Hope Rises For Ones on Lost Liner

Mountainside Scar 45 Miles North of Fresno Discovered

FRESNO, March 3. (P) — Hope that some of the nine persons aboard a missing Transcontinental and Wester airliner might have survived was aroused today when Bud Rhodes reported he heard what he believed was a plane crash Tuesday night and then heard two shots. Rhodes was at his cabin at Bass Lake, 45 miles north of Fresno at Searching parties concentrated attention today on a mountainside scar 60 miles east of Fresno.

The scar, estimated by searchers a mile and a half distant as 200 feet long, was apparently gouged out of the mountainside 60 miles east of here in the high Sierras. Unexplained lights were in the vicinity of the mark and a white object, undistinguishable in the gathering gloom,

Discovery of the possible clue was reported by a party of 20 that included newspapermen and two employes of Transcontinental and Westenr Air, Inc., operators of the big silvery plane.

Raging storm waters in the north fork of the San Joakuin river prevented the party from crossing and approaching closer to the objects

DEPENDABILITY IN MEN . . and Coffee

It's of those Texas cowboys, a story I'll tell; No name I will mention though in Texas they do dwell. Go find them where you will, they are all so very brave, And when in good society they seldom misbehave.

When the fall work is all over in the line-camp they'll be found, For they have to ride those lonesome lines the long winter

They prove loyal to a comrade, no matter what's to do; And when in love with a fair one they seldom prove untrue

They will ride into the branding pen, a rope within their hands. They will catch them by each forefoot and bring them to the scrices; It's altogether in practice with a little bit of sleight, A-roping Texas cattle, it is their heart's delight.

But now comes the rising generation to take the cowboy's place, Likewise the corn-fed granger, with his bold and cheeky face;

It's on those plains of Texas a lone buffalo hunter does stand To tell the fate of the cowboy that rode at his right hand.

-From THE LONE BUFFALO HUNTER.

Loyalty, dependability and devotion to their duty are qualities inseparably associated with the cowboys of the Southwest. Dependability counts for a lot, too, where coffee is concerned—and that quality in Admiration Coffee has long been a matter of pride with its roasters.
