All Blocked Roads Broken Through by Highway Workmen

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M. Jan. 10 (A)—New Mexico counted three dead last night in the wake of a paralyzing snowstorm which halted automobile traffic over a wide area in the north-central section of the state and left dozens of motorists stranded in their cars Sunday night Fears that some travelers might still be marooned were dissipated when state police and highway crews brock through all blocked highways and reported everyone

Gov. John E. Miles said 14 stalled cars located by an aerial survey of U.S. Highway 285 had been found to have been abandoned two days ago when rains made the unpaved route dangerously slipper

The frozen body of Feliciano Duran, 40, a sheep herder, was found in a snow bank near Encino. One man died in an airplane crash and a third in an automobile accident, as the 24-hour storm left snow ranging from nine inches to two feet deep over a wide section

State police said some of the rescued motorists were suffering from frozen hands and feet, but none was in a serious condition.

State police and highway crews were dispatched by the governor Sunday night into the teeth of the storm to carry hot coffee, gasoline and food to motorists, and to patrol

By night, a warm sun and state highway forces had opened all routes except U. S. 285 between Lamy and Encino, U. S. 60 through mountains between the Arizona line and Magdalena, and 260 around

On the New Mexico-Colorado line south of Trinchero, Colo., the crush-ed body of Lieut. Wallace E. Nau was found in the wreckage of his plane where he had crashed in the storm Sunday night on the rimrock

Undersheriff Byrch Telford of Raton, N. M., and Colorado and New Mexico deputies posted a guard over the wreckage pending arrival of army authorities from Lowry

Government Economy Begins at Home

The spontaneous applause which greeted the reference in President Roosevelt's message to lessened government expenditures is going to echo down through the entire session of

The President himself immediately pointed out the dilemma. Economy of the Coolidge type, saving pencil-ends and writing on both sides of the paper, won't do. Budgets of today's kind would never feel a dent from that kind of cheese-

If government expenses are to be cut, and the Republican side of the chamber indicated by its applause that it approves, there must be real and drastic reductions in major government activities. The President indicated that present activities and functions of government must be reduced as much as one-third if real budget-balancing is to be achieved.

The applauding Republicans, while not a majority, are conceded to occupy a position of power in regard to what shall be cut. It will be interesting to note their choices.

Farm aid? Quite a lot of new Republican congressmen were elected by farm votes. Will the Corn Belt Liberty League be able to assuage the burning drought that might follow cessation of the "gentle rain of checks"?

Rivers and Harbors? Traditional of the pork-barrel! Will economy-seeking congressmen be brave enough to concede that even the item from the home bailiwick of Goose Creek is unnecessary? Flood control? Every canceled project means men out of Highways? People live along every route crossed off the improvement list. People who vote.

Aid to veterans? Will these congressmen prove braver than the ones who passed the pre-payment of the bonus over Roosevelt's veto?

Social Security? Will Republican congressmen elected by Townsend votes be likely to want to curtail it? WPA? Heavily under fire as a political adjunct, criticized as a morale-shattering dole and a public waste, the tide of protest against any possible reduction is already rising, especially in labor and radical papers.

Yet the only way to reduce is to reduce. The applause of opposition members may yet echo in their own ears as they face the deadly realities of the carrying out of policies which the electorate appeared to approve in so many sections in the lost election. The hardest thing for congressmen to realize is that reduced federal expenditures must begin, like charity, at home. And no congressmen who is unwilling to see a reduction of federal funds spent in his home district can congratulate himself on the appliance that leaped so lightly in his hands at the early session.

These, nevertheless, usually do not find a place in the picture of lobbyists as etched in the average citizen's mind. When someone says "lobbyist" John Q. Citizen more often thinks probably of a fat man puffing a big cigar and fingering a roll of greenbacks behind the shelter of a huge capitol column. He thinks of efforts to corrupt legislations by hired representatives of moneyed interests.

For Argentina is virtually an empire in itself. It is almost one-third the size of the United States. With only one-seventh of the total seventh of the population, Argentina commands one-half of the business, owns 60 per cent of the automobiles, nearly 50 per cent of the telephones, provides nearly 60 per cent of the passengers and freight carried by rail, spends more on education than all of the rest of the republics together.

Source of this power is the vast Argentina pampas, the fertile plains that produce one-third of the world's wheat supply and onefourth of the world's wool. Corn and beef are becoming major exports of the Argentine likewise. and already in the United States farmers are learning the extent of the republic's agricultural pro-
