Current estimates indicate that the State of Texas has $3.3 billion more money than the last budget approved with which to operate the business of State Government during the next two years.

This $3.3 billion includes a $804 million cash surplus which is the largest in the nation.

On a percentage basis this money represents an 18% increase over the available funds two years ago when the State Legislature adopted the last budget.

Total available funds for expenditure during the next two years include about $30 billion.

Two budget proposals have surfaced in Austin and both would require additional taxes.

Governor Mark White is pushing for a $33 billion budget and Lt. Governor Bill Hobby is suggesting a $32 billion budget.

The Lt. Governor has proposed raising taxes to fund the additional $2 billion in the legislative budget board's recommended budget but has not said what taxes would be raised.

The Governor has proposed a combination of tax increases, fee increases and borrowing to meet his spending goals.

Comptroller Bob Bullock has urged a 5 cent per gallon tax on gasoline. (This is in addition to the Federal tax on gasoline which was just increased.)

While their methods differ each of the three seems to agree that additional money will be needed during the next two years.

Looking deeper into the political maze in Austin very few Legislators are opposing tax increases.

Senator Grant Jones, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is publically supporting a tax increase and not a single state senator has been quoted in the news media as opposing an increase in taxes.

According to a recent report from Texas 13, a nonpartisan, nonprofit organization, local property taxes have increased 227% during the past 10 years; Texas Government has grown faster than 40 other states, including New York and California, the only two states that have more population than Texas; between 1970 and 1978 the Texas Legislature increased its own operating costs 156%; State employees now number more than 200,000 and in answer to a legislative questionnaire 64% admitted they didn't have enough work to keep them busy; during the past 10 years Texas population has increased 26% and the State budget has grown 158%; the number of State employees has increased 3 1/2 times the growth in population; and the number of State welfare employees has increased 370%.

Perhaps the time has come for the people of Texas to tell Austin that just because our economy has suffered less than many other states is no reason to assume that we must continue to spend money which is only available by increasing taxes.

Perhaps the time has come to tell Legislators that an 18% increase in the State's budget is sufficient to meet the minimum requirements of State Government and that a tax increase will only compound our economic problems.

If Governor White gets his budget adopted, State spending will have increased over 50% in the last two years.

With City and County Governments, local School Boards, Hospitals, Water Districts, and Businesses continually seeking ways to trim excess expenditures, shouldn't we require the same prudence on the State level.

Start making telephone calls and writing letters today, asking Legislators to accept the challenge of living within the means of the State just as local governments and businesses have been forced to do.

Brush and Palette

The first red tulip burst forth this week and what a beautiful spot of color appearing amid the rows of iris, which will soon be in bloom. Spring is a very busy time for all of us and we can only enjoy the first flowers for a very short time. Soon we will think "too bad the tulips are gone, they were lovely." And I regretfully think - another spring has come and gone and I didn't get the time to put those vibrant colors on canvas.

We miss so many of the beautiful things of life by letting them pass by because we do not take time to enjoy them while we have the opportunity. Why is it that we find time to clean closets, but not the time to paint the flowers?

Q. Please give me some pointers on how to make my brushes last longer. I seem to wear them down awfully fast.

A. The friction on the tips of the bristles wears the ends. Your brush should be "well oiled" at all times. Do not try to make a brush spread a small amount of paint too far. Do not rub the brush against the canvas - try "flip-flopping" the brush. When washing the brush, gently pull the bristles across the soap and do not "jab" it down on the bottom of the cleaning jar. Take care of your brushes! They are your best friend in painting.

Q. I seem to get 'mud' when mixing colors. How can I prevent this?

A. Try to plan each color mixture before you touch your brush or knife to the palette. Always arrive at the mixture you want with as few colors as possible. Ideally, you should never need more than two or three, plus white. Don't mix the colors too thoroughly. For some obscure optical reason, mixtures decline in brilliance when pushed around on the palette or canvas. Keep brushes and knives clean. Try using a separate brush for each color mixture, assigning one to each color family. You can have a dark blue, a light blue brush and so on. Do not work the colors too much. Lay a color on the canvas and wait to see what effect the juxta-color has on the next color. Most "mud" is caused by mixing too much.

Q. What do you mean by "broom and needle"?

A. "Start with a broom and finish with a needle", is the way a famous painter expressed the need for a variety of brushes. Take inventory of your brushes, many may be old and should be thrown away. One new brush wears out quickly, whereas three new ones - small, medium and large - will have a better chance. Your original outlay will be more expensive but you'll find all of your brushes will last longer.

Faye Jetton Honored At Rice Springs

The employees of Rice Springs Care Home hosted a salad supper honoring Faye M. Jetton, upon her retirement as the Director of Nurses.

Mrs. Jetton started with

Rice Springs Care Home after its opening in 1963. She started as Nursing Supervisor when the home had only 36 beds. Now the home has advanced to 82 beds. She even served as administrator for 6 months, but mostly served as a Licensed Vocational Nurse and Director of Nurses from 1963-1983.

Mrs. Jetton was presented a diamond locket as a token of appreciation from the Board of Directors by Ruth Ann Klose, Administrator of Rice Springs Care Home. The employees presented her a plaque of appreciation, gold ear screws and individual gifts.

After the shock of excitement, Mrs. Jetton stated her tender affection toward Rice Springs Care Home and what all the years had meant to her. She said, "There has been both good and bad, but I would not have done any different. It has meant so much to me to have taken care of the needs of the people in their golden years. My only regret is that I cannot start and do it all over again." She challenged all the younger nurses to a life of dedication in nursing especially with the geriatric patients because it is a rewarding and fulfilling life.

Ted Jetton, husband of the honoree was also recognized for his patience and understanding from interruptions and awakening phone calls all these years. His award is Rice Springs loss. Both were wished luck and happiness during their retirement years.

Yard Of The Month

Spring is in the air and after the drabness of winter it is delightful to see the color and freshness of spring everywhere. In selecting yard of the month we looked for color, neatness and basic good landscaping.

The yard of the month goes to Mr. and Mrs. Danny Stewart 1000 N. Ave. F. The landscaping is unique with brick and ligustrum circled light posts to north and south corners of house that adds neat, spacious uncluttered look. Two redbud trees (in full bloom) and a ligustrum hedge emphasize front entrance. There is a circular driveway for convenient parking. A variety of trees, live oak, mulberry, green ash, catalpa pin oak and pecan across west front for shade, color and coolness.

The backyard has patio, fence enclosure, climbing blaze roses on fence; daylilies and pink and purple crepe myrtle for summer bloom.

Just outside this enclosed backyard is what you might call a showcase bed that is pretty year round. And can be viewed from the front and side. There are evergreens, ligustrum, pyracantha, cactus, pampas grass, mums for fall color and now there is a bed of purple Eleanor Roosevelt iris blooming and will bloom again in early fall.

Understanding Your Child

The Moving Experience

Contrary to popular belief that moving may adversely affect youngsters, a recent study reveals that most children do very well when moves are carefully planned as family affairs.

Conducted by Lloyd Muller, an Air Force lieutenant colonel who is vice commander of the Joint Personal Property Shipping Office in Washington, D.C., which handles military moves, the study involved sixth graders in suburban Fairfax County, Va. It was conducted as part of Muller's doctoral degree in education at The George Washington University.

"The key issue," Muller says, "is that kids survived quite well when the family was moving for a positive purpose—one that would bring a benefit that was understood and where they all worked toward that goal."

He says his research would "tend to confirm an earlier study's conclusion that families which perceive occupational mobility as the path to social success cope well with its problems."

Conversely, Muller says that "those children whose behavior deteriorates during moves are often associated with adverse family backgrounds that can contribute to underlying psychological problems.

"Because mobile students are generally doing well," Muller believes, "schools need not set up an elaborate program aimed at integrating new students."

He recommends, however, that teachers who have a recently-moved child in class be aware of the situation. "The teacher should figure out whether the child moved as part of a controlled family move, or whether he is just being bounced around."

Muller says that parents should gather helpful information on the subject before planning a move, citing an American Movers Conference publication, "Moving and Children," as one source. The brochure can be obtained at no cost by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope to American Movers Conference, P.O. Box 2303, Arlington, Va. 22202.

First runner-up yard goes to Mr. and Mrs. Riley Pace 1507 N. Ave. H. This is a very attractive yard. There are Magnolia, Mimosa, pine and pecan trees that add elegance and dignity. A curved walk leading to the doorway and two planter boxes of lovely pink and blue thrift. That seem to defy the chilling wintry winds and proclaim that spring and April showers are near.

Second runner-up yard goes to Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt Perry 1506 S. 7th. This is a very interesting yard with unusual landscape design. They have designed this corner lot using a technique that gives a beautiful view either way you approach the house: by means of a circular driveway defined by seven trees. Five in the center, two redbud trees that have finished blooming and three blooming peach trees that are at their peak now, and two mulberry trees, one at each end and circled by blue thrift. This splash of color the rosy pink peach blossoms and blue thrift has real eye appeal and says spring can't be far away.

Tips To Grow Tomatoes Like A Pro

If Texans could choose but one vegetable to grow in their gardens, the tomato would win hands down.

Tomatoes are grown in about 95 percent of all home gardens in Texas, estimates Dr. Sam Cotner, a horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Once people taste the great flavor of vine ripened, home-grown tomatoes, they just don't want any other kind, says Cotner.

Tomatoes are thought to have originated along the slopes of the Andes Mountains in South America and were brought northward by migratory tribes of Indians. Early explorers took the fruited plants back to Europe and from there it came to America. The first recorded instance of the tomato being grown in the United States was by Thomas Jefferson in his garden at Monticello in 1781, notes Cotner. However, the influence of the French cuisine in South Louisiana actually started the tomato on its way to becoming every gardener's favorite vegetable.

To grow a bountiful supply of tomatoes in Texas, Cotner first of all emphasized planting the right varieties. Varieties such as Big Set, Spring Giant, Jack Pot and Better Boy consistently perform well in all areas of the state.

The horticulturist advises buying transplants of these varieties at nurseries or garden centers or buying seed and planting it in a hot bed or containers but not directly in the garden, since plants need to be started well before cold weather is over.

Before setting out transplants, get the soil in good shape by adding plenty of organic matter and a complete fertilizer such as 10-20-10 or 12-24-12.

Set plants at least three feet apart, with three to four feet between rows. Use boards, shingles, milk cartons or something similar to protect them from early spring winds. Wire cages around plants can provide a structure for plastic trash bags or plastic sheeting that will protect young plants. Later the cages will support the plants, eliminating the need for staking and tying each plant.

Tomatoes also need nurturing throughout the season. This means applying a fertilizer solution—one to two tablespoonfuls of a garden fertilizer dissolved in a gallon of water—every week to 10 days once small tomatoes appear. This solution can be applied in a depression in the soil around the base of the plant or in pots or containers (with holes in the bottom for drainage) set in the ground mid-way between each plant.

Cotner also emphasizes the need for proper watering during the growing season and for controlling insect and disease problems should they occur.

Paying attention to these key practices can lead to a bountiful harvest of tomatoes—the Number One Texas vegetable.

Native Plants Provide Pretty, Economical Landscaping Options

COLLEGE STATION — Most of the ornamental plants and shrubs Texans use to decorate their homes and parks are not native to Texas, and that bothers agricultural experts at Texas A&M University.

Benny Simpson, a plant specialist with the Texas A&M

University Research and Extension Center at Dallas, says using native plants is more than a matter of regional pride.

The advantages, says Simpson and a host of experts who are looking into the issue, are that Texas plants need less care, less fertilizer and most importantly, less water.

Native plants include mesquite, prickly pear, mountain laurel, cenizo or Texas sage and a small, blue holly-leaf bush called agarito. Ground cover includes tubetongue, snapdragon vine and buffalo grass.

THE BEST IN MEAT, CUT THE WAY YOU WANT IT

Senator
Lloyd Bentsen
Watching Washington

Americans are an inventive lot. Historically, we've always brought home the lion's share of Nobel prizes for scientific breakthroughs.

These advances—such things as the invention of the transistor—have paid rich economic dividends, leading to whole new industries and creating millions of jobs.

Technological advances are a big reason our job market has grown enough during the past two decades to nearly accommodate the 50 percent increase of our work force caused by the "baby boom" following World War II.

But our standing as the world's trend setter in technology has eroded. We have fallen behind in the research and development needed for such innovation.

As ranking member of the Senate Subcommittee on International Trade and as Co-Chairman of the Senate Export Caucus, I am deeply concerned about the challenge to our technological superiority.

Not only are industrial nations such as Japan and West Germany challenging us, but third world countries such as Korea and Taiwan are offering stiff competition as well.

We're not being outspent in financing research and development projects. But our trading partners are catching up to us. What's more, they seem to be making better use of their money. Japan, in particular, supports its high technology firms, while the U.S. government seems more to hinder our companies.

Expenditures for research and development in Japan jumped by 20.1 percent annually between 1966 and 1977, almost four times greater than the 5.6 percent U.S. increase.

And by 1968, Japan made the decisive move from imitator to innovator. Japanese patent awards that year began exceeding U.S. patents and by 1977, they ran 50 percent ahead of our patents.

Japan also beats us hands down on training technicians. With a population half the size of ours, Japan graduates one-fourth more electrical engineers than U.S. colleges and universities can produce.

I am impressed by the depth and extent of Japan's national commitment to foster new technologies. Without a doubt it is our most elaborate and effective challenger.

I am not convinced, however, that our best response is to embrace policies similar to those in Japan. Our government's record in dealing with private industry is not encouraging enough to recommend that we rush in and try to copy what seems to have been successful elsewhere.

That's why I have proposed establishment of a Presidential Task Force, chaired by the Vice President, to determine whether policies used in other countries to encourage innovation and research can be adopted by the U.S.

The Task Force on Frontier Technologies would examine thoroughly what other countries are doing and within a year recommend options to Congress for accelerating and improving the efficiency of our own efforts.

We need to find out why the United States is lagging behind in the kinds of research and development that create jobs and prosperity.

Consumer Alert

AUSTIN—Hundreds of deaths occur each year because of fires, making fire safety a definite concern to both homeowners and apartment dwellers.

There are reputable companies that sell fire safety devices for the home, but there are also companies that use high pressure sales pitches to play on the emotions of homeowners and apartment dwellers to get them to buy very expensive and possibly worthless or less-than-efficient fire protection systems for the home.

A typical sales tactic is to send a card through the mail offering a free fire safety inspection for the home or for a salesperson to make an initial phone call to set up an appointment to come to the home. Once the salesperson is in the home, he might take a cursory look around the house and declare that the house is like a matchbox, ready to go up in flames at any time.

If the homeowner already has smoke detectors, the salesman might say that smoke detectors alone will not do the job and that department store smoke detectors are worthless. He might say that there needs to be a coordinated system covering the entire house, which of course, his company offers.

The salesman might then give a demonstration of how smoke is not the biggest culprit of fire deaths, but rather the heat. He might also point to appliances, such as televisions, and say how appliances are one of the major causes of fires.

In describing the system he sells, the salesman often will show metal heat detectors which he will claim will not melt in a fire, making them more desirable than units bought at department stores. He might say that the homeowner needs a detector in every room for adequate protection and that there should be mostly heat detectors and only one or two smoke detectors.

Both the National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) and local fire departments around the state are concerned about misinformation and misrepresentations which are made by some of these companies. Some of the misinformation given can be life threatening, such as telling people that they should crouch instead of crawl and that heat instead of smoke is the biggest cause of fire deaths. NFPA recommends crawling in a fire, and their statistics verify that smoke inhalation is a larger cause of deaths in fires than heat.

Other misrepresentations that some of these companies make are:

1. Appliances are the biggest cause of home fires. FALSE. NFPA says that cigarettes are the biggest cause of home fires.

2. Smoke detectors cannot do an adequate job of fire detection. Heat detectors are what is really needed. FALSE. NFPA says that, for maximum protection, heat detectors in the garage, attic and kitchen, along with smoke detectors on each level of the house and in each bedroom, are a good idea. The local fire departments recommend, though, that if a homeowner can not afford this maximum protection coverage, there are certain areas of the home that can be covered with smoke detectors which will give adequate coverage.

3. A $15.00-$20.00 smoke detector bought at a department store is no good. FALSE. If the smoke detector is working, the department store-type is as good as the type installed at a much higher cost. Whichever brand is chosen, it is a good idea to make sure that the smoke detector is UL listed.

As a wise consumer, if you are solicited by a company wanting to install fire alarms, it is a good idea to check the reputation of the company with your nearest Better Business Bureau or fire department. If you want to know how to best protect your home, your local fire department can give you unbiased information about the number and placement of fire detection devices in your home.

If you do decide to buy a fire protection system, you should also know that, if you sign a contract in your home for over $25.00, you have the right to cancel in writing within three business days from the signing of the contract.

Rule High School entrants piled up an impressive 232 points to outrun all competition. Lisa was top scorer with wins in Ready Writing, Feature Writing, Editorial Writing, Shorthand, Newswriting, and Spelling. She was also named to the All Star Cast for her performance in Rule's one-act, "The Wonder Hat," which tied with Crowell. Both plays will advance to higher competition in Graham April 5.

TAX PLANNING

Written by James E. Rodgers, CPA

IRAs - MORE ADVANTAGEOUS

Because of the more liberal contribution levels, an Individual Retirement Account (IRA) looks better now than in the past. Any individual with earned income (wages or self-employment income) can make a tax deductible contribution to an Individual Retirement Account of 100% of earned income up to a maximum contribution of $2,000. If each spouse on a joint return has earned income of $2,000 or more, each is entitled to a full contribution for a maximum deduction on a joint return of $4,000. If one spouse is not working, the maximum contribution is $2,250 with no more than $2,000 allocated to the plan of either individual. You are not required to make contributions simply because you have an IRA. If you establish a plan and find that you are short of cash in some future year, you may reduce or skip the contribution. If you own a business and your spouse is not working, consider providing your spouse with enough work to justify $2,000 in wages. This would allow for a full contribution to an IRA for your spouse as well. Some institutions setting up IRAs will let you direct the investments. You can tell the Trustee to put your money in stocks, real estate, money market, etc. These institutions will normally have a minimum administrative fee since they will not necessarily make money from your investment program. If you feel you have a talent for making a good return on your investments, this might be the plan for you. Individual Retirement Accounts can be established and contributions made through the due date for the filing of the tax return including any extensions requested. The contribution for 1982 can still be made up through April 15th or as late as August 15th if you extend your return. An IRA funded for 30 years at $2,000 per year earning 12% will accumulate to $482,000. Your total contributions would be $60,000.

McDonald's Announces Nationwide Search For 1983 All-American High School Band

CHICAGO, IL, APRIL 1983—A nationwide search is on for 104 of this country's best young musicians, to represent their states in the 1983 McDonald's All-American High School Band. The prestigious musical unit will perform in some of this country's most noted parades, including Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City and the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, California. Each year, high school band directors throughout the U.S., Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico are invited to nominate their two most talented students to the All-American Band. Official nomination forms have been mailed to 26,000 band directors. From the thousands of nominations received, a select group of 104 musicians—two from each state and the District of Columbia, plus one member each from the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico—are chosen to be members of the All-American Band. A committee of music educators selects the 104 members based on the nominating band director's recommendation, musical honors and achievements, audition tapes and the Band's instrumentation and state representation requirements. The final 104 members of the 1983 Band will be announced in early October. McDonald's All-American High School Band was created in 1967 to honor talented high school musicians with the same "all-American" status bestowed on athletes. For 17 years, the All-American Band program has brought 104 musicians together to share unique performance and educational experiences, with all expenses paid by McDonald's Corporation. In addition to national performance opportunities, Band members are able to audition for music scholarships to distinguished educational institutions such as the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, Shenandoah College and Conservatory of Music in Virginia and the National Music Camp at Interlochen, Michigan. Yamaha Musical Products, Inc. awards a new, professional-model instrument to an outstanding player in the band, and provides all euphoniums, sousaphones, percussion, combo keyboards and other combo products used by the band. Dr. William Foster, director

The McDonald's All-American High School Band, comprised of 104 accomplished musicians representing every state in the nation, will march in the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City and the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena.

Home Appliance Repairs Becoming More Common

From Lou Gilly
COUNTY EXTENSION AGENT

Home appliance repairs by consumers are becoming more common because of the high cost of repair service. Know your limitations before attempting any repairs, and start out with simple tasks to develop your skills. You may find that repairing your own appliances is easier than you think.

Determine whether repair is really needed. Be sure that the appliance is plugged in, and that a fuse is not blown or a breaker tripped. This will eliminate wasted time or service calls.

Before you begin your repairs, find the manual or instruction sheet that came with the appliance, and re-read it. Make a habit of keeping manuals in a central place so they can be found quickly and easily.

Many "do-it-yourself" repair books are available commercially or through appliance companies. You may also find pamphlets and workshops offered in your community.

Each job will require different tools, but it is good to start out with a few basic, good quality items. Add extra tools as additional skills are developed.

Beginners usually need a claw-type hammer and several screwdrivers, both blade and Phillips head types, in various sizes. Adjustable wrenches are useful, as are both slip joint and needle nose pliers.

Other handy items include a spray can of silicone and a can of all-purpose oil to free rusty, clogged or stuck areas. Scrap fabric or "rags" are needed to clean appliances and hands.

For your own safety, be sure the appliance is unplugged or turned off before you tackle a repair job.

Remember that some repair jobs can be avoided by following the use and care manuals that come with the appliance. Keep all appliances cleaned and oiled, and change filters as needed. Preventive maintenance may prolong the life of your appliances.

Superintendent's Views

BY JAMES LANIER
Superintendent, Haskell ISD

I am quoting from a newsletter from TASB (Texas Association of School Boards) concerning Governor Mark White's budget proposal. I will strive to show the effect of this proposal on our local situation. Just remember, it is quite likely this proposal will be changed, amended, etc. a great deal before its passage into law.

The Texas Association of School Boards commends Governor Mark White for his commitment to quality public education in Texas, as indicated by his budget address to the 68th Legislature on March 9. In particular, school districts support his efforts to increase salaries for public school personnel. Most local districts currently use state monies and local property taxes to enrich the salaries of their employees above levels provided by the Foundation School Program. Over 82 percent of districts' operating budgets are directly spent for personnel costs. This local effort clearly indicates that districts share Governor White's commitment to public education.

However, TASB is concerned that the Governor's proposed budget indicates a lack of understanding of the realities of public school finance in Texas. Although his budget increases education funding by $1.8 billion for the 1984-1985 biennium, it lacks the necessary balance between the various components of the Foundation School Program. School districts could be forced to either raise local property taxes to historically high levels and face the possibility of rollback elections, or else significantly reduce their staffs and services.

In recent sessions, the salary component of the FSP has received between 65 percent and 70 percent of increased state funding, with other components receiving between 30 and 35 percent. Governor White's budget places about 88 percent of increased funding in salaries. Specifically, his plan would increase state support for salaries by $1.6 billion for the 1984-85 biennium equalization aid by $170 million, and bilingual education by $10 million. Other components of the FSP, such as maintenance and operations, compensatory education, gifted and talented education, and transportation, would not receive any significant increase in funding. In addition, the statewide local fund assignment would be increased by $166 million for the biennium, and the minimum aid hold harmless would be completely eliminated.

The combined effect of these proposals is to shift the responsibility for raising taxes from the state level to local schools across Texas.

The state provides fundings for less than half of the personnel employed by school districts in Texas. In 1981-82, districts employed about 387,000 people and paid salaries of nearly $5.8 billion. The Foundation School Program covered only 164,954 full-time equivalent personnel. Local districts employed an additional 47,324 personnel units, many of whom are required because of state or federal mandates. In addition, local districts hired 140,133 classified personnel, such as bus drivers, cafeteria and maintenance employees, and others. If the state raises the salaries of FSP employees, then local districts must find the money to give equivalent raises to the nearly 190,000 employees not covered by the state.

Commissioner of Education, Raymon Bynum, has testified that each $1 increase in salaries by the state requires a 50 cent increase by local districts to pass the raises on to their employees. Therefore, Governor White's proposed increase of $1.6 billion would require local districts to find $800 million. Since this money is not provided in other components of the FSP and since the increase in equalization aid will be offset statewide by the increase in local fund assignments, local districts must increase property taxes by $800 million for salaries alone. Increase in utilities, insurance, supplies and other costs will cause additional tax increases. These increases in taxes will not be spread uniformly. Areas that will be especially hard hit are counties such as Dallas, Tarrant, Harris, Travis, Jefferson, Midland, and Ector and rural Texas.

I will conclude this response next week plus analyze the possible effect on Haskell ISD.

Handle Fish Properly For Better Survival

Just how successful are most well-meaning anglers when the catch is returned to fight another day?

Today's angler is far advanced in both knowledge and equipment compared to his counterpart of a few years ago, says Billy Higginbotham, fisheries specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Electronic gadgetry and live wells adorn most fishing boats to assist the angler in his favorite pastime. Additionally, the conservation minded approach of fish-for-fun or catch-and-release fishing is more evident. This is especially true of the black bass purists.

Ideally, fish that are to be returned to the water should be handled with wet hands or unhooked while still in the water. A protective mucus covering on fish provides a shield against a variety of diseases and parasites. If the fish are handled with dry hands, a towel or allowed to flop around on the boat deck or bank prior to release, the fish may become more susceptible to disease problems.

Although the fish may swim off in a frisky manner, stress induced by rough handling may allow disease pathogens to affect the fish one or two weeks later, Higginbotham points out.

Live wells equipped with water pumps for aeration are very popular on most boats. Anglers use the live wells to hold fish until a stringer is caught or the catch is returned to the lake.

Live wells perform admirably throughout most of the year as long as the drain is plugged when moving from one area to another. However, long term holding in even the best of live wells can stress fish badly during hot summer weather.

Since most live wells pull water near the surface to aerate the live well, water temperatures may be extremely high in late summer.

Few fish species can withstand these high temperatures for extended periods of time. As a result, fish released by well meaning anglers at the end of the day may be in such poor shape that the chance for survival is slim.

Carry an ice chest on those hot weather trips to keep fish for the table. The fish will remain fresher when placed on ice as compared to a stringer, basket or live well.

To most anglers, conservation means keeping only the fish needed. It also means the wise use of fish that have been deeply hooked or stressed to the point where survival is questionable, Higginbotham said.

CAPITOL UPDATE

John Tower
U.S. SENATOR for TEXAS
WASHINGTON, D.C. 20510

One of the most important pieces of legislation Congress will pass this year is the Budget Resolution which sets spending levels and revenue requirements.

The House of Representatives already has passed its version of the Budget Resolution. Its content is nothing short of alarming, for it threatens to un-do all of the progress we have made during the past two years in controlling domestic spending, reducing the tax burden on the American citizen and rebuilding our national defense capability.

The House-passed resolution would raise taxes by $315 billion over the next five years. The only way to achieve such a massive tax increase would be to cancel the 10 percent income tax cut scheduled for July and the indexing of income tax rates scheduled to begin in 1984.

This would mean the average family would pay an additional $3,570 over the next five years. Those earning less than $10,000 would see a tax increase of 24 percent. For those earning between $10,000 and $50,000 the tax increase would amount to 15 percent; but for those earning more than $200,000, the increase would be only 3 percent.

Additionally, the House would have us launch a five-year domestic spending spree amounting to $181 billion. It would spur runaway spending for so-called entitlement spending by repealing $10 billion of previously enacted food stamp, welfare and Medicaid reforms and flatly rejecting $71 billion in new entitlement savings proposed by the President's budget for the next five years.

The House-passed version also would add an additional $58 billion for next year in anti-recession and social spending programs -- money which experience has shown us is not likely to be spent until the recession is well over.

In the area of national defense, the Budget Resolution passed by the House would cut spending by $206 billion in budget authority over the next five years. This would result in lower defense spending than even that which President Carter proposed, and would effectively cancel our efforts to rebuild our national defense capability.

Fortunately, the House action is only the first step in adopting a Budget Resolution. Now the Senate will pass its version, and then a conference committee made up of members of both houses will reach a compromise agreement.

But the House action does put much more pressure on the Senate to act responsibly. When we consider the Budget Resolution, it is critically important that we retain the income tax relief for lower- and middle-income Americans embodied in the July tax cut and 1984 indexing of tax rates. We must hold our ground in the battle to control domestic spending. And we must allow for adequate funding of our national defense needs.

I believe that the American people will insist that we do these things, and that the House yield on the major elements that threaten our economy and our security. I urge you to let all of us who represent you in Washington know what you want from us in the way of spending and tax policy.

Lone Star State Names 16 New Big Trees

Hollywood movie producers through the years have wrongly tagged the entire state of Texas with a semi-desert image. In reality the Lone Star State now ranks third among the 50 for having the largest number of confirmed National Champion Big Trees.

The Texas Forest Service and the American Forestry Association have named 16 new National Champion Big Trees to Texas' credit. These trees are the largest of their species in the United States.

Texas now has 66 champions, beating out California for the first time, which has 62. Number two, Michigan, has 70 champs, and top ranked Florida has more than 100 tree species recognized as the largest in the nation.

The Texas entries were made by people through out the state. Many of the trees belong to individuals, but several are located on public land. This is the largest number of National Champion trees added to the Texas Registry of Big Trees in several years, according to Bill Terry, Information & Education Specialist with the Texas Forest Service.

The Big Bend National Park in Brewster County added the most trees with a total of seven. They included a Graves oak, drooping juniper, Texas madrone, Chisos oak, netleaf oak, Vasey oak and Mexican pinyon.

The largest of these trees is the Graves oak. It has a trunk circumference of 154 inches, a height of 42 feet and a crown spread of 42 feet. Like the other Brewster County champions, it is located on the Big Bend National Park and was nominated by Chief Ranger Jim Liles.

A mesquite in San Antonio was named a champion. It is located on the grounds of the Governor's Palace and was nominated by Ann Holland, urban forester with the Texas Forest Service.

In the Rio Grande Valley, a huisache on the property of T.J. Griffith near Zapata, was named a National Champion. This is the first time a huisache has been nominated.

New National Champions located in East Texas include a barberry hawthorn, littlehip hawthorn, May hawthorn, common prickly-ash and American snowbell. All are located on National Forests in East Texas, managed by the U.S. Forest Service.

At the same time, 15 new trees were added to the Texas Registry of Big Trees as the largest in the state, but not in the nation.

The new state champs include an avocado, pond cypress, Eastern cottonwood, California sycamore and desert willow in Bexar County. Other champs are a quaking aspen, Arizona cypress, Douglas fir, canyon maple, Emory oak, Gray oak and ponderosa pine. They are all located in Brewster County.

Two other state champions are a paw-paw in San Augustine County and a vitex in Brown County.

The "Registry of Champion Big Trees in Texas" is maintained by the Texas Forest Service in order to record the largest trees growing in the state. Anyone knowing of a tree which might qualify, should request a nomination form from the Texas Forest Service, Big Tree Program, I&E Section, P.O. Box 310, Lufkin, Texas 75901.

A single free copy of the Texas Registry is available from the above address. Please request the "Registry of Champion Big Trees in Texas."

Congressional Comments

Congressman Charles W. Stenholm (D-Stamford) presided over the organizational meeting of the National Agricultural Forum today and called the gathering "a resounding success and a hopeful sign for the future."

Stenholm, instrumental in founding the Texas Agricultural Forum in 1982, said the guiding principle of a Forum, whether state or national, is to provide a full view of the policy options which face the agricultural community.

"The key word is 'alternatives,'" Stenholm said. "Through the Forum, producers and others are able to identify the alternatives before us. Then, through the democratic process, we can begin to see more effective action on the legislative front."

About 300 agricultural leaders from across the nation were present in the historic Cannon Caucus Room in Washington as Stenholm and other members of Congress, including House Agriculture Committee chairman Kika De la Garza, presented the Forum concept and led a discussion on how it would work. Those present ranged from Kansas wheat farmers to Federal Reserve Board economists, and from Texas cattlemen to fertilizer company executives.

Stenholm stressed that the National Agricultural Forum cannot be in competition with existing farm groups which take positions on various issues.

"This is not another general farm organization," the Stamford Democrat said. "We've got some fine groups already, and the last thing we need is another one to duplicate their work. The Forum will not lobby, nor will it impose a position on the issues with which it deals."

"It will say, 'These are the options before us,'" he added, "but it will not choose among them. That's up to the individuals and groups who belong to the Forum. The lobbying, the advocacy is their job."

Stenholm led a bipartisan group of farm-state Congressmen in organizing the kickoff Forum meeting. The group includes nineteen other Members of Congress, and Stenholm said the list is growing all the time.

"There's a great feeling, both in the Congress and among agricultural groups, that the time has come for an approach like this," Stenholm said. "The idea is to bring a little unity to our diversity, not by imposing a consensus, but by helping one to develop through education."

Groups like the Texas Agricultural Forum have been formed in several states, Stenholm said, and the national effort would aim at pulling them together. In addition, he said, all segments of agriculture and agribusiness would be represented. Staffing for the Forum would be provided through the Agriculture Council of America, a nonpartisan educational group which annually sponsors National Agriculture Day.

"Never in my political experience," Stenholm said, "has there been a greater opportunity to bring agriculture together than right now — because never before have our problems been so critical. The vital thing is to move toward greater unity, and I believe the Forum is one step — a crucial, important step — along that road."

9.3 Million Acres Signed To PIK Program

Texas farmers have signed up en masse for the PIK (payment-in-kind) program and plan to take some 9.3 million acres out of crop production for the 1983 season.

The 9.3-million-acre reduction is out of a base of almost 24 million acres of wheat, cotton, grain sorghum, corn, rice, barley and oats. Farmers will idle 3.5 million acres of cotton out of a base of 8.1 million; 3.1 million acres of wheat out of 7.4 million; 2.4 million acres of corn and grain sorghum out of 6.9 million; 300,000 acres of rice out of 600,000; and 35,000 acres of oats and barley out of 628,000. The land being idled in Texas is part of some 82 million acres or about a third of the U.S. cropland being taken out of production this year.

"Farmers in Texas as well as the other states went for the PIK program in a big way," says Dr. Carl Anderson, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System. "After three years of building supplies and experiencing low prices and incomes, farmers were ready to participate in PIK, a program devised to pay farmers with surplus farm commodities for taking their land out of production."

Despite the drop in cotton acreage, Texas farmers could still produce a crop equal to or better than last year's which was sharply reduced when hail destroyed some 2 million acres in the South Plains, notes Anderson. Of course, weather again will be a big factor this year. And yields likely will be up because farmers will be using their best acres, having idled their least productive land.

Wheat, corn, grain sorghum and rice should be down sharply in Texas due to sign-up in PIK, but again weather conditions and farming of the most productive land will be key factors, says the economist.

"With the reduced production this year and an improving economy in the U.S. and abroad, farmers should see some strengthening in crop prices," believes Anderson. "Some price improvements have already started in some commodities in anticipation of this year's reduced production. Also, export activities may pick up soon if other countries see the current market situation as most favorable instead of risking higher prices later in the year."
