published in 1768; Mrs. Mary Bumpass, a Bible published in 1815; Mrs. Sallie Hart, a New Testament published in 1833; Mrs. J. W. Barnett, a copy of Webster's "Blue Back" speller, copyrighted in 1880; Mrs. Zaratonicis, a book of rituals, prayers, etc., in Greek language used in the Greek Catholic church in Greece published in 1857; a German Bible, 1889; Miss Purney Mason, a history of the war between the United States and Mexico 1846-48, published as soon as peace was signed; Miss Clara Allison, a copy of McGuffey's Fourth Reader, 1884; Joe Neel, an encyclopedia published in 1882; W. G. Haden, a Bingham's Latin Grammar, 1882. Oldest Book Joseph Moore presented the oldest book and most unique in its title "New and Elegant Amusements," published Jan. 6, 1701. The book was dedicated to the Queen of England by S. Harrington. The preface is addressed "To the British Ladies," and reads in part thus: "The amazing increase of dissipation of almost every kind, at present seems to fascinate our minds, and occasion an almost total neglect of those refinements so necessary to the real happiness of human beings; the heart enlarging and improving Sciences, at this time give way to a more trifling round of fashionable amusements." The printing is in old English and many expressions seem odd to modern readers. Other contributors are Edmund Notestine, Mrs. M. P. Thurman, Miss Marilee Hull, Mrs. Eddy, George Gentry, Miss Dorothy Burnett, B. L. Gentry, J. & W. Fisher Co., and Big Spring Herald. The

that collectors envy her. In Family for Years
There's an old four-poster bed in one of the bedrooms in the Signor home on South Sixth street that has been in the family for generations. It's solid walnut, with spool posts and a carved headpost. One of the oddest old things to be found in Abilene is the English folding rocker in which at least five generations of Signors have been rocked. It was brought to the United States by Mr. Signor's great grandmother, and nobody has any idea how old it was when she brought it over. It has a carpet bottom, and is covered with red plush. The back folds over the seat, then the whole thing collapses about the rockers. The things, still very new about which the Signors, the neighbors and a great many other people are adither about over at the Signors, however, are the Signor twins, 11-months old sons of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Signor, Jr. With the coming of curly-headed Charles and Jimmy, antiques in the Signor home have been forgotten, and two very contemporary youngsters take the limelight. Country Is Fertile Field for Columnist

BY GEORGE ROSS
NEW YORK.—Dear Chief: Is confession good for the soul? Well, then, here's the truth about this piece. I'm off my beat. The date-line is wrong and should read "RFD 5, Danbury" which is way off the main road and figuratively, a million miles away from Broadway. For along with several thousand other New Yorkers, this correspondent has succumbed to lure of the country. The bees, the birds and the trees seemed alluring when the mercury rose in the city, and, besides, lavish prospects for fishing helped bait your not-so-bucolic correspondent. And above all, night clubs were starting to pall, Broadway to look more garish and dreary and—well, we're in the country, and I wonder what the boys are up to on 52nd St. at this moment. The lake is wide and spacious—and stocked, the Fish and Game Commission solemnly vows, plentifully. Your correspondent hasn't caught any but Mr. Pauli, who runs the general store in town, says not to be discouraged. He confides that the fish take a little time getting accustomed to strangers. Sometimes take all summer sizing us up before venturing on to our hooks. Sounds like a reasonable explanation to me.

Tale of a Wiseacre
ANYWAY, it is only fair and honest, to let you in on the pastoral didoes you man has been up to for the past three week-ends. Yet these weekly a. w. o. l's from Broadway are not without their compensations to a daily scrivener of the Rialto's chaff. The man on the next acre told us a yarn this morning that will fit into a column one day. And the lucky thing is that the story can be pinned on almost any mid-night oasis in the Forties and Fifties.

It's the one about the Broadway comedian who attended dinner and found himself seated next to General Pershing. (I don't recall ever having heard it.) Appears that this comedian excused himself and went out into the main corridor where he met a more intellectual crouny. "Say," he explained anxiously, "they've seated me next to Pershing. What'll I say to him?" "Easy," counseled his pal, "just talk to him about his military achievements." Whereupon the comic sauntered confidently back into the dining room, sat down, turned to the General and airily queried, "Say tell me, General, were you in the war?"

Fertile Field
So these amateur efforts at out-doormanship are not entirely without their sources of material. The postman, who drops around once each day, helps out a little. He has just arrived with a bulletin forwarded from Manhattan, announcing the conversion of the New Amsterdam on 42nd Street into a movie grind house. And even at this distance, your correspondent can ramble on about the final disintegration of the once proud Forty-Second Street.

lution and what types you are apt to find in your immediate vicinity, and he does a first-rate job. Like all herpetologists, he is indignant at the unthinking antipathy of the average of you reviewers which leads so many people to destroy snakes indiscriminately. The United States contains only a few species that are dangerous; most of the rest have a direct economic value. Yet most of us account it a good deed to slay any snake we come across. Even the poisonous snakes, he says, could be worse. If you are bitten by a rattler, the chances are eight to one that you will recover even if you are given no treatment whatever; with treatment, your chances are 30 to 1. The moccasin is too remote to endanger many people; the copperhead simply does not have enough venom to kill a normally healthy adult. Altogether, "Snakes Alive" is worth reading. It should do much to promote a saner attitude toward these interesting and useful creatures.

Frank Crumit Is a Favorite for Fortune

Things have always come pretty easy for Frank Crumit, master of ceremonies of the Ford Motor Company's "Universal Rhythm" programs, which are heard on Sunday nights at 9 p. m. (EDST) over the Columbia network. It is probably because of this that Frank has such an easy-going, good-natured disposition. Stories told about most radio personalities stress the struggles that preceded stardom. They tell how hunger and want were suffered to make possible an education. They usually describe heart-breaking years until the Break came. Not so with Frank Crumit. And because of this, his case may be considered unusual. The son of a Jackson, Ohio, banker, Frank Crumit passed a relatively uneventful first went on the air in 1923 and was immediately popular. Since that time radio listeners have not permitted him to take lengthy vacations from the microphone. However, Frank does have a certain amount of spare time which he spends at his estate "Danrovin", outside of Springfield, Mass. While there, he plays golf, tennis, bridge and, in general, takes it easy. When he is in New York, he spends most of his time at the Lambs Club, of which he is Shepherd. Even strangers have no difficulty in spotting him among crowds at the broadcasting studios. He weighs 200 pounds, is slightly over six feet tall, is healthily bronzed, has blue eyes, brown hair, and invariably wears a smile. In "Tangerine," in 1913, Frank Crumit was playing the leading role. Opposite him was starred a charming young woman, Julia Sanderson. Since part of Frank's act was to sing love songs to Julia Sanderson, it seemed in order for them to fall in love with each other. The same ease of achievement obtained in the field of radio. He

Manush, Cast Off by American League, Is Staging Great Comeback In National

BY RICHARD McCANN
NEA Service Sports Writer
NEW YORK, July 15. — It was December and the night breeze was chilly, so the big fellow had his coat collar turned up and his hands crammed deep into his pockets as he paced up and down the station platform.

"You know," he said, and the moon shone on a face that was sort of wistful, "you know, you don't quite realize how much baseball means to you until they tell you you're through."

"Hell, I'd never given the thing a thought. I just thought, I guess, that I'd go on forever. But," and the big fellow stopped in his tracks as if to add emphasis to his remarks, "but I don't think I'm through. I'm good for a couple more years, at least."

The big fellow was silent for a second, hoping that his one-man audience would say, "Sure, sure, you're right," which is just what the one-man audience did.

"But," the big fellow continued, "I can't convince them club owners. Why, I been writing—or rather the missus has been writing—letters to all them in the last couple of months, but they ain't interested. None of them wanted me."

"That's how you come to run into me on this train. I been down there in Saratoga since the season ended and when the boys started drifting in there for the baseball players' golf tournament I just knew I couldn't stand to stay away from the game so I just upped and packed my bag and I'm a-headin' for New York to see a couple of them owners at the winter meeting. I can talk better than I can write and maybe I can get myself a job."

"And don't think I don't need one. You know, I got a wife and three kids... but, say, we better get back on—our train's gonna pull out."

Burleigh Grimes Gives Him a Break

AND Heinie Manush, former American League batting champion, hustled over and hoisted himself aboard the Florida, New York train on his search for a major league job.

It looked like a hopeless hunt. Washington had shipped him away to Boston in a trade the preceding year, and Boston had released him outright at the end of the season. His legs were bad, his back was sprained, his finger was broken and wouldn't mend, and his once-mighty bat was made of putty.

But Burleigh Grimes had faith in him. The newly appointed manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers thought that Heinie couldn't be any worse than some of those sandlotters poorly disguised as major leaguers who had been turned over to him. So Burleigh signed Heinie.

It was the smartest move the old pitcher has made as a manager. Manush has more than fulfilled his faith in him.

The strength, somehow, has returned to those legs that had wobbled, and the power is back in those wrists which had wavered, and the keenness has returned to those eyes which had weakened. And Heinie Manush is now staging one of the most remarkable comebacks in the history of baseball.

His playing has been a sight for sore eyes in Brooklyn, where sore eyes abound. He has been hitting around the 350 mark and is banging across runs at such a rate that he figures to send a hundred pals home this season.

Pitching Isn't Easier
—He Just Feels Better

"NO National League pitching isn't easier," says Heinie. "It's just that I feel better. I feel better than I've felt in 10 years. My pep's back, so's my confidence. Shucks, I had plenty tough luck there three years running.

"First I sprained that back and it gave me miseries for months. Then I strained my legs and I used to have cramps something awful at nights. I never knew when one of them pins was going to crumple under me out there in the field. Then I busted that finger."

"Well, sir, everything like to drove me crazy and naturally I couldn't hit 'cause I was worried.

"But when they told me that they didn't want me any more up there in Boston I said to myself, I did. 'You can't count out ole Heinie Manush like that, no sir, you can't. So I went to work and spent all last winter getting into shape."

"And I feel swell. Honest, I'm just beginning to hit—shucks, maybe I can win that National League batting championship, too."

"That'd be pretty good, huh, winning the championship in both leagues, huh?"

When Joe Cronin, Heinie's best pal in the big league, gave him his walking papers last fall, the baseball boys thought that Josephus was doing a most distasteful thing to an old friend. But it looks as if Josephus never did his buddy a better favor.

Stamp News

SEVERAL new United States stamps are in prospect. Designers have begun work on a new commemorative to be introduced Sept. 17 in recognition of the sesqui-centennial anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution. Philadelphia may have the honor of exclusive first-day sale. Likewise scheduled for the fall is the new Territorial series, to be dedicated to Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Meanwhile, Postmaster General Farley has announced that the 10-cent Smoky Mountain postage stamp of the National Park series has been selected as the central design for a souvenir sheet which is to be issued in connection with the 43rd annual convention of the Society of Philatelic Americans in Asheville, N. C., Aug. 26-28. The size of this souvenir sheet will be 2 7/10 inches by 3 1/10 inches, arranged vertically.

The Postoffice Department has indicated the inauguration of regular trans-Atlantic air mail as "a very likely probability" before the end of the year. It is practically certain that air mail postage will be 20 cents a half ounce.

Air mail service will be established on or about Aug. 17 between The Pas, Manitoba, and Herb Lake, Manitoba. Covers should be sent to the District Superintendent of Postal Service, Saskatoon, Sask., to reach him not later than Aug. 11. Rate is 6 cents a cover, payable by cash or international money order.

Stamp series eagerly awaited is that which will be issued by India in connection with the Durbar, the date yet undecided. India intends to make its coronation philatelic contribution when George VI actually sets foot for the first time in India.

NEXT: What country's colonial program was strikingly analogous to the Matanuska experiment in Alaska?

Vacancies exist at all posts and stations and in all branches of the service in the Eighth Corps Area.

Under the terms of the new provision inserted in the War Department appropriation bill for 1937-38, all persons enlisted for military service must be citizens of the United States at the time of joining the army. Prior to July 1, 1937, persons who had taken out first citizenship papers were eligible for enlistment.

The appropriation bill proviso also stipulates that no person may be re-enlisted unless he is a citizen.

Enlistment contracts of non-citizens now in the military service will be continued in force until the expiration date.

On July 1 the enlisted strength in the corps area was 27,750 and the authorized strength under the provisions of the bill authorizing an increase throughout the army to 165,000 men was 28,950.

New Quintuplet Books for Children Is Joining Ranks of 'Best Sellers'

By NEA Service

THE story of the Dionne quintuplets, in the form of an elementary reader for children, has joined the list of the world's child classics for use in the New York public school system, and, though only recently gone to press, is having the most spectacular sale of any child's books in the long history of its publishers, Thomas Nelson & Sons.

It is now assured that "The Quins' Book," written by Jean Ayer, authoritative author of books embodying the best principles of modern scientific child education, will have sold 100,000 copies by the end of the year, without counting orders from states which have adopted the book for their educational systems.

Heavy demands for "The Quins' Book" matches that for another elementary newcomer, "Mickey Mouse," on which Jean Ayer collaborated with Walt Disney, creator of the famous comic character of the movies. Written for first grade pupils, "The Quins' Book" deals with realities while the "Mickey Mouse" volume, for second and third grade pupils, describes unreal, fantastic situations intended to stimulate the imagination.

With scores of illustrations from the inspired camera of NEA's staff photographer, who has been recording the miraculous development of the five little sisters up in Callander, Ont., almost since their birth, the advance sales indicate that for the first time in the history of textbooks, one of them might be termed a "best seller."

STORIES IN STAMPS

MATANUSKA OF AUSTRALIA

FACED with the need for more lands and wider opportunities for its people, Great Britain hit upon a novel colonization scheme just 100 years ago, strikingly analogous to Uncle Sam's Matanuska settlement in Alaska. Britain tried out this plan in South Australia.

At a time when its land-grant system was proving fatal to emigration in Australia, a plan was evolved exchanging labor for land, and permitting purchase of lands for a small sum.

A tract of 16,000 acres was allotted the first 100 families, while a loan of 200 pounds each was made, by way of orders on merchants, to enable the settlers to purchase necessary equipment.

But the British went even a bit further. No money actually was used in the transactions. The earnings of the settlers and the value created by their labor was represented in the extent and improvement of their lands, the irrigation developed, the stock raised, and the general progress of the community. At the end of 13 years each settler was sufficiently well anchored to work independently thereafter.

So the great South Australia country took its place in the economics of the world—903,000 square miles, rich in gold, copper, agriculture. Today its 500,000 inhabitants thrive in many fields. The stamp below, issued in 1936, marked the centenary of South Australia.

Attractive Combination

Publication in New Zealand, Australia, elsewhere in the British empire, and in Sweden is listed for next month.

New York City's superintendent of schools, Dr. Harold G. Campbell, announced that "The Quins' Book" has gained educational recognition here by vote of the Board of Superintendents, and the Board of Education. But this is only a sample of what school boards in other states of the union are also deciding. The advance sales of the book for state adoption has been to date eight times that of the best-selling previous textbook.

Pictures and text make a thoroughly stimulating and attractive combination. The author has been motivated by the fact that these five children have been reared as no other youngsters ever have been. Their health, exercises, and play have been governed and developed by the best scientific principles known.

Read What They Like

The story of the Dionne quintuplets is unique, and of proved world interest. Children everywhere know about the little "Dionnes." And Jean Ayer, in presenting the story as an elementary textbook, has been influenced by the social study point of view.

It fulfills the most modern idea, that children learn easiest when most interested in what they are learning. On that basis, the mere task of reading about the quintuplets becomes a pleasure, and therefore easy.

But more than that, the lessons taught by the textbook are wholesome, kindly, sweet and happy. Little readers are introduced to a tiny world which is a practical laboratory of all the latest and best in scientific child training. The readers don't realize this. What they do realize, however, is that here are children living together in the happiest and most constructive way imaginable.

Pictures Are Appealing

The pictures are infinitely zestful, appealing, and varied. The readers see the quintuplets at play, at table, at "work", in all the variety of their busy, wholesome little lives. Playing in the snow, paddling in the heat of the summer sun, amusing themselves with toys of many kinds, responding as children will to the suggestions of kindly Dr. Dafoe, their guardian angel, and their nurses.

Even for grown-up readers, the little book is immensely interesting. For there has never been a pictorial subject in the world so continuously fascinating to so many people, so richly evocative of human sympathy, delight, and heartfelt pleasure as that of the Dionne quintuplets. And here is a wealth of pictures, beautifully reproduced, infinitely varied, on the world's most popular subject for photography.
