SO THEY SAY

Unlimited Optimism Shunned; More Practical Viewpoint Is Developed

(Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.)
A vastly different viewpoint from that of the graduating classes of a few years ago characterizes the students receiving their degrees from the colleges and universities of the nation this spring.
The graduates of today are neither so confident the world is waiting for them with open arms, nor are they so sure it is their duty to take that hoary old sinner "Humanity" and tell him how to change his ways and attain happiness.
Upon graduation, it once was customary for seniors to deliver orations and essays in which they expressed the most noble purposes and the most confident intentions of remodeling the world. They expressed generous and unselfish hopes of rendering service.
They heard commencement addresses which often informed that happiness and success were theirs for the taking and the world could not do without their services.
The youths of today usually do not tell the world how to mend its ways, because the world will not listen. They do not believe the speaker who tells them the world is waiting with open arms, because they know they are being graduated in a period of uncertainty and adjustment.
They shun the unlimited optimism once attendant to graduation and instead look forward to the realities of life. They expect not flowery orations but facts from speakers.
Most of the graduates of Texas Technological college, along with those of colleges and universities throughout the nation, ask no favors except the chance to prove their abilities.
They have developed a more practical viewpoint toward the future—and hence are far better prepared to meet the practicalities of the future.—Opal McMahon.

Anything But That!

(An Editorial from the Rotarian Magazine.)
Cherished among the many legends of the Spanish-American people of New Mexico is the story of San Ysidro.
It seems that San Ysidro was plowing his garden one spring day, when an angel appeared and said to him, "The Lord wants to see you, Ysidro. Come with me."
Ysidro plowed on. "I can't go now," he answered. "You tell the Lord that I'm late in getting my corn planted and that I'll see Him later when I've finished."
The angel nodded and disappeared.
Soon another messenger hovered about San Ysidro's plow. "The Lord wants to see you right now," he said. "And if you don't come, the Lord says He'll send hot winds and drought to wither your corn."
Ysidro paused only long enough to wipe the sweat from his brow. "I've had hot winds and drought before, and they don't bother me," he said. "I can carry water from the river. Tell the Lord I can't come now, but will see Him when I have my corn planted."
Baffled, that angel, too, vanished.
A few moments later a third angel, larger and sterner than the other two, tapped Ysidro on the shoulder. "The Lord doesn't like your attitude," the heavenly courier said. "He says if you don't come with me right now He'll send a plague of locusts to devour your corn from the top and a plague of cutworms to eat its roots."
"That doesn't frighten me," answered Ysidro, turning his plow and starting back. "I've had plagues before, and with fires and hoing and hard work, I've saved my corn. You tell the Lord I'll see Him tomorrow."
And so the third angel flew away.
San Ysidro had plowed several furrows before the fourth messenger glided to earth.
"The Lord isn't going to argue any more," the angel announced, flapping his wings hard to keep up with the stubborn plowman. "He simply said that if you don't come with me right away, He'll send you a bad neighbor."
Instantly San Ysidro stopped his mule and wrapped the reins around the plow handle. For the first time there was fear in his eyes.
"A bad neighbor!" he shouted. "No, no! I can stand hot winds and droughts, locusts and cutworms—I can stand anything but a bad neighbor. I'll go with you right now."

Texas Today

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
This is the time of the year when Texans see snakes, not those halucinations of the cup that cheers, but flesh-and-blood reptiles, many of them equipped with rattles.
Although extensive cultivation has destroyed the rattlesnake's shelter in many sections of the state, there remain areas where there are enough rattlers to menace man and beast. Even in Bell, one of the best cotton-growing counties in the state, some 5,000 rattlers were killed last year when commissioners court offered a bounty. Most of the snakes came from the cedar brakes of the western part of the county. In a nearby Lampasas county where a 20-cent bounty was offered, several thousand were killed.
Nothing is so disconcerting to a cotton picker or a corn-top binder as the thought that a rattler may be coiled under the next cotton plant or bundle of fodder. That is one reason why north and east Texas negroes are not keen about picking cotton in the coastal region. Mexicans take their snakes more philosophically; it is the will of the Almighty.

But all farm hands have a morbid hatred of snakes which extends to the destruction of harmless, some beneficial—species.
Soldiers in the Mexican war, many from the old south, wrote home graphic accounts of the Texas rattlesnakes. Thomas Bangs Thorpe, in "Our Army of the Rio Grande," (1846) wrote:
"They (the rattlesnakes) glided through the long grass, striking terror to all, and crawled by hundreds into the camp of the soldiers, coiling themselves under the blankets, a location they seemed to prefer to any other among the army equipment. So numerous were these serpents that the soldiers humorously took the precaution to shake their knapsacks in the morning, to know if they are occupied. Occasionally the ear would be saluted with a noise resembling the pouring of shot into a tin cup, and that knapsack was treated accordingly."

A pioneer hunter recalled how he overcame the rattler's penchant for crawling under his blanket. He used a pack-hair comb (a larva made of plaited hair) to encircle the blanket which formed his bed.
"No snake will crawl over this," asserted this hunter.
This idea later spread to the use of a manila rope for a similar purpose. However, the efficiency of the method remains a topic of argument among oldtimers. Another question on which there is some disagreement is whether deer and wild turkeys kill rattlers.
August Santleben, who freighted cotton from Columbus to Eagle Pass during the civil war, said that near Uvalde he saw wild turkey gobblers killing a rattler. They flew over the snake, swooped suddenly and with their wings thrashed the rattler to death.
"It was their custom," said Santleben "to eat the snakes killed in this manner."
That is one way of getting rid of rattlers, of course. Another way was demonstrated by the zoo management of San Antonio in recent years. They chopped up some rattlers, fried them, and served them to tourists at so much per slice.
Santleben recalled also that deer killed rattlers by jumping on the reptiles "with fore feet brought together, the hoofs cutting like a knife."
But the settlers living in areas where turkeys and tourists had not eaten the rattlesnakes did the next best thing. After the rattler struck, they applied something. "The Emi-

SUBMARINE IN WAR-TIME IS TARGET FOR ENEMY AND FRIENDLY SHIPS ALIKE

BY LIEUT. COMDR. HARLEY COPE, U. S. N. Veteran Submarine Commander (Written for NEA Service).

EVEN a disaster such as overtook the Squalus is nothing compared to what the crew of a submarine might experience in war-time.

For the Squalus men could at least hope that sister ships would come to the rescue. But a submarine during war is a vessel without friends.

Even friendly ships, upon sighting a "pig-boat," will shoot first and investigate afterwards!

SUB'S TROUBLES MULTIPLY.

FROM the day early in the war when Lieutenant Otto Weddinen of the German Navy with his U-9, startled the world by sinking in quick succession three British cruisers, much in the manner of popping pet ducks on a pond, the dangers and difficulties with which the submarine was confronted grew.

The German submarines during one phase of the war threatened to clear the Allied shipping from the sea and starve England into submission. The Allies frantically sought to locate an antidote for the poison that was threatening their very existence.

Several things then begin to react unfavorably for the U-boats. The Allies devised large depth charges, explosive that either literally blew the subs out of the water or shattered the nerves of War on the seas! The sub's captain has sighted an enemy vessel—so down goes the "pig boat," as in photo at top, in preparation for an attack. But there's always the dangerous moment before complete submersion when the periscope leaves the telltale feathery wake, as in photo below. The enemy, sighting the hated wake, may let go a charge to blow the sub to smithereens.

scope observation the sub is placed on the firing course and again slowed to a minimum speed.

During the second observation the convoy has drawn much closer and the Skipper notes the location of the screening destroyers and he mentally pictures which ones will most likely cause interference with his attack.

After a series of plots of the location of his target, its speed is fairly well established — and the time for the kill draws near. All torpedoes are made ready for firing.

The periscope cannot be left exposed too long for fear of betrayal.

The alert sound man in the submarine warns the Captain that the target is drawing near. The bearing on which the assistant has figured the torpedoes should be loosed to hit.

A few seconds later the submarine trembles as each powerful torpedo goes hurtling out of the tubes in pursuit of its target. The submarine cannot for the time being see the result of its handiwork for it is at a depth that will keep it from the eyes that will now be desperately seeking it.

TOMORROW: The dramatic history of the submarine.

Fragile as it is, the submarine requires a "mother ship" to supply it and minister to its needs. Photo shows U. S. subs nesting near the submarine tender, Holland.

torpedoes? The Captain of the attacking submarine has sighted the masts of his intended prey on the horizon. Fearful that his presence might be disclosed to aircraft ahead of the ships, the Captain signals for a "quick dive."

Convoys were large groups of merchantmen in formation and controlled by a Naval officer. Off on the flanks of the convoy were speedy, alert destroyers and cruisers, eager for a glimpse of the tell-tale feathery wake of the submarine.

Sight of the wake was the signal for an immediate deluge of huge, death dealing depth charges. To make the problem even more difficult for the submarine seeking a prey, the convoy pursued a zigzagging course while in U-boat waters.

The result was that toward the latter part of the war the submarine was made practically ineffective.

With such difficulties to be expected during war, we have endeavored to give our personnel real wartime training to overcome the weaknesses that lessened the value of the submarine in 1918.

grants' Guide" suggested the application of "A bright hot coal to the wound or the bruised leaves of rattlesnake's master."

The guide did not describe "rattlesnake's master" but Capt. James Hobbs, in "Wild Life in the Far West," wrote that the Comanches know of a snake-weed which abounds everywhere rattlesnakes are found. Hobbs described it as "a running vine or weed with a small blossom that resembles a rattlesnake's eye. It could be used as a tea or a poultice."

Hobbs suggested "also take out the snake's liver, cut, and spread on poultice over wound."

Boy, 2, Toddles Mile To Run Trolley Car
NEWTON, Mass. (U.P.) — Two-year-old Kenneth Morrison is a young man of action, to say nothing of ambition.

Aspiring to operate a trolley car, he toddled from his home to the Watertown car barn a mile away. But as he tried to clamber aboard a parked trolley and take over the motorman's job, police interfered.

But he did get a ride home in a police cruising car, something he also had wanted to do.

Fred Fromhold and Wallace Beery graduated together from a Kansas City grammar school. Fred says Wallace was always an easy going, happy-go-lucky sort of fellow. If he made his grades it was fine. If he didn't, it was still all right.

Come to think of it, Fred and Wallace are a whole lot alike at that. I'd like to see some more of the boys from that graduating class, just as an opportunity for comparisons.

Mule trader: "That mule's just nine years old. You ought to know him. You've been seeing Jim Jones ride him to town for the last twenty years."

Lamesa demonstrated the art of polo here Sunday afternoon. The neighbor town furnished two and a half of the three teams seen in action in the round-robin tournament.

Midland had several men who have played polo, three who have been active in the game recently and several more who are good horsemen and would make pretty fair polo players. The game is one which would prove highly popular here, as it has done previously, if Midland could put two or three teams on the field. It will take a real "home team" to get the backing at the gate. I hope local horsemen will get into this game of polo while the field is in top condition and get some local players interested. Few forms of entertainment are as thrilling, once the fans learn the sport and get interested in the players.

Memorial Day is observed in the north to a greater degree than in the south. I am told. Many years ago, either because Midland was smaller and the residents had more leisure time or because the World War still had its influence, there was considerably more interest here in decorating the graves of departed veterans. This evening, however, the Woods W. Lynch Post, American Legion, will hold appropriate ceremonies at the cemetery, at 6:30 o'clock, to which the public is invited. Commander Hoffman and his Legion members deserve the cooperation of the public in this observance.

I just heard today that Addison Wadley has been told by his doctor not to play any more golf. I hope this is a false rumor, because it would be like telling a fish not to swim, a cow not to eat grass or a hen not to lay an egg. About the worst decree I can think of for Addison is to have him advised to give up his favorite outdoor sport.

It's hard for me to keep last night's baseball score in my mind, because I never could remember big figures without writing them down.

Editor Ralph Shuffler of the Odessa News-Times, who is justly proud of his son, Robert, widely known for his fine work in one-act play contests and other scholastic events, now is cashing in on Robert's graduation presents. Said Ralph Munday:

My middle boy, Robert, who is one of the graduating class, has received so many new socks and neckties that the Boss feels like he (the Boss) can afford to dress up occasionally. Robert says I shouldn't wear them, for fear the one who gave them to him might see me, but I notice that for any number of years now he has been wearing every new shirt, tie and pair of socks I ever got, so I'm taking liberties with his wardrobe.

Buffalo Grass Variety Produces With Seed

WASHINGTON (UP)—Millions of acres of Southern Great Plains land plowed for wheat 20 years ago may be saved from becoming a virtual desert through development of seed-producing buffalo grass by the agriculture department.

Buffalo grass was the native covering of the loose soil for thousands of years. The native grass did not grow tall enough to permit the harvesting of seed, preventing the reseeding of the land. The department has developed a grass which grows five inches high and produces up to 80 pounds of seed per acre.

Mother Stands With Daughter At Graduation

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt. (UP)—Two of the most popular members of this year's graduating class at the high school here are 17-year-old Phyllis Bacheider and her 38-year-old mother, Mrs. Bertha Bacheider.

Once widowed and once divorced, Mrs. Bacheider also has another daughter, Connie, 18, who was graduated last year.

Employed in a restaurant, Connie is the principal support of her mother and sister. Mrs. Bacheider augments the income with occasional employment as a practical nurse, cook or waitress.

Two years ago Mrs. Bacheider determined to "pick up her education" where she left off when she was 16. She quickly reviewed sophomore studies at Springfield (Vt.) high school. When she and Phyllis finished their junior year there, they transferred to Bellows Falls high school.

"My main interest is being a mother," said Mrs. Bacheider. "And I am sure I can be a better mother if I have a better education. I'm grateful to Connie for the help she has given us. I hope to enter a business school next fall."

Fern Bell shoots golf in 70s and plays with Bing Crosby, Dick Arlen and other movie stars.

The Pirate rookie outfield star was obtained in the draft after several years in Yankee farm system. A product of Reis High School in Los Angeles, Bell has worked as movie extra, taking part of a German soldier in Hell's Angels. Script called for him to speak one word.

Keeps busy all the time. Helps support parents by working in Los Angeles post office during the winter.

The 26-year-old recruit is the Pirates' leading batter. A line drive hitter, Pie Traynor has him swinging in the cleanup position, where he is bearing out all the things said about him earlier in the year. His mates call him Ferdinand the Bell.

COWBOYS DROP 17-0 DECISION TO LAMESA LOBOES

Red Hay Whiffs 14 Midland batters; 3 Hurlers Rapped

LAMESA, May 29 (Special).—Ancient Red Hay, who is not supposed to be much of a hurler until the weather gets hot, was hotter than mid-July here last night as he struck out 14 Midland cowboys and gained an easy 17-0 victory for his seventh straight.

The Loboes hit everything that three Midland hurlers. Brown, Johnson and Turo three threw over the plate, getting 17 hits, seven of them doubles and one triple.

Hay was never in trouble but twice—in the seventh and eighth, and he pulled out without letting in a run either time. The Cowboys got only six hits and they were divided evenly among Smith, Petzold and Volk. Smith's two were doubles.

In the seventh, Smith doubled and Volk followed with a single, then Bianchi, new left hand pitcher of the Cowboys who was playing in the outfield, walked. Hay leveled down and made Wooten pop out to second, then struck out DeNeff and Turo. In the eighth, a single by Petzold, force out by Mort and another double by Smith placed two on the bags but Hay made Volk ground harmlessly to second to kill the threat.

The Loboes scored in every inning except the second and sixth. In the second, Johnson relieved Brown with three on and two out, then struck out Fullenwider but the homelings got onto his delivery in the third and continued until they blasted him out in the fifth. Turo lasted the rest of the game although he was hit hard, giving up one run in the seventh, 4 in the eighth.

The two teams will meet here again tonight with Ray Abernathy of Midland and Needham of Lamesa due to tangle on the mound.

Box score table with columns AB, R, H, PO, A, E and rows for Midland and Lamesa players.

Abilene Fans Adopt Plan for Keeping Club at Least 1 Week

ABILENE, May 29.—A group of Abilene baseball fans yesterday heard a plan, recommended by a committee of local business men, which would enable the Abilene baseball club to operate for a test period through the next eight day home stand.

The plan calls for raising $1,000 in outright donations to pay player salaries for the month of May. In such case the team would return from the current road trip ending Wednesday night at Big Spring to give the local fans a final chance to answer whether or not they really want organized baseball in the city.

J. M. Hooks, chairman of the meeting, called another session to be held at the Wooten hotel this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Final action will be taken at this meeting.

Yesterday's meeting, though disappointing in attendance was enthusiastic in its approval of the plan presented by the committee.

"It should be understood," said Hooks, "that in making this player salary donation we are not guaranteeing that baseball will remain in Abilene through the remainder of the season. It is merely a 'shot in the arm,' and with the right response from the fans the club can gain momentum and operate through the year."

"If the fans fail to turn out, however, there is nothing for the club to do but to fold up."

The committeemen made it clear that the money raised will not go to the Abilene baseball club or its president, Fincher Withers. It will be used to pay the players.

Actually, all members of the Abilene baseball club are now free agents and may seek employment with other clubs. Under the law of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues any player may declare himself a free agent after he has gone as long as ten days past payday without receiving his salary.

The club voted before starting the present road trip to continue through the games at Big Spring even though no payment has been made for their services since May 1.

If the plan offered is not adopted at today's meeting of the fans, the club will no longer represent Abilene and will be disbanded or moved elsewhere for the rest of the season.

Withers, who was present at the meeting, said the club would play ten games during the proposed test period. Plans are underway for a game between the Apaches and an all-star team from the city softball leagues to be played after the regular Friday night.

Many of the fans expressed the opinion that they believe baseball in 3; 5 runs, 6 hits off Turo in 3 1/3. Hit by pitcher—Bates by John-Losing pitcher—Brown. Passed balls—Bates, Smith. Left on base—Lamesa 14. Earned runs—Lamesa 14. Umpires—Pettigrew and Meyers. Time: 2:20.

turnouts will be larger now that other outside activities such as conventions, special shows and graduation exercises are out of the way. Business men have held a number of conferences with Withers during the past week to devise the best plan for ironing out the troubles. Organization of a stock company to operate the club through the season was suggested at one of the meetings, but it was vetoed due to the fact that the plan would call for raising at least four times as much money. Even then the stockholders would have no guarantee that the sport is wanted here.

Members of the committee are Hooks, W. J. Fulwiler, Lewis J. Aekers, J. L. Rhodes and Harold D. Austin.

Details of Latest Football Rules Explained by Kidd

School Superintendent W. W. Lackey today received a letter from R. J. Kidd, athletic director of the interscholastic league, pointing out and explaining new rules in effect for the forthcoming football season.

The letter, as written by Kidd, follows: (1) There shall be no football practice and no football equipment issued from the close of spring training period to September 1st, effective at once. The official interpretation of this rule by the State Executive Committee is as follows:

"Football practice" is interpreted to mean any organized instruction or drills in football, such as skull practice, diagramming of play, study of rules, etc. Attending lectures at an approved or recognized coaching school such as sponsored by the Texas High School Football Coaches Association would not be considered a violation of this rule.

The above rule applies only to contestants in high school. "Football equipment," as used in the rule is interpreted to mean the issuing of football shoulder pads, shoes, head gear, football trousers, or any other equipment used primarily for football practice.

(2) No school may engage in any post season game other than in regular interdistrict play-offs scheduled by the League, effective 1939 season.

Rule 6 C of the football plan states that the district round robin schedule shall close not later than the Saturday following Thanksgiving. Any contest scheduled after the completion of the regular district schedule will be considered a post season football game.

(3) Article VIII, Section 14, the paragraph relating to junior high school transfers.

Deer Discovered to Be Chicken "Thief" By Harper Farmer

AUSTIN.—A new method of raising wild turkey under semi-natural conditions being tested by the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission may prove the way to the stocking of many sections of Texas with the big game birds.

In cooperation with the United States Soil Conservation Service and the U. S. Farm Security Administration the Game Department has fenced a fifty-acre tract in the heart of the Fanning county land rehabilitation project area near Bonham. Forty-eight wild turkey were released in the enclosure after their wings had been clipped.

Wild turkey do not thrive in pens, but it is believed that under the semi-natural conditions they have found in the fifty-acre tract they will prosper and propagate. Number of the hens have already nested. The birds are being given some food, but are foraging for most of their nourishment.

When the young birds hatched on the area grow older it is expected they will fly over the fence. The older birds, when their wings feathers have grown out, will also leave the huge pen and will populate the surrounding territory.

Should the experiment prove successful it will be repeated in several areas of the State which provide the natural environment conducive to raising wild turkeys.

The mystery of the "thefts" of small chickens from the farm of J. Stevens near Harper, Texas, was cleared up recently when Mrs. Stevens caught a young deer, of which the family had made a pet, devouring chicks.

Why deer, which are herbivorous, should turn away from their "vegetarian" diet is explained by State Game Department biologists as due to the lack of sufficient protein in their usual diet. The Stevens' pet was satisfying its craving for protein by consuming chickens.

The fawn was recovered by the Game Department. It is illegal to keep deer in captivity in Texas unless you possess a game breeders license.

Thousands of game and rough fish were killed in an extremely heavy hail storm of a half hour duration in the San Saba river in Menard county recently, Game Warden Ben F. Gaddy of Sonora reported to the Game Department.

The fish, bass, crappie, bream, cat, gar, shad and sucker, were caught in the shallow waters of the river by the hailstorm, which followed an exceptionally heavy heavy rain. The hail was so heavy, drifts of it remained on the river banks for twenty-four hours and the sudden change in temperature, coupled with the stunned fishes in-ability to clear their gills of silt churned up by the rain and hail caused their death, it is believed.

Game Warden G. C. Gardner, whose district is composed of Hardin and Liberty counties in Southeast Texas, reached 6,452 pupils of the 6,981 in the upper grades of eighteen schools with a wildlife conservation program for fifth, sixth and seventh grade pupils which extended over a two-month period.

Eighty-one lectures were delivered by the warden and sportsmen interested in preserving game and fish. A total of 441 children competed in an essay contest on the subject of "Why and How to Con-

Hold Everything!

"You may tell Grover Whalen that I quite approve—as far as it goes."

Sleet Frankl of San Saba, Texas, might as well have left his hooks at home when he went fishing the other day. Frankl dropped a line into the San Saba river and when he returned to it found he not only had a five-inch catfish on the hook, but that a two-pounder had caught himself on the sinker.

FEMININE FANCIES

By Kathleen Eiland

The return of summer brings the question of ice cream again to the forefront of public consciousness. It is interesting to note that vanilla is still the favorite flavor, accounting for nearly one-half of the entire production in 1938.

Chocolate is the runner-up for choice and strawberry comes in for third place.

So it would seem that vanilla ice cream is rather like apple pie and hot dogs—an American institution.

Our vote for the most unusual dress seen recently goes to a cape model of white alpaca sheer and black marquisette. The skirt is white and extends upward to make the lower part of the bodice, the upper part of the bodice being of the black. The distinguishing feature of the costume is found in the black cape which has a wide banding of the white at the bottom on which are embroidered in outline Mexican figures, Dutch figures, and other gay little designs. Entirely different for the type of costume on which this decoration is employed.

And effective.

A quick and inexpensive pick-up for that drooping but still serviceable dress left over from last year is a wide belt of glazed cloth in solid color with small white polka-dots. These come in various shades.

One-piece dresses with white skirts and waists in solid colors or polka-dots are good choices for warm-weather wear. Some of these have inserts in the skirts of the same material of the dress-top.

Too, there are two-piece dresses in the new shades which are serviceable enough to be worn day in and day out for all sorts of occasions.

We can never understand how utterly simple a recipe, such as that for a casserole of fresh vegetables, for instance, can seem in print—and how difficult it can be to execute in the kitchen.

It must be some kind of primal instinct in womankind, for no matter how far removed she is from the kitchen in her daily work, most any woman will read the food columns in her favorite magazines and thrill to the recipes suggested, being sure, for the moment, that she'd rather have a kitchen of her own and time to work in it, than anything else in the world. (And the fact that her common sense tells her she would soon be bored to death in the culinary world makes her momentary longing no whit less keen.)
