NEW LOCOMOTIVES....Santa Fe Railway is acquiring 100 new locomotives valued at $140 million, and painting them in the "war bonnet" design similar to that used on the railroad's former Super Chief luxury passenger trains.

"Super Chief" Look Returns To Santa Fe

Locomotives bearing a paint scheme reminiscent of diesels that pulled the railroad's former Super Chief luxury passenger trains will power Santa Fe Railway's premium service intermodal trains, Sr. Citizens Met Wed.

The senior citizens met for their regular luncheon on Wednesday, August 30 at the center.

The group enjoyed the covered dish luncheon and the special guest was Betty Cox of Amarillo, who met with them and told them about the Park Place Towers in Amarillo and the benefits of living there. She said it provides comfortable living space, with convenient services that fill up your time.

Present for the day and luncheon were Clifford and Julia Leake, Charlie Eubank, Maesie Flynn, Sid Lloyd, Ethel Johnson, Virgie Adams, Oma Lee George, Erma Bradshaw, Tom and Nannie Rhodes, Lillian Warren, Hattie Burnett, Joe and Reagan Looney, Buck and Dorothy Ellison, Minnie Kelso, Bessie Trimble and Betty Cox.

announced Santa Fe President Michael R. Haverty.

The new paint scheme, a modified version of the "war-bonnet" designed by General Motors and Santa Fe personnel for introduction of the Super Chief in the late 1930s, will be applied to 100 new locomotives valued at $140 million which are scheduled for delivery in 1990. "The Super Chief represented the very highest service quality and standards for equipment and personnel that Santa Fe offered," Haverty said. "In an obvious play on words, we are renaming our freight service the 'Super Fleet', to symbolize our commitment to our freight customers."

of 1990, 40 Electro-Motive Division (General Motors) GP60 locomotives and 60 General Electric Dash 8-40B models will be delivered in the new livery of red and silver with black and yellow trim.

"We plan to use the new red and silver locomotives on our high-speed intermodal trains, to distinguish them from our other trains, which will continue to operate with our standard blue and yellow locomotives," Haverty said. "These new locomotives will help us ensure that customers who want premium quality service get just that." Intermodal freight traffic now accounts for 40 per cent of Santa Fe's freight revenues.

The Super Chief was Santa Fe's flagship passenger train, operating between Los Angeles and Chicago from 1936 until Amtrak assumed passenger service on Santa Fe routes in 1971. It was a favorite of movie stars, and offered premium service on a schedule under 40 hours for the 2,200-mile trip.

In late June a pair of Santa Fe locomotives built in 1967 as part of the last order of diesels for use on the Super Chief were repainted in the red and silver design at the company's shops in San Bernardino, California. The remaining six locomotives of this class are also being repainted in the new design, for use on special trains as well as regular service until the new locomotives are delivered.

Committee Works To Curb Drugs

A new committee is in town. The B.A.D. committee is an acronym for Bovina Against Drugs. This committee was created to inform and educate the community about the drug and alcohol problems among our youth.

The goals of the committee include reduction of drug and alcohol use and abuse, reduction of the associated disruptive behavior and effective working relationship between faculty, administration and community to create a balanced school/community climate which allows for student learning.

Local people can solve local problems best. The only way the drug problem can be adequately addressed is for the entire community to be informed and involved.

The week of October 22 has been designated as Red Ribbon Week. The week will involve activities to promote drug awareness.

Members of the committee include Gary Coleman, Richard Grisham, Sue Nuttall, Estella Ortiz, Bob Owen, Sarah Owen, Genara Ruvalcaba, Deanna Salinas, Kenny Sherbon, Jan Thieman, Joe Rackley, Cecilia Tienda, Dennis Willard, Frances Willard, Colletta Young and Kathy Graves.

Watch for B.A.D. information in the weeks to come.

PCS Health Agency To Close Sept. 30

According to Johnny Raymond, Panhandle Community Services' Executive Director, workers compensation costs has forced the closing of PCS Home Health Agency which serves 25 counties of the Texas Panhandle. The decision made by the agency's board of directors will affect over 1,200 elderly clients and 2,000 immediate family members Panhandle wide.

Raymond stated that clients served by the agency are elderly, disabled and low-income. The services provided by the agency include: meals preparation, house cleaning, general errands, bathing, medication, physical therapy and doctor's orders for medical services. "These services paid for by the Department of Human Services and Medicare are designed to assist the elderly to stay in their homes and not be forced into convalescent homes," Raymond stated.

The PCS executive director stressed within the last seven months worker compensation costs amounted to over $91,000, in just the health related programs. The Department of Human Services does not allow for such unforeseen and uncontrollable costs. They are held to a maximum hourly rate for services. In addition, delays in payments from Medicare have caused our agency serious cash flow problems, Raymond stated.

Raymond said that of the 470 employees being affected by the termination, many are elderly people hired by the agency on a part-time basis. "These people are living on a fixed income and really depended on the 15 hours per week to supplement their meager earnings."

Panhandle Community Services, which has delivered home health to 25 counties for 15 years, has notified the funding sources of its intent and all contracts will be terminated September 30, 1989. "My hope is that another agency will assume this vital program and

30% increase is facing everyone beginning January 1, 1990." Every county in the panhandle and several hundred clients and their families will be affected by our closing of these services. Expenses of convalescent homes that our clients may have to enter will be devastating, much less the trauma of having to leave their homes. That would be the tragedy!"

COTTON IS THE STAR....James R. Supak (left), cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, and Pam Creel Alspaugh, manager of the broadcast bureau of Texas Tech University's Office of News and Publications, recently completed work on a videotape titled "Profitable High Plains Cotton Production." The 70-minute program examines current cotton research and demonstrates new cotton production techniques especially for farmers in the Texas High Plains. The program was supervised by Supak, produced by Alspaugh and funded by the Foundation for Agronomic Research.

Texas Tech University Has Cotton Videotape

Texas High Plains cotton farmers may want to add a television and VCR to their farm inventory--or at least a videotape entitled "Profitable High Plains Cotton Production."

The videotape is targeted specifically for cotton producers in the Texas High Plains, where one-half of the Texas cotton and one-fourth of the U.S. cotton is grown. Current research and the newest cotton production techniques are explained and demonstrated in the videotape.

The videotape is comprised of nine segments, each five to ten minutes in length. Topics discussed include land preparation; seed testing, varieties and stand establishment; growth and development; fertility; weed control; insects; irrigation; and termination.

James R. Supak, cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service (TAEX) and committee chairperson for the project, said qualified experts wrote the scripts and consulted in the production of the segments concerning their areas of expertise. Contributors' names are listed after each segment so viewers can contact them for additional information.

The 70-minute program is a joint venture between TAEX, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, Texas Tech University College of Agricultural Sciences and the U.S. Department of Agricultural Research Services. The Foundation for Agronomic Research funded the video project.

Pam Creel Alspaugh, manager of the broadcast bureau at Texas Tech's Office of News and Publications and producer of the series, said the program draws from 27 hours of footage obtained from area cotton fields, test plots and gins.

"The videotape is not just a review of standard production practices. Each segment focuses on new research and new techniques," she said. "For instance, the segment about irrigation demonstrates the new Low Energy Precision Application (LEPA) irrigation system and the segment on land preparation deals with conservation tillage."

For more information about the videotape or to obtain a VHS copy, write to Cotton Video, Texas Tech University, News and Publications, Broadcast Bureau, Lubbock, Texas 79409-2022. A $10 check payable to Texas Tech University covers the cost of the videotape and postage.

If the thought of flying doesn't scare you, how about the thought of flying with a pilot who's addicted to cocaine?

According to a series of articles by a Pittsburgh newspaper, drug addiction among airline pilots is not at all uncommon.

The newspaper's series was the result of a phone tip from a frustrated doctor.

He told of a pilot who'd been rushed to the hospital near death from an overdose of cocaine.

A survey of the area's hospitals proved this was not an isolated incident.

Upon further investigation, reporters learned that screening flight personnel for drug use was forbidden. And that the FAA medical exams didn't mandate blood and urine analyses so drug use couldn't be detected.

They learned scores of pilots were receiving treatment for drug abuse.

The newspaper's story brought the problem to the attention of the public.

The public was outraged. And demanded immediate reform.

As a result, several reforms were initiated. Among them, the development of more extensive FAA medical exams.

Reforms that may never have occurred if it hadn't been for a couple of reporters pursuing a story.
