Support of Mexico Goes To Cardenas

All Legal Steps to Be Exhausted by the Losing Oil Industry

MEXICO CITY, March 21 (AP). — United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels Sunday asserted "my information is that the majority of Mexicans are with President Cardenas' backing expropriation of the $400,000,000 foreign-owned oil industry."

The United States envoy indicated American and other foreign companies would have to exhaust all legal appeal steps before they could expect diplomatic support in fighting expropriation.

Daniels discussed President Cardenas' Friday decree while oil workers took over the industry as "trustees" for the government.

He said Washington had been informed fully of the meaning of the expropriation decree but that he had made no recommendations for action.

"The usual rule," the Ambassador said, is for aliens considering themselves damaged "to exhaust all legal resources" before asking their own governments to intervene.

Had Expected Other Steps.

He disclosed that oil men had expected "the appointment of intervenors or receivers" instead of the drastic expropriation step which he said had caused "a bad effect on American business here generally."

Although formal notification of President Lazaro Cardenas' decree expropriation yet had to be made, union leaders lost no time in ousting officials of the 17 American, British and other companies and taking their places.

"Provisional councils of administration" were formed by 31 localities of the oil workers syndicate to keep the industry moving.

A threatened general strike of the country's 70,000 miners apparently was averted by the government's appeal to labor to avoid conflict with employers.

The strike threat came as an outgrowth of the American Smelting and Refining Company's difficulties with its 19,000 men.

These difficulties had led to speculation whether Cardenas' next move might be to expropriate the foreign-operated mining industry. War Effected Peacefully.

Reports reaching the capital said the oil industry change-over generally was effected peacefully.

Hanchwang Falls To Japanese in Hand To Hand Battles

SHANGHAI, China, March 21 (AP). — A sanguinary hand-to-hand struggle in which Japanese troops were reported to have captured Hanchwang, Monday carried the south-bound invasion along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway to the southern limits of Shantung Province, twenty-seven miles north of Suichow.

This fierce offensive, going into its seventh day, was directed at Suichow, vital rail center of the central front, conquest of which might turn the Chinese flank and link conquered North China with Japanese-dominated territory in the Yangtze Valley.

Chinese and Japanese casualty reports indicated 30,000 soldier had been killed on both sides during the one-week drive.

The Japanese asserted their foe had abandoned 7,000 bodies in last week's retreat from Linchun, north of Hanchwang.

The Chinese at the same time reported two heavy flanking attacks against the invaders, one directed at the Tientsin-Pukow line in the interior and the other, both along the railway in Shantung Province.

In the latter sector the Chinese said heavy casualties were inflicted on two divisions, with Japanese corpses piled up in heaps after the assault. The Chinese said the divisions were forced into retreat northward.

Suichow, junction of the north-south Tientsin-Pukow and east-west Lumphai Railway, was bombed twice by Japanese planes to prepare for land assaults from the north and south and possibly the east.

A Japanese force forty miles east of Suichow threatened to cut the Lumphai spine of the central front, near Yunbo, and split into two divergent columns.

One would occupy an eighty-mile stretch of the railway from Yunbo to the China coast and the other would mop up westward to Suichow for an attack on the rail center from the east.

Poles Ready to March Into Lithuania, If --

More men march across the face of trembling Europe, this time to the Polish-Lithuanian frontier. The photo shows some of the Polish soldiers who may soon see action against Lithuania. Despite full acceptance by Lithuania of all demands made by Poland, the latter country continues to mass troops along the frontier in a huge war rehearsal which observers fear is a step toward forcing toward new concessions from Lithuania.

Professor Aids in Book About Snakes

NACOGDOCHES, Texas, March 21 (AP). — Dr. Hal B. Parks of the biology department of Stephen F. Austin teachers college has been requested by Dr. Howard K. Glyod, director of the Chicago academy of sciences, to lend material for study in connection with Dr. Glyod's efforts to complete a handbook on snakes of the United States.

Dr. Glyod, who collaborated on the handbook with Dr. Frank N. Blanchard until the latter's death in September, 1937, wrote Dr. Parks that the pine belt region was not well represented by snake specimens in the various museums and he desired specimens from this area.

Dr. Glyod said he and Dr. Blanchard had been insistent, as they worked on the handbook, to make the ranges of species as accurate as possible by basing them almost entirely upon specimens actually handled by them or definitely known to be correctly identified.

Dr. Parks indicated he would cooperate with the academy in its request.

U. S. Builds Heavier Submarines to Meet Attacks from Ship Depth Bombs

WASHINGTON, March 21 (AP). — The new U. S. submarine "Snapper," second of a series of six 1,350-ton underwater craft authorized in 1934, is said to possess improvements which to a large extent overcome the defects that made the German U-boats vulnerable to depth charges during the World war.

Reports from survivors of disabled German submarines indicated that depth charges rarely caused serious damage and that relatively small improvements in design would greatly offset the effects of underwater bombs.

Among the suggestions were that submarines be made heavier. The German U-boats were generally of about 1,000 tons. It is believed the additional tonnage in the new U. S. submarines is chiefly a result of this knowledge.

It is estimated that about 38,000 depth charges were dropped by Allied ships in their desperate fight against submarines, but only 38 of the underwater craft were sunk. Thus, an average of 1,000 charges were used to destroy one U-boat.

Ice Fishermen Consider Bass Hardest to Catch

SUBURRY, Mass. (UP). — Ice fishermen contend that the bass, because of its extreme youth, is more difficult to catch in winter than are other fish.

Scientifically speaking, the bass is many million years younger than pike or pickerel, which feed voraciously on fishermen's bait during cold months.

Being younger, the bass is susceptible to cold, so lies dormant in winter.

Plan Monument for Goodnight's Grave

GOODNIGHT, Tex., March 21 (AP). — Col. Charles Goodnight's unmarked grave may have a monument soon.

The most colorful of high plains ranchers of pioneer days has rested since his death in a little cemetery in the town that bears his name.

When Vance Johnson of the Amarillo News wrote that the Goodnight grave was unmarked, contributions started. A newcomer to the plains, who requested that his name not be made public, was the first to contribute. He mailed a check to Johnson and asked that a campaign for a monument be started. Others have made donations and the fund is approaching $100.

Col. Goodnight, known as the father of the Panhandle, founded the famous JA ranch in the Palo Duro canyon when the plains country belonged chiefly to the Indians and the buffalo. He established the vast ranch for the Adairs of Ireland and the estate still operates it.

Col. Goodnight preserved the only herd of plains buffalo and several of the shaggy beasts still roam the JA range.

Several books have been written about the famous cowboy and his pioneering activities on the plains but there had been no previous moves to place a monument at his grave.

The Colonel's old dug-out, his first home in the Palo Duro, has been preserved.

Ruins of bombed buildings yielded 145 bodies during the day. Previously, 670 dead had been counted from the raids which started Wednesday and kept up for two days and nights.

Rescue workers continued digging day and night for additional bodies. Some estimates placed the dead as high as 1,300. The wounded numbered more than 2,000.

New Annual Contest By WTCC Suggested

WICHITA FALLS, Texas, March 21 (AP). — The West Texas chamber of commerce will inaugurate an annual contest, with a $1000 award to the West Texas county with the best record in soil and water conservation activities, if proposals are approved, as is expected, at the twentieth annual WTCC convention here in Wichita Falls, April 26, 26 and 27.

Annual awards in the contest, expected to begin with the 1938-1939 year, will be based on soil and water conservation improvements, row cropping, terracing and contouring, eradication of mesquite and prickly pear, listing and clearing farm and ranch land, and other practices.

H. H. Williamson, director of the state extension service at Texas A. & M. College, will submit rules for approval of the WTCC agricultural committee, D. A. Banden, WTCC manager, said today.

The winning county will use $250 to stimulate boy and girl club work, and will act as custodian in awarding the remaining $750 for counties in all of West Texas.

"Results from this contest may easily influence the topography of West Texas," Banden said.

Rt. Rev. Mnsgr. Patrick J. F. O'Beirne, chairman of the convention religious activities, announced today that Dr. Stephen McKinney, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, Houston, and former Wichita, will speak at the union church service, on Sunday afternoon, April 24, in Memorial Auditorium. This service will open the convention activities.

Sweetwater became the second city to enter the lists for the 1939 convention, when the Board of City Development voted to launch a campaign to get next year's meeting.

Big Spring previously had voted to bid for the 1939 honor of playing host to the WTCC. Big Spring entertained the convention in 1933, and Sweetwater in 1932. Abilene and Waco may also enter this contest.

Roswell, N. M., was first to enter the annual contest for the best completed 1937 activities program. McKinney, pastor of the Denver lists in the contest to select the best 1938 activities program.

2 McCamey Men Killed in Wreck Near San Angelo

SAN ANGELO, March 21 (AP). — For the second successive week-end an automobile wreck in the vicinity of San Angelo placed two persons in the hands of death.

H. W. Owens, 29, and L. E. Tenison, Jr., 25, McCamey, employees of West Texas Utilities Co., died in a local hospital Sunday morning from injuries sustained when the car in which they were riding struck a bridge eight miles west of Mertzon on Highway 10 a few hours before.

Both Owens and Tenison were rushed here shortly after the mishap about one o'clock. Owens died at 4:15. Tenison lived until shortly after 11. Attending physicians said each suffered a fractured skull and other severe head injuries. Owens' left leg and both of Tenison's were broken. Each received lacerations about the head and body, doctors said.

Passers-by brought Owens' body here. A local ambulance took Tenison's body from a private car three miles west of Tankersly.

State Patrolman J. T. Ellison, who with Hugh Shaw investigated the crash, said last night that no official report of the cause of the wreck had been made. Ellison, however, said he was of the opinion that the driver had gone to sleep and the car had left the road. He reasoned that Tenison was under the steering wheel after studying the injuries.

Goodby Gay Vienna! Heil Stern Adolf!

The Nazis have finally extended their benign guidance to what used to be Austria and gay, dreamy Vienna henceforth may be about as gay and dreamy as Philadelphia on a dreary winter Sunday.

One of the major tragedies of the Hitlerization of little Austria is the certainty that the be-good-or-be-beaten discipline that the Nazis so dearly love will be imposed on her capital, Vienna, where for many centuries good food, beautiful women and gay dancing have been considered among the most important things in life, may feel the puritanical influence of the Nazi reform mania.

Wiener schnitzel will be broiled in some imitation butter, because the Nazis must have guns instead of butter. The beautiful women will be sent to camps to learn farm work or they may be told that their place is forever in the home, for they must be ready to do their solemn bit when the big war comes.

Leisure, long looked upon as an art in Vienna, will of course be something to be forgotten for there can be no unemployment—much less anything like leisure—in a Nazi state. In short, the Viennese must stop having fun and be quick about dedicating their lives to the greater glory of Herr Hitler and his ideas of how the world should be run.

In this befuddled world the Nazis are true missionaries. Nothing makes a good storm trooper happier than the knowledge that he has changed the way of living of some erring soul and brought to him the stern light of national socialism. And right there you have the aspect of Nazism that is more irritating to a lot of people than the more sinister phases of the government.

The Germans used to be just about the world's jolliest people. It was a rare German indeed who was not dominated by the spirit of genuetlichkeit. But Herr Hitler apparently has changed them into a nation of crusading zealots.

Not long ago it was even decreed that the Germans would consume no bock beer this spring. Got away with it, too. Whatever you think of Der Fuehrer you must admit that he accomplishes things no man ever dared dream before the advent of the Nazi regime.

But when Herr Hitler finally gets everything he wants—which is quite a bit—what then? Will the German people be happy? Ordinary human beings—and that is just exactly what the Germans fundamentally are—ask more pleasure of life than the Nazis are willing to permit.

So for the present: Heil Hitler, Vienna, and forget all those champagne parties, grand balls, and the light and carefree spirit that made you famous. As the capital of a Nazi state you now have a mission, and the fulfillment of that mission leaves no room for the enjoyment of living.

Music Hath Charms

Because the WPA furnishes free music, what was once just about New York's toughest neighborhood has become very social minded. Indeed a window may not be smashed for days at a time. The youths who used to run in the gangs are down at the Boys' Club dancing with their girls.

A very respectable dance it is, too, each young man bringing his own young lady and stags being forbidden. Admission is free and a Federal Music Project orchestra plays. The dances are held at the Boys' Club at 321 East 11th street. Oldest institution of its kind in the world, the club was founded nearly 70 years ago by E. Roland Harriman, Sr. Mr. Harriman was visiting in the neighborhood when a rock crashed through a window in the room where he sat. His hostess explained that the boys engaged in such activities to use up excess energy.

Clyde Bingham, superintendent of the club, says that this new chance at recreation means a lot to the youths in that section, where most of the families are on relief. And so a WPA project that might seem pretty useless under other circumstances turns out to be a good thing.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

Editor's Note: The opinions expressed in this article are those of Mr. Dutcher, NEA-Reporter-Telegram Washington correspondent, and are not to be construed as expressing the editorial policy of The Reporter-Telegram.

WASHINGTON, March 21. — Some Washingtonians with long memories have no trouble recalling the time a few years ago when Mr. Richard Whitney was telling congressional committees about the New York Stock Exchange's right to self-regulation and its ability to protect investors from dishonest practices.

That was when Mr. Whitney was president of the exchange, long before he had been finger-printed and had pleaded guilty to charges of first degree larceny. Congress disregarded Mr. Whitney and created the Securities and Exchange Commission with powers much larger than Mr. Whitney and his associates desired it to have.

"We have brought this country to its standing in the world by speculation," testified Mr. Whitney before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. "I claim that this country has been built by speculation, and further progress must be in that line."

It was Mr. Whitney's unfortunate speculation in stock of an applejack concern which led to speculations which led him to hoosegow door.

Labor Political Handbook. THE major political parties have no hand book on "How to Organize and Conduct a Labor Political Campaign." Their politicians know all about that from experience. Labor's Non-parisan League is in the nature of a new political party and it has just published such a pamphlet as a necessity for local groups.

Learning a lesson from such defeats as that of the C. I. O. municipal ticket in Detroit, labor political strategists emphasize necessity of "winning a majority of the electorate to an understanding that labor is genuinely interested in the welfare of the community as a whole. . . . Since organized labor is seldom a numerical majority in any community, to win it must have support from other elements in the population. It is not difficult to demonstrate that the interests of the so-called middle class voters: professionals, small merchants, etc.

are, on analysis, identical with those of organized labor. The issue, in broad terms, should be stated in terms of progressive and efficient government."

Complete With Card Index. THE league gives specifications for questionnaires for candidates, publicity campaigns, radio arrangements, speakers' bureaus, literature.

SENATOR J. HAM LEWIS of Illinois: "Mr. President, it is reported that a distinguished senator of the United States lately called a newspaper office on the telephone to announce the fact that twins had been born in his family, an event in which the senator took considerable pride."

"The girl answering the telephone did not quite catch what he said, so she said to the senator, 'Will you repeat that?' 'Not if I can help it!' he quickly observed."

advertising, organization of ward and precinct workers with card index systems of voters, electioneering, rallies and parades. Automobiles to take workers to polls and light meals to be served by women for polling booth watchers are among the many items recommended.

"Make your calls at convenient hours for householders," house-to-house canvassers are advised. "Neither mother nor father is in the morning. For women, the best hours are from 1:30 p. m. to 5 p. m. and for men, 6:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. Avoid meal times. Use women as well as men canvassers for this work."

Lipstick Troubles. MRS. ELEANOR ROOSEVELT, who seldom has complained of publicity, nevertheless has been fussed by the newspaper attention attracted by her ventures into so-called hair-bobbing and use of cosmetics.

Judge Likens Auto Crash To Ring Bout in Decision ROCHESTER, N. Y. (UP).—City Judge William H. Tompkins can use his imagination to the extent of describing an automobile accident as a boxing bout.

Using pugilistic vernacular, Judge Tompkins wrote a 1,300-word treatise describing a two-car crash. The "bout" was declared a "draw" by the jurist, who ruled that both drivers were negligent and refused to award damages to either party.

In one corner of the "ring" was a salesman and in the other a minister. "Each contender for the 'championship,'" said the judge, "confidently rushed toward his opponent, foregoing the usual preliminaries of feinting, dodging or ducking. The result was an unexpected and disastrous meeting in the center of the arena. Each took the count. There was no second round."

Jurist Holds Record For Not Holding Court

NEW ORLEANS (UP).—Judge H. C. Cage of the civil district court holds a record—for not holding court.

Taking the bench for the first time in local judiciary history with nothing to judge, Cage came in the courtroom promptly at 11 a. m. He bowed to the attaches who had to be there. They returned the bow. The judge nodded in the direction of the spectators, but there weren't any. He glanced at the attorneys' chairs which were vacant. He verified the absence.

"Are there," he asked, "any motions from the bar?"

Court Clerk Herbie Rosenmeier confirmed the judge's suspicions. "Judge," he replied, "there isn't any bar."

Cage left the court, having done nothing but set a new record.

The play was a success in New York City last year, receiving the highest award of the Drama Critics Circle. It is of especial interest to New Yorkers because it deals with the modern world and the phantoms of the old Dutch settlers. Its setting is in the heart of the Hudson valley. MIND Your MANNERS

T. M. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

1. May a guest comment on the food he is served in the house of a friend?
 2. When offered a serving dish in which there is both a serving spoon and a fork, how should one help himself?
 3. Is it wrong to say "thank you" when taking food offered by a servant?
 4. Should a helping of food be taken the first time it is offered?
 5. Is the host as much responsible for guests as the hostess?
- What would you do if—
- When you are a hostess, a guest brings up a subject which you feel should not be discussed—
- (a) Change the subject abruptly?
 - (b) Say "Let's not go into that?"
 - (c) Change the subject as soon as you can do it easily?

Answers.

1. Favorably—Yes. Especially if one thing is particularly good, or he knows the hostess is proud of the way she cooks a certain dish.
2. By holding the fork in the left hand and the spoon in the right.
3. No. But it is not necessary.
4. It is better to take food the first time it is offered and make a pretense of eating it than to refuse it.
5. He should feel just as responsible, though his duties are different from hers.

Some Day, by Ruby M. Ayres: A love story which carries you back to that most thrilling time of all—when you were seventeen.

The Education of Hyman Kaplan, by Leonard Q. Ross: Mr. Kaplan had a logical mind, and to him it was reasonable that the verb "to fall" should be conjugated "fall, failed, bankrupt." His valiant struggles with the English language staged in the American night preparatory school for adults, and his rivalry with Miss Mitnick, the star pupil have delighted readers of the New Yorker as they appeared in that magazine, and are now collected in book form.

Royal Flush, the Story of Minette, by Margaret Irwin: The fortunes of the family of Charles I, after the king's execution by Cromwell, are the subject of this historical novel. The central figure is Minette, youngest sister of Charles II, who, by her marriage, united the courts of England and France. The book is historically truthful and vivid, and it tells a fascinating story.

The Proud Servant, the Story of Montrose, by Margaret Irwin: Stirring adventures and accurate history in a novel of the Marquis of Montrose, who rallied Scotland to Charles I, and was hanged, drawn, and quartered in Edinburgh.

Miss Bunce's Book, by D. E. Stevenson: The New York Times Book Review says: "This delightful book is such a gentle, simple, mildly satirical tale that its flavor cannot be fully captured. . . It will not bring roars of laughter, but rather it will generate a series of ever-deepening chuckles. . ."

Miss Bunce Married, by D. E. Stevenson: Again Miss Stevenson has succeeded in creating characters so real and typical as to be rare, instilling her writing with humor and understanding of human foibles and eccentricities which makes this book, as it did Miss Bunce's Book bubble over with high spirits.

Tish Marches On, by Mary Roberts Rinehart: A new book of "Tish" stories: In one, she goes to the Coronation—in another, she spends one whole night hunting through the city of New York for a mouse—in another, she goes big game fishing from a blimp. Brisk, adventurous, ridiculous.

"You're known as a great Camel smoker, Mr. Shaw. Are they really so different from other cigarettes?"

"Yes, Ben, I think that Camels are a lot different. That's why they're the racing drivers' favorite cigarette. You see, a cigarette has to have something out of the ordinary to score such a hit with fellows like us. As I always say, there are so many things that mean a great deal in smoking. One big angle that carries weight with me is that Camels agree with me! I've smoked a good many thousands of Camels in the past 10 years, so I know that from experience."

SHAW is saying how important healthy nerves are to a racing car driver. "The fact that Camels don't get on my nerves scores a big hit with me," he points out.

Camels are a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic

"Camels are preferred by the tobacco growers, who know leaf tobacco from the ground up" according to the observation of tobacco planters themselves

"I'VE BEEN planting tobacco for twenty years," says Harry C. King, a successful grower. "Camel bought the choice lots of my last tobacco crop—paid more for my best leaf tobacco. So I know they use finer, more expensive tobaccos in Camel cigarettes. That's one mighty good reason why my cigarette is Camel."

THOMAS MIDDLETON and his twin brother James have been growing tobacco for 14 years. "The Camel people bought up my best tobacco last year," Tom Middleton says. "They have for 12 years. When anyone talks about finer, more expensive tobaccos, that means Camels to me. I smoke 'em—my brother smokes 'em—and so do most of us around here who grow and know tobacco."

"DOWN AT THE tobacco warehouse they told me they'd never seen finer tobacco than my last crop," says J. E. Jenkins, veteran tobacco grower. "Camel bought all the top grades. It just shows that the Camel people make sure to get the choice lots of tobacco. I prefer Camels every time. I know what those finer, more expensive tobaccos in Camel cigarettes mean to smokers."

Uncovering More Power at Plate is Casey Stengel's Biggest Problem With the Bees

Third of the series from the spring camps. . . .

By Harry Grayson, Sports Editor, NEA Service.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 21.—"That's more runs than the club scored all last season," cracked the inimitable Casey Stengel, as his 35 Boston Bees crossed the plate in single file for newsreel men.

That's Stengel's problem — scoring runs.

When he moved to Cincinnati, hasn't the slightest idea where additional punch is to come from unless Max Edward West crashes the outfield or Robert Wayne Kahle supplants the agile Rabbit Warstler at shortstop.

West and Kahle may do. West hit .330 in his second year with the Mission Coasters last term, and Kahle compiled a .306 average for Indianapolis at the tender age of 21.

While he may be totally unable to solve National League slants, a .336 average in the Cotton States League in 1936 is further evidence that Kahle may be headed somewhere. He came up as a third baseman, but is being drilled at shortstop, which position he played when he broke in with Danville in 1934.

But Stengel, who was paid $18,000 last year for not managing Turner had spent 12 years in the minors and Pete mine when Jack McCallister, who once guided the Cleveland Indians, plucked them out of the American Association. But they quickly made up for lost time by becoming National League standouts in their first campaign in the big show. Each bagged 20 engagements.

Turner's earned run average, .238, was lowest in the senior circuit, and Pete wasn't far behind with .238.

If this pair keep going and the respected MacFayden can get back in the 17-game class in which he placed himself in 1936, enemy swatsmiths seldom will get fat against the Bees.

Scout McCallister is accountable for another oldtimer, John Niggeling. This right-hander's record with Kansas City and Newark was nothing about which to get excited, but McCallister declares that he flashed more stuff in relief roles

The aggregation's success with last trip. The club also has pitchers of parts in Frank Gabler, erst-while wisecracker of the New York Giants, Ira Hutchinson, and John Lanning, all right-handers.

The Bees should obtain as good or better catching as any club in the business from Alfonso Lopez, Ray Mueller, and Johnny Riddle, up from Indianapolis. And looking to the future, they have Stanley Andrews, a 20-year-old Lynn, Mass.

The PAYOFF

We will have baseball! There is only one catch, and it should be easily ironed out. And it is: Two thousand tickets must be sold for the first three days—immediately. But the persons who put up the money for the 2,000 tickets will be given the entire gate receipts for the first three days.

With an opening day crowd, a Saturday crowd and a Sunday crowd to draw from, it looks like a swell opportunity for some one to invest money for a very short time with prospects of swell returns. Any money above the price of the 2,000 tickets taken in during the first three days will go to the baseball club, but that $2,000 will be put in circulation here as the down payment of approximately 10,000 other dollars that will be turned back into circulation before the season is over.

Pincher E. Withers, holder of the Midland franchise said today that he positively would guarantee lights would be installed in the park if the 2,000 tickets were sold.

Positive assurance that lights would be installed in the park is all that has stopped the sale of the tickets to date—now that the check rein is off they should be sold soon.

Already, more than 900 of the tickets have been subscribed for. Selling the additional 1200 should not take more than a few hours.

Withers said this morning that he would like to have a decision tomorrow night in order to give answer to a proposition from another town. But additional time will be granted, if necessary, if Withers is assured the tickets will be sold. Another town has offered Withers $1500, plus his opening day sales to move the Midland club there. But he reiterated previous statements that he was anxious to remain here and has left the decision squarely where it should be—upon the shoulders of the baseball fans.

Anyway, the ticket sale will be resumed again today and a final decision will be known by tomorrow night.

DiMag' Should Improve.

The infield is great defensively with Elbur, Fletcher at shortstop, Tony Cuccinello at second, Warstler at shortstop, and Gilbert English at third, but the latter topped them all at bat last season with .289. Cuccinello hit .271, Fletcher .247, and Warstler .223.

Joe Walsh, up from Rocky Mount with a batting mark of .296, is said to move nicely at shortstop, but he probably is a year or two away, and is in Boston having what is feared to be a trick knee treated.

Vince DiMaggio is one of the slickest center-fielders in baseball, and Stengel looks to see him improve his batting mark of .256 now that he is accustomed to National League ways.

Roy Johnson is a potential .330 hitter, and should improve the .277 he compiled last season. The Tacoma Indian has stolen 133 bases in the 1136 major league games that he has played in nine campaigns.

Turner and Fette pitched the stingless Bees to fifth place — just one game behind the Cardinals in 1937.

Their steady right arms and pitching intelligence may enable them to better that this trip, provided the resourceful Casey Stengel can find something to use for base hits.

Trio of Leading Hurdlers of Nation To Appear at Meet

AUSTIN—Three of the nation's greatest hurdlers—Forrest "Spec" Towns of Georgia, Allan Tolmich of Wayne university and Sam Allen of Oklahoma Baptist—are scheduled to appear before the Texas relays crowd here April 2.

Allen and Tolmich are co-holders of the Texas relays' high-hurdle record of 14.3 seconds. Allen first set the mark in 1935 and Tolmich tied it last year. They will be matched here April 2, according to Director Clyde Littlefield's present plans.

An opponent for Towns has not been named, as the former Georgia star now coaches at his alma mater and therefore is technically a professional. Littlefield is mainly interested, however, in having Towns demonstrate the unorthodox form that has been criticized by various stylists but has been good enough to carry him to national and world records.

Official entries were received during the week from the University of Oklahoma, East Texas State and nine Texas high schools—El Campo, Midland, Rockdale, San Angelo, Wharton, Bastrop, San Antonio Tech, Lockhart, Thomas Edison of San Antonio, Bryan and Carrizo Springs.

Other university class teams definitely in the relays are Minnesota, Nebraska, Louisiana State and Oklahoma A. & M. In addition Indiana, Missouri, Kansas and Drake are tentatively in the fold, and the Southwest conference schools always are represented.

The Minnesota Gophers plan to reach Austin about March 21, 12 days before the relays, to finish their training and get acclimated.

Little Business Men are Mighty Busy; The Question Is Where They're Heading

By Willis Thornton, NEA Service Staff Correspondent. CLEVELAND. — When the Little Business Men met in Washington in early February, they started something.

Nobody is quite sure just what they started, but Fred Roth, local wholesale shoe man who was chosen permanent chairman of the Small Business Men's Conference, has been startled at some of the results.

Organizations of "small business men" have been springing up like mushrooms ever since the Washington meeting. There are at least two in New York City, Rochester has one, Boston, Akron, Columbus, O., South Carolina, and West Virginia have seen such organizations a-borning.

"The small business men," says Roth, indicating a pile of wired inquiries on his desk, "should be wary of a certain type of profession organizer, some of whom are now making their appeals over the radio and through the mails, and whose only interest in small business is their own personal gain."

Look Out for Shake-Down.

In short, Roth believes that promoters with more initiative than ethics are likely to seize on the "little business men" agitation to shake down a lot of $5 and $10 memberships in ephemeral organizations which will be, at their best, just another lobbying organization or pressure group, and, at their worst, a sheer racket.

While the Washington conference was still in session, one enterprising small business man was recruiting members of the permanent organization at $1 a head, collecting nearly $1000 among delegates. And ever since then, organizers in various parts of the country have sprung avidly to translate into organization the sudden self-consciousness of little business men.

When the Washington meeting adjourned, it was left up to Roth to organize a permanent conference of small business men comparable to the advisory council of big business men who present their suggestions regularly to the Commerce Department.

Not So Easy.

Fred Roth

supplementary aid when the situation gets personally out of hand, there are literally thousands who through delay have made it impossible for medical science to render its best service and thus were penalized by a protracted illness, a chronic disease, or the premature termination of life.

"It follows that many people, with great profit could surrender this 'isolationalist' idea and appreciate the physician for what he really is. When his abilities are more generally given an opportunity to be applied early, when his advice on living habits is sought, and when he is considered as the only person to be relied upon to conserve health and treat illness, then, then only, will the present remarkable service that medical science stands ready to give be afforded its maximum opportunity for good."

Self Sufficiency During Illness Can Be Much Overdone

AUSTIN—One of the traditional American economic-personal virtues has long been that of self sufficiency. But one situation in which the trait of self sufficiency can be overdone is during illness, states Dr. Geo. W. Cox, state health officer.

"He who treats himself has a fool for a doctor" is a phrase which should strike home at a good many Texans. Too many of our citizens, when indisposed, jump at conclusions as to what is wrong with them, and go to the corner drug store for a bottle of advertised medicine.

This ignoring of the existence of physicians and relying upon self-diagnosis is a bad gamble with ill health. For these persons, for all practical purposes, have isolated themselves as far as medical service is concerned.

In fact, they persist in this ignorant or careless complacency until they become acutely ill, when at last they call for professional medical service—which frequently is too late.

"It is indeed too bad that so many persons deliberately raise a barrier between themselves and the family physician. Considering him only as

Little has been done toward such a permanent conference, although 10 committee chairmen in various parts of the country, working with Roth, are sounding out the situation.

To organize a really representative council of small business men is harder, Roth points out, than similar action among the "big boys". For instance, it is comparatively easy to conceive that Alfred Sloan might represent the unified point of view of the motor industry. But how do you find a one-arm lunch-room proprietor, for instance, who represents restaurant proprietors all over the United States.

Roth, who used to be president of the National Association of Credit Men, and thus has a wide acquaintance all over the country, confesses that the problem is difficult, and one which he hasn't solved yet.

Must Tread Carefully.

He believes organization of any such council must proceed in a careful and orderly manner. Neither mass meetings of assorted business men, nor general membership organization open to all who will pay a fee, will really do the job, he believes.

"If small business men organize in such a way as to constitute themselves merely another pressure group, going down to Washington with their hands out for whatever they can get for themselves," says Roth, "it will be useless. There are too many pressure groups now. Unless the movement is unselfish and seeks in Washington what in the opinion of small business men is best for the country as a whole, it cannot be worthwhile."

Michigan to Be Ready For Smelt Run in April

ESCANABA, Mich. (UP)—Early April heralds the coming of the annual smelt run in the 10 great smelt streams here when millions of silvery fish travel up the streams to spawn.

During the height of the run, fish may be dipped up by the bushel. Dipping is done at night, since smelt move to spawning beds only after dusk. About 600 tons were harvested within a week in the region last year.

Woman Earns Profit From Alaska Directory
SEATTLE (UP)—Miss Varde Bras, who reputedly knows more about Alaska men, women, children and dogs than anyone in the world, has made a business success of an Alaska directory. Miss Bras operates her directory at the New Washington hotel. She started it because throat trouble forced her to give up vaudeville singing two years ago. The service has a branch in Fairbanks. "I handle mail and business deals and all sorts of things for people in Alaska," she said. "I keep records of confidential things in code, and I never tell about people's whereabouts unless I know they want them known. So people trust me and tell me where they are going and how long they are going to stay."

The grand prize—$50—will go to the fisherman who produces the picture of the heaviest fish. Four second prizes of $12.50 each will be awarded from the remainder of the total $100 in cash. The entries are to be mailed to Lloyd Ellingwood of Toledo, who is in charge of the contest.

U. S. Offers Information On Fettering Out Coyotes

WASHINGTON (UP).—For 5 cents the Department of Agriculture will tell anyone how to find a coyote's den.

MEN AREN'T WHAT THEY USED TO BE

... when it comes to CARVING

says Dorothy Greig

IN the days of our fathers, men proudly boasted of their skill at carving. Indeed, such skill was expected of a husband. It was part of his job as a good provider. I can remember the delicate precision with which my father carved roast or fowl. Having served all abundantly, he would observe complacently, "There, and one side hasn't been touched yet." (That was saved for second helpings.)

The members of today's generation have fallen far from grace in this respect. They don't even seem to know how to hold a carving knife, fork or steel, let alone wield them.

Only the other day I heard an attractive widow remark: "You know, Jerry has a bad heart and so when he comes to dinner I always serve something that requires no carving." I thought of various men of my own acquaintance, sound of limb and wind, who nevertheless exhibit all the symptoms of heart failure faced with roast or chicken to carve. (And with what anguish their wives watch them splash and splutter and spot the clean tablecloth!)

The following savory dinner dishes are recommended for these times when you feel extra kindly and merciful toward the supposed-to-be carver in your midst. They require no carving! Just lift from serving dish and set on plate.

Chicken and Mushroom Casserole
One 4-lb. roasting chicken
2 tablespoons fat
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 cup hot water
1 can condensed cream of mushroom soup
3/4 cup milk

Have the butcher disjoint chicken and cut in pieces; brown in the hot fat and then put chicken in a casserole. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and pour 1/2 cup hot water in bottom of the casserole. Cover and cook in a moderate (350 degree F.) oven for 1 hour to 1 hour and 15 minutes. Then mix the milk with the condensed cream of mushroom soup and heat but do not boil. Add this to the chicken the last 15-20 minutes of cooking. Serves 6.

The next one holds no terrors on the score of carving either. And besides, it's a delicious way to serve steak.

Potted Swiss Steak
2 pound round steak, cut 1 inch thick
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons fat

A delicious chicken-and-mushroom dish for dinner that requires no carving.

3 slices onion
1 cup tomato juice

Cut the steak into individual portions and dip in the flour which has been mixed with the salt and pepper. Pound the flour mixture into the steak with wooden potato masher or edge of heavy plate. Melt the fat in a pan and saute the steak until brown. Then put the pieces of meat in a casserole with the slices of onion and the tomato juice, heated. Place the casserole in a moderate (350 degree F.) oven and bake one hour to one hour and a half, depending on thickness, cut and tenderness of meat. Serves 6.

Veal is a flavorful, tender dish cooked just right and spiced with tomato sauce. You will notice that we suggest placing the cutlets in the sauce instead of pouring the sauce over them. That's because the cutlets are brown and grandly appetizing looking. So why cover them up? It makes sense not to.

Veal Cutlets with Tomato Sauce

2 pounds veal steak
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 egg
Bread or cracker crumbs
1/4 cup fat for frying
1 can condensed tomato soup

Cut the 1/2 inch veal steak into individual pieces for serving. Then sprinkle with salt and pepper; roll in flour, dip in egg (beaten slightly with 1 tablespoon water added). Then roll in fine bread or cracker crumbs. Saute slowly in the melted fat until well browned, allowing about 15 minutes to each side.

Tomato Sauce

Heat condensed tomato soup just as it comes from the can. Pour the hot tomato sauce in a platter and place the golden brown veal cutlets in the sauce. Garnish with parsley. Serves 6.

employees described as having "wide experience."

Some coyotes, the leaflet points out, show great cunning in refraining from killing lambs near their dens and will pass sheep herded near their den to raid another several miles distant. Contrary to popular belief, the male coyote is as destructive as the female. Young and Dobyns found tracks of males more in evidence than those of females near a fresh kill.

Archaeological Sites in Texas are Inundated by Buchanan Dam Waters

AUSTIN.—When the federal government developed the Colorado river project for the construction of a series of dams across the river in the hills above Austin, Prof. J. E. Pearce of the department of anthropology, University of Texas, became concerned at the prospect of seeing what he termed "many of the richest and most important archaeological sites in Texas inundated and lost to science for all time." He made application early in 1936 to the Works Progress Administration authorities for approval of a project to explore as many of these sites as possible before they should be finally covered by water. The project was finally set up in January, 1937. At present the Buchanan lake has nearly filled with water, and all work in that basin has ceased. A. T. Jackson was made reconnaissance officer and field supervisor, and A. M. Woolsey, field foreman in charge of the labors of the crew.

"Jackson located and mapped over 50 sites on the west bank of the river only," Professor Pearce said. "He did not finish the reconnaissance on the east bank, but located a number of large sites on that side, some of which were worked. Nearly all sites are near the mouths of creeks. This is due to the fact that the red floods of the Colorado render the river water undrinkable often for weeks on end, while the perennial small mountain streams are never muddy for longer than a few hours at a time. At the same time, the mussels, fish, bathing, and canoeing of the river kept the early inhabitants from living long away from it. Undoubtedly much camp refuse, deposited near the river in periods of drouth and low water was destroyed or carried away in floods, while that deposited on the high terraces or along the small streams accumulated undisturbed through the centuries. The resulting middens often show archaeological stratification, as indicated in this report.

"The above mentioned facts indicate the importance of the sites explored. The early inhabitants, from the time this region was first occupied by man to the coming of the white man, lived along the river and chiefly about the mouths of incoming streams. These sites are so situated that practically all will be covered by the projected lakes which will extend from Austin, following the river bed, about 150 miles."

In his report of the explorations and excavations in the Fall creek sites, in the basin of Lake Buchanan, Jackson declared: "Attempting to tie up archaeology with any given tribe, or tribes, is usually a hazardous undertaking in Texas. There is no assurance that the early prehistoric occupants of these Fall creek sites were the same as those found in the region by the first white explorers. Even for the historic period the task is difficult, due to the constant shifting of the nomadic and dispossessed tribes. It seems worth while, however, to point out certain facts that may tend to throw some light on the possible tribal relations:

"While the bottom level, or oldest, culture manifestation, shows the manufacture and use of comparatively few artifacts, those present are so nearly identical with the ones found in more abundance in the next higher stratum as to suggest merely a continued development of a single culture. Large numbers of crude, heavy projectile points, or dartheads, in lower levels, suggest long use of the atlatl in this region.

"Many of the oldest types of artifacts remained well into what seems to have been the early historic period. Since the Tonkawa Indians are known to have inhabited this part of the Colorado river drainage in early historic times, it is certain that they left some of the articles carrying cultural evidence. Then there appeared evidence of the intrusion from the west of certain culture traits, such as the edged mano, a mortar hole in the bed rock at a nearby site, and others possibly traceable to the Apaches or their predecessors from the lower Pecos river region.

marked change in material culture. An occasional European trade article filtered in. Trade relations with the Texas coast resulted in the introduction of a few conch and Oliva shell artifacts, as well as pottery. "The first occupants were driven out or absorbed; a new group took possession. Burnt-rock middens ceased to accumulate, and finally were covered in places by later deposits. But mussels, as indicated by their shells, continued to be a more important food supply than animal meat.

"An extended burial in a crevice of the bluff suggests at least temporary occupation by the Comanches. Perhaps they returned many times over a period of a century or more. They probably left the saddle that was found buried in the bluff.

"Raids and horse-stealing forays may have brought the latter-day Apaches, also, to the place for short periods.

"From the available archaeological evidence, it seems that there were two major culture periods represented at the Fall creek sites: First, that of the original occupants, extending over a long period of time; second, late prehistoric and historic occupants who shifted rapidly.

"At various stages in these two broad periods there were intrusions from the west, east, and south. From the west appear to have come edged manos, mortar holes, carved stones, painted pebbles and obsidian. From the east was received pottery and probably the bow and arrow. From the south also came pottery; likewise, conch and Oliva shell artifacts; and perhaps some asphalt.

"The finding of a number of culture traits almost identical with ones in the Edwards county region indicates a route between the two points along the Llano river, then from its mouth along the Colorado river to Fall creek sites.

"The presence on the Colorado river below Austin of several large non-burnt-rock middens containing pottery, finely made arrowpoints, and a large number of manos suggests the route by which many of the intrusions from the south and east may have entered the Llano-Saba region.

"Although containing various alien elements, the cultural pattern seems to tie up most closely with the burnt-rock midden area of Central Texas.

"Despite the fact that the materials from this region are vastly different from those in the Mississippi drainage, one can see here a resemblance to the Woodland and Mississippi cultural patterns set up by writers from the Midwest. It might be stated that the main culture here treated is roughly of the Woodland pattern, with slight intrusions of the Mississippi pattern."

NAMES in the News

Names make headlines. Newspapers, today as always, are made up of what people say, think, propose, dissent from. Governments, institutions, businesses—and all their activities—are only the lengthened shadows of men!

What is true on the front pages is true, also, on the advertising pages. Advertisements are simply signed statements of men, banded together to form a business, who seek your patronage. They back their good name against the products they ask you to buy. They say, in cold black type, that theirs is a name you can trust.

People who get the most for their money in the market-places are people who know the value of familiar, trade-marked products. They buy with confidence. They buy by name—and save time, tiresome searching, and money! Are you doing likewise?
