Safety Programs in Industry Pay Human Dividends

Safety education pays dividends, for industrial deaths dropped from a probable 35,000 in 1913 to an approximate 19,500 in 1937. Furthermore, 285,000 people escaped occupational death and 28,000,000 more were saved from disabling injuries during the 24-year period; all industry put together has made good a decrease in cas-ualty rate of some 18 per cent. To establish this remarkable record took the combined efforts of welfare agencies and insurance companies, of government and in-

'No dollars-and-cents figures can express what this has meant in reducing suffering, bereavement, lost opportunities, and blighted lives," declares Henry Morton Robinson, writing on industry's accident problem in the Rotarian Magazine. "Yet employers have also found that decreasing industrial risk is vastly profitable. The United States Steel corporation, for example, shows that an expenditure of 25 million dollars for safety protection and education has made good a saving of 117 million dollars in injury claims alone, not to mention the reduction in labor turn-over, lost time, and slowed production."

Industry's accident problem, varied as industry itself, divides into two classes: the slow injury to health due to bad working conditions, and the sudden jeopardizing of life or limb from purely fortuitous circumstance, according to Mr. Robinson. Safety engineers today are constantly on the lookout for unsafe practices and unguarded machines. More important than safety precautions is proper clothing such as special gloves, shoes, goggles, helmets, acid-resisting pants and aprons, asbestos suits, and masks for noxious gases and for dust.

To eliminate unsafe practices, which cause about 90. per cent of the accidents, according to the Metropolitan ten by Mauritz Hallgren, a support-Life Insurance company, programs of safety education er of his opponent, Congressman which appeal to the workman's pride are being conducted Davis Lewis. Vowed to Conquer Golden Peru

RUGGED adventurer, Francisco Pizarro first sailed for America in 1509. Four years later he had settled on a small land-holding in the new city of Panama, and from there he began a series of explorations to the south of the isthmus which convinced him the country was enormously rich.

But not until 1531 was Pizarro, with a small band of Spanish soldiers, able to invade Peru. He found the Incas in a virtual state of civil war. Atahualpa had completely defeated the forces of his brother, Huascar, and had taken him prisoner. Atahualpa was encamped at Caxamarca on the east-ern side of the Andes. Pizarro set out for him with a force of only 102 foot soldiers, 62 horsemen and two small cannon

Pizarro captured Atahualpa in the Caxamarca public square, but instead of releasing him after payment of a huge ransom in gold, he executed the Inca leader for refusal to embrace the Christian faith. Then, with re-enforcements he entered the Peruvian capital, Cuzco, Nov. 15, 1533, stripped it of its hordes of gold, set up a puppet ruler, and proceeded to arrange conquests of other Peruvian cities. Meanwhile, for protection he built Ciudad de los Reyes, the present Lima. But by now the Incas were thoroughly

Tammany Rode Crest Under Tweed, Setting All-Time Swindle Record

Rout That Followed Exposure Was Worst Hall Ever Suffered, But, As Usual, Reform Didn't Last

The Jimmie Hines trial is the current act in an old drama. This is the second of three articles recalling other historic clashes between reform groups and Tammany Hall.

NEA Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Tammany Hall as it has been known to the present generation did not blossom to its finest flower until the '70s. The intervening years from its founding in 1789 had been spent in gradually perfecting its political technique and expanding its base from that of a "middle-class" organization headed by bankers and merchants, to one in which the growing immigrant class, largely Irish, was dominant. The immigrants of the '40s and '50s, ignored by the political parties of the time, found sympathetic refuge with Tammany. And they
