Guam Natives Prayed For Return Of Yanks

A CHAMORRO REFUGEE CAMP, GUAM—(AP)—The inhabitants of Guam had many disappointments but never gave up hope that the Americans would return to this island.

One of the reasons the Japanese closed the churches was because the natives insisted on praying for the Americans to return, said Gaily R. Kamminga, commissioner of Piti town.

Kamminga, whose father came from Holland, laughed as he told how the Japanese looked through his house for an American flag. They threw a pillow from side to side without discovering the flag sewed inside. That was the work of his niece, Juana, a dressmaker who said she unwillingly used to cut down Marines' shirts to fit the Nipponese.

Mrs. Anna Underwood, whose husband was postmaster of Guam from 1915 until the Japanese seized the island, Dec. 10, 1941, related that the Nipponese declared less than a week ago that the Americans would never retake Guam. Japan had wanted the island for 16 years and wouldn't let it go, she quoted Japanese as saying.

Navy Fighter Pilots Set Fine Record

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HEAD-QUARTERS, PEARL HARBOR—(AP)—VP-50 fighter pilots, operating from an Independence-class carrier in famed Task Force 58, shot down 59 Japanese planes—and acquired five new aces—during the first three weeks of the Marianas campaign.

That's one of the best records ever made in a short combat period by the fighter squadron of a medium-sized carrier, the Navy announced.

When the Japanese attacked Task Force 58 west of Guam on June 19, VP-50—popularly known as Fighting Fifty—shot down 12 planes. More than 400 Japanese planes were destroyed that day, the largest air toll ever exacted in a single naval action.

The Life of EISENHOWER
By Francis Trevelyan Miller
First Biography of America's Great General
 Copyright, 1944, Ann Woodward Miller; Distributed, NEA Service, Inc.

APPOINTMENT TO WEST POINT

DWIGHT EISENHOWER'S graduation from the Abilene High School was a "great event."

His family sat in the audience and looked upon him with pride as he received his diploma. He was starting out on a career, no one knew where.

He himself didn't know. He worked around Abilene for more than a year, helping his father and doing various jobs as a fireman and refrigerative engineer—and all the time he was "planning."

Finally he decided. He was intrigued by the biographies of great military leaders. His decision took his family by complete surprise.

"I'm going to enter the service of my country," he announced. The Eisenhower family were religiously opposed to war. Dwight, however, insisted he knew what he was about, and no amount of persuasion could change his mind.

Two pals had reached their decision together. Ike and his friend, Everett Hazlett, were going to Annapolis and enter the Navy. Hazlett passed his entrance examinations, but it was discovered that Ike, 20 years old, was a few months over age. He bid his friend, Hazlett, goodbye and went into a secret session with himself.

Again Ike came out with a decision: he would go to West Point and serve in the army. Immediately he lost himself in all the documents and official information he could obtain about the United States Military Academy. Ascertaining the qualifications required, he began to study day and night.

Finally he felt assured he was equipped for his first battle with the examinations.

Appointment to West Point required political confirmation. Ike enlisted two family friends, Editor Harger, of the Abilene Reflector-

Chronicle, who knew everybody, and Ed Heath, postmaster of Abilene. Other influential citizens were lined up. Ike now had his first fighting squad ready for action.

United States Senator Joseph H. Bristow was a power in state and national affairs, a leader on the floor of the Senate, and on Oct. 11, 1910, Dwight David Eisenhower received from the War Department an appointment to West Point.

Young Dwight passed his examinations with flying colors against eight competitors, and on a June day in 1911, surrounded by friends at the railroad station in Abilene, he stepped on the train "to go east."

WHEN DWIGHT EISENHOWER, a rugged, bronzed youth out of the west, stood before the portals of West Point on the 14th day of June in 1911, he gazed in admiration at the stately structures standing like citadels on the rock-bound hills overlooking the grandeur of the Hudson River. The boy from the plains had come to the highlands.

Five feet 11, weighing 170 pounds, 20 years and eight months of age, he was entering the greatest institution of its kind in the world, the United States Military Academy.

West Point, like Ike himself, was in a state of transition. It was preparing for the future. The magnificent cadet chapel was being erected, an outstanding example of modern Gothic architecture.

A huge new gymnasium, where Ike was to make a notable record, was under construction. The largest riding hall in the world was being built from granite quarried on the reservation; here Ike, horseman from the west, was to give daredevil exhibitions of a lad at home in the saddle. Surveying before him the Gothic structures of imposing beauty, he walked into the administration building. "Eisenhower from Kansas," he reported cryptically.

THE appraisal of a cadet begins with the moment of his ruder plunge into the West Point system. Nature had saved a blast of record-breaking heat to welcome Ike when he arrived at West Point in 1911. Through the three boiling weeks that preceded the transfer of the new cadets from "Beast Barracks" to the summer encampment at Fort Clinton, they underwent a process of indoctrination which left its mark. The job was thoroughly done. The end of each strenuous day found the plebes only too glad to tumble into their bunks for a night's sleep.

Taps inspection was hardly over when more or less rugged spirits asserted themselves. Bull sessions were under way. Ike's room became a favorite hangout for these after-taps sessions. Voices were kept low and a sentry was always posted to give warning of the approach of a first-classman of the "Beast Detail." In the darkness the day's woes became less important, the boners of some overzealous first-classman developed into a tidbit, and plebe life in general became more endurable. There were plenty of arguments, often ended by one of Ike's pungent comments. Before anyone realized it, Ike had been accepted as a leader.

Like his classmates in "F" Company, Ike fitted easily into the tradition which, throughout the history of the Corps, has fallen to the company marching at the close of the parade column. The tradition is one which scorns "file-boning," "teeth-boning," and any such serious efforts for advancement in corps or academic standing. It seeks to discover such maximum of ease as is possible under the strenuous West Point system.

On the other hand, it puts a high premium on athletic prowess. The physical brawn of a group of fit men, averaging six feet or more in height, lent itself to outstanding performance on the athletic field. That feature of the environment likewise suited Ike.

Star Charged

Jackie Cooper, above, former film star now a V-12 Navy trainee at the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., was charged with contributing to the delinquency of a 15-year-old girl. Similar charges were placed against three other persons, said to have been present at an alleged "wild party" in a South Bend hotel.

American bombers now fly higher and stay at high altitudes longer because of a new chemical development which lengthens by about 50 times the high altitude life of carbon brushes in the planes' generators.

McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By WILLIAM E. MCKENNEY
 The Wisconsin's Upper Michigan Bridge Association recently put on a successful tournament at Minocqua, Wis. The women's pair event was won by Mrs. W. S. Harrington of Chicago and Mrs. D. J. Cook of Hinsdale, Ill. The mixed pair event went to Mrs. R. P. Cunningham of Waukegan, Ill., and Arthur Grau of Racine, Wis.

WITH THE U. S. ARMY IN FRANCE—(P)—Evt. Pedro Rubio, 25, of Austin, Texas, performed an operation with a pocket knife under German machine gun fire.

Rubio, a medical corpsman, found a doughboy with a bullet wound near the surface of one thigh. The Texan, realizing the danger of infection, removed the bullet with the knife while machine guns clattered.

Then it took Rubio and Pvt. Lloyd Cockrell, 31, of Lampasas, Texas, three hours to get the wounded man out of range of the guns.

In 1901, the English army, to commemorate its victory at Kinsale, subscribed 1,800 pounds to establish a library in the University of Dublin.

Business executives are working four-hour night shifts in a number of Army ordnance depots to relieve the manpower shortage.

East and West cashed four spade tricks and East felt quite sure of defeating the contract, but Mrs. Harrington found a way to make all the rest of the tricks. On the third and fourth spade leads, dummy discarded the six and seven of diamonds. South discarded the deuce of diamonds. The fifth lead was the club jack and dummy's queen won. The heart ten was led and East ducked. Mrs. Harrington, playing the "queen over the jack" on a hunch, let the ten ride and it held. The king of hearts won the next trick, then the ace and king of diamonds and two high clubs—and East was squeezed. He now held the diamond queen and the queen and one heart and could not find a safe discard. The hand would not produce four hearts, as East and West must win at least four tricks at that contract.

bid, she felt that the hand must reach game.

Leathernecks Know What They Want

A SOUTH PACIFIC MARINE BASE—(P)—Ninety-nine out of every 100 Marines in combat have definite plans for what they want to do in the post-war world, according to a survey here.

Ninety-five per cent of the Marines want a job immediately after returning to civilian life but none is interested particularly in whether the government will give them $200 or $300 mustering-out pay. Of the young married men, 75 per cent prefer to study in hope of getting a better job than the one they left behind.

Approximately 10 per cent of Missouri's 498 newspapers now are published by women, substituting for husbands or sons in the armed services.

Between June 1, 1942, and April 1, 1943, Britain turned over to U.S. armed forces in England supplies which would have taken more than 1,360,000 ship tons if brought across the Atlantic.

Order Of Progression Observed By Committee

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y.—(P)—Postwar planning is being observed in order of progression by the Civic and Business Federation here. It will consider methods of controlling the enthusiasm of residents on the day Germany's defeat is announced.

DETAIL FOR TODAY

A retired man called back into the service is a RETREAD. As it is necessary to put in 20 or 30 years continuous service before being retired, an enlisted RETREAD is easily identified by the number of service stripes worn on the sleeve of his jumper or coat—one red stripe for each four years' service. After 12 years, with good conduct, gold stripes can be worn. The RETREAD's start at his wrist and continue to his elbow. Because of his age and experience, a RETREAD is usually found at shore stations or training camps. As can be expected, it is his utmost desire to get back out to sea and show the young landlubbers how to fight a war.

Judge Is Judge Of Boogie Woogie Too

PORTLAND, ORE.—(P)—Municipal Judge John B. Seabrook adjourned court to the police recreation room when a shipyard worker, up on a disorderly charge, claimed he formerly was pianist in "Fats" Waller's orchestra.

Confronted by a piano, the defendant pleaded stiff fingers, but said if anyone could play he'd sing as he used to with Waller's band. The judge sat down and played until the defendant reached the third note. Then the judge clapped his hands over his ears and fined the singer $15.

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Millions of additional workers have built up during these war years credits toward old age and survivors' insurance benefits. But what happens to them when the war ends?

These are the workers that have come out of the so-called uncovered jobs—that is, jobs not covered by those benefits under federal law—like farm and domestic workers.

Also included in the group are the self-employed, the employes of non-profit religious, educational and humane organizations, and the employes of federal, state, county and local government.

Paul V. McNutt, Social Security administrator, says there are 20 million such persons, that 12 million of them are farm workers.

After the war many thousands of these uncovered workers who have been in "covered" jobs during the war, will drift back to the "uncovered" occupations or into retirement.

Credits May Lapse
 But, when they do, the old age and survivors' insurance protection which they built up during the war years will decrease while they work in non-covered jobs. Any they may lapse entirely.

For instance:

The old age and survivors' insurance protection is operated by the federal government through the Social Security Board.

That insurance became law in 1936 and has been in effect since Jan. 1, 1937.

Since that time employers and their workers in "covered" jobs have had to pay 1 per cent of the salary earned by the workers.

The idea is this: A person 65 or older who has quit regular employment is entitled to the payments, provided he has worked in "covered" employment and, of course, made his 1 per cent contribution.

And his wife also may get benefits when she is 65.

McNutt Seeks New Program
 But—and this is the point to be remembered by workers who have moved into "uncovered" jobs and intend to move out of them—a worker is entitled to old age insurance only if when he is 65, he has worked at least half of the time since the law went into effect Jan. 1, 1937.

McNutt wants a Social Security program which will take in all classes of workers and broaden benefits even to include disability insurance. This problem will probably cause a fight in Congress in the year ahead.

Of course, the workers would have to stand a greater share of the expense. Now he only pays 1 per cent of his salary for old age insurance. The boss pays another 1 per cent. In addition, the boss pays 3 per cent of his payroll for unemployment insurance.

Under the set-up McNutt is talking about, employers and employees would pay 6 per cent of payroll and wages, making a total of 12 per cent, which would cover unemployment and old age benefits.

'Sky Jeep' Pilot Outwits Eight German Focke-Wulfs In Air Battle

By HAL BOYLE
(AP)—Eight German Focke-Wulfs dived from the clouds on a lone unarmed Piper Cub flown by Lt. Homer W. Bennett, but when the battle was over, two enemy planes had been destroyed. The rest had turned tail and the little "Sky Jeep" was wagging home to its landing pasture with four bullets in its fender.

Bennett and his observer, Lt. Edwin D. Maxey, of Lincoln, Neb., were weaving over the battlefield, looking for German gun positions upon which they could call down artillery fire.

"We were flying at two thousand feet," said Bennett, who lives in St. Louis, Mo., "and the first thing I knew eight FW-190's were swarming around me, two coming directly toward me firing and a couple of more from the sides. There was a terrific clatter from the engines and guns. I thought I was a goner."

Brilliant Flying
 Bennett began what his commanding officer afterward described as "some of the most daring and brilliant flying of the war." He turned his "Grasshopper" into the first two planes making a pass at him, causing them to overshoot. That gave him a chance to lose altitude.

"I did some dives, wingovers and some other stuff that's never been named trying to get into the protection of our ack-ack batteries," he said, "and I wanted to get back on the ground. That's the only safe place."

He slipped from beneath the nose of one over-eager Nazi plane and it crashed into the ground and burst into flames. The friendly ack-ack knocked down another German and some wandering P-47 Thunderbolts pitched in on his side and sent the rest of the Nazis racing back toward Berchtesgaden.

Made Jerries Look Sick
 "Benny made the Jerries look sick," said Maxey. "I just sat there and held on to keep from being thrown out while Benny went through his acrobatics in a magnificent job of flying."

They went home and the bad bullet patches were repaired and a few hours later went on another mission.

Bennett, who holds the Air Medal for 35 combat sorties in Normandy, had only one regret about the whole adventure.

"We would have given anything," he said, "to have been in one of those Thunderbolts with some belts full of bullets."

Traded Trick
 Every soldier has his own trade tricks. Pvt. Frank Deigiorhi, of San Bernardino, Calif., is a specialist in "spray" technique with a rifle fired from the hip.

He fires it like a machine gun and never lets go at the enemy without giving him the benefit of a full clip of eight bullets. Instead of concentrated fire he swings his rifle like a garden hose. He also yells "Ye-ow!" ever time he blasts away so that the entire battalion knows when Private Deigiorhi has located the foe.

Church Is Where the Faith Is

Wherever men of faith meet—there is a church. So it was on Saipan, where, as pictured above, U. S. fighting men gathered in a wrecked Jap power house, now being used as an American hospital, to hear mass sung by Father C. C. Riedel, Catholic chaplain.

Luce, Gahagan And Hayes Set Hopeful Style

By Ruth Millett
NEA Staff Writer

They are more than just three politically-minded women — Clare Booth Luce, Helen Gahagan, and Helen Hayes, all three now in the political spotlight.

They have introduced glamor into politics, and that may have a wide-reaching effect. Ever since women entered politics, they have taken an unmerciful amount of razzing. Because the woman politician was so often lacking in feminine appeal, it was easy to caricature her as a battle axe, totally lacking in womanly grace and a sense of humor.

Men laughed at the caricature—and women were frightened by it. Out of trying to get into politics. After all, they didn't want to be like the caricature of a woman politician.

But when women with the grace and charm and feminine appeal of Miss Booth, Miss Gahagan, and Miss Hayes (all Mrs. in private life, incidentally, and that helps) decided to go into politics—the women started to take notice.

These women all live in sophisticated worlds. They are style-setters, pace-makers. Any one of them could launch a mode.

And it looks as if that is exactly what they are going to do—make it as smart for women to be interested in politics as in the past decade it has been smart for them to belong to garden clubs.

If their interest in politics does that, they are probably the three most important women in the country today. For once the erroneous notion that a woman politician has to be a hard-boiled old battle-axe is out of the public's mind—women will take to politics the way they've taken to business, industry, and the professions.

Woman Wants Reserved Seat At Treason Trial

DENVER—(AP)—A woman telephoned the clerk of the U. S. District Court to ask a question about the treason trial of three Japanese-American sisters.

Sorry, said the clerk. She'd have to come early and take her chances.

American Soldiers Fail To Find Quick Romances In France

By HAL BOYLE
WITH AMERICAN TROOPS IN FRANCE—(AP)—Many a soldier fighting in France is wondering how the country could have changed so much in a quarter of a century.

From listening to the old man tell about the palmy days back in 1918 he had an idea it was a doughboy's paradise with tasty wine, a cozy farmhouse and a beautiful macemoiselle waiting by every rose bush.

So far GI Joe has seen, a lot of ledgerows—something infantrymen in the last war didn't have to battle through—but very few mademoiselles. Those he has come across are more interested in milking cows or doing his laundry for a few francs than engaging in any flirtations.

As for that wine about which American Legionnaires reminisce at annual conventions — Normandy farmers nowadays keep their good wine out of sight and a thirsty doughboy has to take his chances on stomach ulcers if he imbibes too much of the native drinks of cider or calvados.

Revives Prohibition Memories
 Also floating about, at 400 to 800 francs a bottle ($8 to $16), is a quantity of raw German army cognac which usually has been watered to take off the curse. Even so, it revives prohibition memories of bathtub gin and a heavy slug of it gives a man the same sensation as if an 88 had hit about 10 feet away.

But if the wine and mademoiselles don't quite come up to 1918 standards the disillusioned doughboys are ready to admit there has been no decline in the quality of French mud. It has the same timelessness, sticky affection for soldiers' boots and ears it had when dad's address was a pup tent in France.

Most soldiers are surprised at the size of Normandy peasant girls who aren't all sprightly, petite packages they expected. They are strapping farm girls able to do a man's work in the fields and they are much more buxom and upholstered than the English girls across the channel. They are a little suspicious, too, and when Johnny Doughboy comes courting with packages of cigars, a bar of chocolate or a cake of toilet soap, he has to pass an inspection by papa and mamma before he gets to take Janet for a stroll across the pasture.

Soldiers who thought this would be a land of quick romances found that the War Department picture in the pocket guide was more accurate. The guidebook warned the soldiers that France has been represented too often in fiction as a

Military Necessity Makes Inventors Out Of Many Front Line Doughboys

By HAL BOYLE
WITH THE AEF IN FRANCE—(AP)—Military necessity has made inventors out of front line doughboys. Their Yankee ingenuity stands them in good stead when they come up against a new situation or special terrain which compels modification of their weapons.

One of the best examples of this battlefield brainwork is the conquest of the Normandy hedgerows. These hedgerows—the army is finally breaking through them to more open country—are nothing like the simple hedgerows of home.

They are great earthen barriers several feet thick and four to six feet high, surrounded by century-old growths of shrubbery and trees. Some are wide enough for a jeep to drive along on top.

The problem was to get the tanks through them to support the infantry advanced. Even when the tanks were able to crush their way through these formidable barriers it was found there was likely to be a deep canal on the other side.

Procedure Was Too Slow
 So they assigned four combat engineers and a squad of infantry with each tank. The engineers placed two charges of explosives in the hedgerows and blew a hole for the tank to lumber through so it could move up to the next hedgerow and clean out strongpoints to help the doughboys.

This procedure worked, but it was slow and cumbersome. Then someone figured out a way of fixing huge steel slicer places on their vehicles so they could gouge their own paths through the hedgerows. That has proved the best answer yet—one that Jerry has tried, too, because he had the same problem with his tanks, but the Nazis met with less success.

The humble aluminum army messkit also has been adapted so that now it can be used to put a crease in a doughboy's pants or help him launch a new airburst grenade.

When he couldn't find an ordinary iron to press his clothes, Corp. Mitchell J. Thachik, Brooklyn, made his own. He took a meat can from an old messkit, filled it with sand to give it weight, hammered in the

Sgt. May put his invention to a simple front line test. He fired over an enemy machine gun position that had been giving his buddies trouble and silenced it. Next day another German crew took over and May shot over another grenade and wiped out that crew, also.

His simple device has been described by an officer as one of the best developed to modify a regular assault type weapon to hedgerow warfare.

The ordnance branch took up his idea and built enough of these special grenade launcher sights to equip the rest of the division.

Basic American Prepares Yanks' British Brides For Life In USA

By ROSETTE HARGROVE
NEA Staff Correspondent

LONDON — When the British brides of American servicemen arrive in their husbands' homeland, they aren't going to expect to find skyscrapers lining gold-paved streets. Those who've been taking advantage of the monthly course in "Basic American" being held at the American Red Cross Rainbow Corner in London, are going to be prepared for drugstores on every corner and evenings at home on the front porch.

The idea of "instructing" English G.I. wives about their future country originated last Christmas when Sally Elting of Brookline, Mass., and other Rainbow Corner workers invited the Yanks and their spouses to celebrate an American-style Christmas at the club. The wives all said they wanted to learn more about American life and customs.

Most intriguing to the girls is the idea of living in modern labor-saving houses complete with air conditioning and refrigeration, which over here is within reach of only the very privileged classes.

One wife couldn't quite grasp how the American idea of porch life your neighbor's privacy. But lantern slides, illustrating sections of the U.S.A., shown with a running commentary explaining how porch did not imply an infringement on life is an indication of community spirit, helped clarify her understanding.

All the English brides are convinced that American husbands are more generous and considerate than British. Blonde Constance Curtis, married five months to Staff Sgt. James H. Kos of St. Paul, Minn., says, "What I like about American husbands is the real interest they take in women's clothes—so unlike English men who never seem to know what a woman wears. Why, my husband remembers the dress I had on the day we met, and he always tells me what to wear when we go out on a party."

"He always tells me what to wear when we go out on a party."

Since then, they've been coming to the club first Monday of every month to hear everyone from correspondents, who talk about Americana, to professors who discuss citizenship, living and working conditions.

Soldiers usually accompany their wives to classes and seem especially proud of showing them off. Most of them are young, smartly dressed and pretty. They met their husbands at dances, in Red Cross Service Clubs, or while attached to American units as members of the ATS or WAAs. Often they bring their offspring along and everyone makes a fuss about the toddlers.

Wives are most interested in learning about American cooking and how long it will take them to

Foxhole Hospitals Are Under Fire As Medics Aid Wounded At Front

By J. J. Wolf
NEA Staff Correspondent

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES IN FRANCE—Except for a little of stretchers and a few khaki bags of anything in a first line dugout of a Battalion Aid Station to remind you of a hospital. Yet here, under conditions that could hardly be less favorable, the Medical Corps is performing miracles in providing relief for the wounded.

Maj. William Patterson of Atlanta helped me to find my way to the dugout, after I left my jeep in a shot-out town and made my way down a slippery, muddy road between two rows of hedges. The whistle of bullets came uncomfortably close.

At last we reached the hedgerow behind which our boys were hiding. It was impossible to stand as the ditch was so shallow that to do so would have made us targets for Jerry some 100 yards away.

Dodge Shells

Before I had time to find out anything besides their names from Privates Lawrence Pattap and John P. McGowan, and that both came from the Bronx, there was a shout from a short distance away. Upon hearing it they darted out and were soon half carrying and half dragging a dark-haired youngster out of the muddy ditch on to the level ground behind. They ripped off his shirt, examined his wounds, one in the shoulder and one in the leg, and put temporary bandages on them. All the time they were more or less in clear view of the Germans, who kept up a continuous firing.

Placing the wounded boy on a stretcher, the two first-aid men started back over the road I had used in reaching the place. At last we came in sight of my parked jeep. Beside it was another one rigged so that it could carry five patients. They stood in the shadow of an old house already battered by enemy fire.

As we approached them there was the sound of another shell and all of us ducked, the boys with the stretcher placing it on the ground and lying low until after the explosion. A nearby building shot up into the air and then collapsed like a pricked balloon. Black smoke mixed with dust choked us. For almost a half hour we waited for a lull while all the time, at irregular intervals, pairs of German shells fell about us.

Barn Is Aid Station

Finally the enemy seemed to tire.

We made for our jeeps. The wounded boy was laid across the one rigged up as an ambulance and put in charge of its driver, Pfc. Joseph Pappalardo of Brooklyn. He started off and I followed. On the road a solitary shell came over and a fragment hit the top of my jeep and put a dent in my driver's helmet. Apart from this our trip to the Battalion Aid Station was uneventful.

The Aid Station was located in the barn of a large old farm house and the wounded, until they could be looked after by Capt. Milton J. Snieder of Chicago, lay on their litters in the hay. The boy we had brought in had to wait his turn. Finally he was carried into a little alcove where boxes served as a stand on which his stretcher was placed. The captain dressed his wounds and ordered him off to a collection station. As he was being carried out, he smiled and said "So long fellows, I'll be seeing you soon."
