VA THROUGH TOOTHED FRAME

THE early spring, when the cold winds are still sweeping over the rice fields in Japan, there is an aspect of lifelessness and desolation about them. To the European eyes accustomed to dry-cultivated soil, or green grass meadows with feeding cattle in them, the sight of so much mud and water in the landscape appears depressing, and there is a great absence of human habitations and people as well; but the character of the crops under cultivation makes it necessary that the peasants should be housed in settlements or villages away from the large wet areas given up to the growing of rice and

These rice areas are divided up into fields or plots of all shapes and sizes by small grass-grown ridges a few inches in height, and averaging about a foot in breadth, thus enclosing the soft mud in which the rice is planted. The preparation of these fields is extremely arduous work, involving much hoeing and careful construction of these mud dams, and it includes a whole system of terracing, whereby the water necessary for irrigation is led gradually down from field to field, for all high-class rice requires flooding. The little streams and rivulets which provide the water for these terraced hills and wide valleys are very often shaded by bamboo plants, and these streams feed the ditches cut for water channels; narrow tracks or feotpaths are also made through the rice fields. But if these fields look desolate at springtime, there is no lack of life in them when the planting season begins in June, for then they are filled with men and women bustly engaged in transplanting the young rice plants; and, fortunately for this industry, Japan possesses a large supply of cheap labor. The seeds of the rice are first thickly sown in the small wet fields, or nursery beds, in the early spring (April), and when the young plants have attained the height of four inches or thereabouts, they are very carefully transplanted to the larger fields, at wider intervals, in rows, and, as may be imagined, this is an exceedingly laborious kind of work. When one looks at the innumerable little plants in the nurserles, with their vivid green shoots and delicate-looking roots, the removing of them by hand to the larger fields and planting singly seems an almost impossible task, and with European labor it might be so; but the peasantry of Japan have been accustomed to this tedious method of agriculture through many centuries and, from habit, it is taken as a matter of course. and the men and women, standing kneedeep in the mud and water and stooping over their toilsome work, spare no pains in the planting out of the young rice in the soft mud. The value of the harvest is probably in their mines as the reward for all this labor.

The eastern agricultural laborer must be seen to be fully realized. Japanese backs are supple! but the sight of so much stooping and bending is enough to make a European feel the pains of lumbago in his back from the mere contemplation of it. When the rice is growing up then the fields show a very brilliant green, and they are kept under a few inches of water all the time the young crops are growing, which is only drained away just before the harvesting of the rice. The rice plant blooms early in September, and the crops are reaped in October, and hung up to dry on short poles. The threshing is done with flails or heckles, a kind of comb. Various methods of fertilization are used by the Japanese farmer, some of them most unsavory to the European nose; in fact, the "smells" that emanate from the ground in the agricultural districts in Japan often destroy one's sense of appreciation of their fine cultivation when inspecting it closely, and the Japanese people must either have less keen noses than ours or else do not mind the odors, for they appear in no way to affect them as they do ourselves. If a European takes a walk in the rice elds, or "paddy fields," as he calls them, during hot months he is sure to get severely bitten mosquitoes, and for Europeans living near the areas these pests are a great trial during

Europeans have stated that Japan produces two crops of rice yearly, but this is an ereous idea, speaking generally. The winter prevents the growing of more than one crop yearly, but there is a part of Japan that does produce two crops, viz., the Tosa province, in one of the south ern islands, but this is owing to the difference of climate there, caused by the Kuro-shio, or "black current." which, flowing northward from the direction of Formosa and the Philippine islands, warms

the southern and southeastern coasts of Japan. very much the same way as the Gulf stream warms the coasts of western Europe; and partly on account of her positing geographically, with her long stretch of country from north to south, and the influence of winds and ocean currents, Japan has a large variety of temperature throughout the whole empire.

Rice is very largely grown in the southern is lands as well as in the southern part of the main island, where one sees very extensive rice fields, but not in the north. There is a kind of dry rice grown, but this is not of good quality.

The rice grown in Japan is reckoned among the best in the world, and she takes third place among the rice-producing countries, and exports very large quantities. She imports rice as well. and this may sound strange in a rice-growing country: but the quality of her home-grown ricebeing so very fine, she exports all she can and imports cheaper rice for her home consumption from Korea and China and India that is of inferior quality to her own; but mixed with Japanese rice it is used freely among the poorer classes. Although it is the staple food, other kinds of grain are used as well-millet, barley and wheat are cultivated, and have been grown for food during past centuries in the country. Crops of these are grown during the time when the rice fields lie fallow. Two kinds of potatoes are grown as well for consumption.

Hitherto the rice consumers in Japan have been mostly the people living in the towns, the peasantry looking upon it as somewhat of a luxury. But the classes of consumers have been widening out and the standard of living is growing higher in Japan, and more rice is being consumed in the country than formerly, and this. in addition to the fact that the population is rapidly increasing, means that the question of the production of the food supplies in the country in the future is one that has to be seriously considered, and for these reasons the Japanese government has considered the question of the increasing demand for food supply very care-

Many years ago the institutes for agricultural experiments were established, and these are doing their work well. Much has been carried out for the rearrangement of the farm fields, in the partitions, and in the irrigation systems of furrows and canals; works of this kind carried out in sufficient extent will enlarge the farm areas very considerably and lessen the necessity for opening up any new land for cultivation. It is by following these methods that Japan is prepar: ing herself to meet the increasing demand for food. Failure of crop and consequent famine have to be met by larger imports, but necessarily cause great distress among the people.

Times and seasons are scrupulously regarded by the peasantry for all their agricultural operations. The terrible storms in the typhoon season are very much dreaded early in September. When WHAT SHOULD BE UNDERTAKEN FOR BENEFIT OF SCHOOLS.

Selection of County Superintendents by Boards Rather Than by Elections May Be Accomplished.

Austin, Tex.-Enthusiastic belief in he rural school as the means of Improvement of all phases of rural life and optimism as to rural school progress in the immediate tuture marked the closing sessions of rural educaion week at the university Friday. Unanimity of purpose has been reached; during the discussions of the past five days many diverse opinions have been given as what should be undertaken for the betterment of Texas schools; conflicting elements have been eliminated and those present agreed to support a program satisfactory to all. Perhaps the most prominent of proposed reforms which will be sought from the next legislature by representatives of these educators is the election of county superintend ents by county boards of school trustees rather than by the voters of re-

Speakers dealt with qualifications of when you use pure, harmless rural school teachers and their preparation, improvement and strengthening the influence and power of the county superintendents and the use of school surveys, such as were completed in five typical counties of Texas early in the present year by the extension department of the Universtry of Texas. At the business meet ing L. L. Pugh, county superintendent of Harris County, was chosen president of the rural school assembly for the ensuing year. Superintendent Pugh has already begun preparation tendance of county superintendents in

THOUGHT SHE COULD NOT LIVE

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Unionville, Mo.-"I suffered from a female trouble and I got so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without holding on to something. I had nervous spells and my fingers would cramp and my face would draw, and I could not speak, nor sleep to do any good, had no appetite, and everyone thought I would not live. Some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had taken so much medicine and my doctor said he could do me no good so I told my husband he might get me a bottle and I would try it. By the time I had taken it I felt better. I continued its use, and now I am well and strong.

"I have always recommended your medicine ever since I was so wonderfully benefitted by it and I hope this letter will be the means of saving some other poor woman from suffering."-Mrs. Martha Seavey, Box 1144, filled all her prior duties. Unionville, Missouri.

The makers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound have thousands of such letters as that above - they tell the truth, else they could not have been obtained for love or money. This medicine is no stranger - it has stood the story; test for years.

If there are any complications you do not understand write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

One Hundred Years Ago

The curious modes which women affect now began as far back as 1798, which is a period we should hardly wish to copy in most respects. A dance not at all unlike the tango was in vogue at that time, and had many exponents, who danced in loose bodices opening in a V shape from the shoulders almost to the waist. Skirts were slit and were often made of transparent gauze. We may return to the gowns of that period, which were without waists, having simply a girdle to the bust, with skirts caught up rather short in front and slightly trained at the back In 1800 women were sandals and bare feet. Corset belts were only about two inches wide. Some gowns were caught up to the knee with large cameos. Soon fashion overreached itself and then came crinolines, pointed footgear and unnaturally small waists. Are we coming to this?

BRYAN IS IN FAVOR OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

He Asks No Political Right for Him self He is Not Willing to Grant His Wife.

Washington - Secretary Bryan, in formal statement Thursday, came out for woman suffrage. He declared he would ask no political right for himself he was not willing to grant his wife, and announced he would support the proposed state constitutional amendment extending the franchise to women to be voted on in Nebraska next November Woman, Mr. Bryan said, had proved herself equal to every responsibility imposed on her and would not fail society in this emergency. Above all ballot, he placed the right of the mother to a voice in the molding of the environment of her children.

"The mother," the secretary said. "can justly claim the right to employ every effective weapon for the protection of those whose interest she pean cities. guards, and the ballot will put within her reach all the instrumentalities of government, including the police power

"As man and woman are cotenants of equality for treatment in all that pertains to their joint life and its opon those who claim for one an advan. no passengers. tage over the other in determining proposition, in my judgment, are convincing.

"The first objection I remember to have heard was that as woman can not bear arms she should not have a voice in deciding questions that might lead to war, or in enacting laws that might require an army to enforce. This argument is seldom offered now. for as civilization advances laws are sion of the public opinion. As we look back over the past, we may well wonder whether the peace movement would not have grown more rapidly had woman been consulted before hostilitles began."

Huerta and Party Are Anxious to Get Out of Country, and Their Delay at Puerto Mexico Is Not Pleasing at All.

City of Mexico .- According to or ders issued Saturday by President Carbajal to the governors of states and the military chiefs, no one in the future is to be executed without proper trial. This means the re-establishment of the constitutional rights suspended by Huerta. President Carbajal has also ordered that the statue of Washington, dragged by the populace through the streets after the occupation of Vera Cruz, shall be replaced at once.

Ex-President Huert and his party may be delayed several days in their departure from Mexico. A message received Sunday from President Carbajal refused the use of the Mexican gunboats for that purpose. The message explained that it was not deemed wise at this time that Mexican warships should be used for such a purpose, but stated that the government would pay for the use of any vessel Huerta might charter.

Unwillingness to leave behind any friends who want to accompany him into exile, and fallure to select a vessel to carry them beyond the reach of the constitutionalists has resulted in the postponement by General Huerta of his departure.

With a contemptuous disregard for his enemies, Muerta shrugged his shoulders at the difficulties which will other arguments for giving her the force him to remain in the country another twenty-four hours, but most of the members of the party showed much disappointment because they could not get out at once.

Orozco Starts Revolution.

Puerto Mexico.-General Pascual Orozco, supported by most of those men who were with him in the revolution against Madero in 1912, will lead the first organized rebellion against the new government, according to advices which reached Huerta's camp Saturday. Orozco, it is reported, has planned to mobilize such forces as are available in and about Aguascalientes, move to Queretaro and there being operations. He counts on the assistance of General Marcelo Staveo, General Benjamin Argumedo and General Antonio Rojas.

Dominican Capital Weakening.

Washington.-While President Bordas of the Dominican republic, with his scanty army, is besieging the northern rebels at Puerta Plata, his hold upon the capital, San Domingo cording to advices to the state department, the southern insurgents already are in a position to dictate terms which may mean abdication or flight for Bordas.

LESSON FOR JULY 26

THE POUNDS AND THE TALENTS LESSON TEXT-Luke 19:11-27, cf. Matt. 5:14-30.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will set thee overmany things; enter into the joy of thy lord." Matt. 25-21 R. V.

We are told plainly why Jesus spoke the first parable (v. 11). We must beware of confusing these two parables though they are one in their essential teachings.

The parable of the pounds was uttered before the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem while that of the talents was spoken subsequently. This association does not mean identity for each has a separate lesson. Both have to do with an absent ford whose return was imminent. The Jews looked for a temporal visible Kingdom and many were associating the earthly life of our Lord with that expected manifestation. Hence this parable as recorded by Luke.

Issue Is Fidelity.

1. "Occupy Till I Come," vv. 11.14. then establish his kingdom. In view Clara was a little worried. "Pa said. She laughed and so did he. He had, of this return and consummation, his servants are to give their undivided attention to their immediate responsibilities. They are to trade, to do business with that that has been intrusted to them. They are to actively discharge their duty. Ere the visible kingdom is established, Jesus told She meant it very innocently, yet it these Jews, there must be a period of "nobleman" whose ascension into 18-23; I Pet. 3:22. He may return at She was not in the least suspicious. any time. In neither parable is there "I don't think there's any doubt "I mean in New York—that great, big. a full description of the kingdom as it. is to be established, for both have to do with the servants. The issue is that of fidelity in each case.

proper subjects the Jews, John 1:11; Acts 4:27-28, and in this connection we recall their cry, "Away with him, crucify," Luke 23:8; John 19:15. These "citizens," also include all of his professed followers but not necessarily regenerated men, Matt. 7:22-33. The king gives to each servant (v. 13) a pound (about $18.00). His deposit is equal in each case. In the parable of the talents there is a difference in the amounts bestowed. This last emphasizes the fact that each is to be heldresponsible according to the measureof his own personal ability. these two together we see that all the servants of the king are responsible for the one pound which is a symbol of the common fact of the kingdom power. At the same time the servant is also responsible for that common power according to the measure in which it is entrusted to him, in which he is able to deal with it. The small amount of one pound indicates our responsibility for the smallest gifts.

Parable of Pounds. II. "When He Was Returned." vva 15-30. The parable of the pounds was spoken to those who thought he must at once establish he kingdom of God. That of the talents was given in answer to the disciples' inquiry as to when certain things which he had foretold would take place. Upon his return all these servants will be summoned before him, Matt. 25:18, Rom. 14:10-12. II Cor. 5:10. As Jesus stood there, he, likewise of that as of all other ages, saw ahead of him Jerusalem with its scourging, suffering and death. He also saw beyond that his resurrection and departure to receive a kingdom (v. 12), a period therefore in this world during whichhis servants shall be responsible for the care of his interests, a time during which they shall occupy, do bustness with what he has entrusted them of the kingdom authority and power. All of this will culminate in his return when he will deal with those to whom this responsibility has been given, and then establish finally his kingdom. In the parable Jesus deals with each servant separately, and emphasizes the fact of stewardship. The pound belonged to the king. For his faithfulness the first servant received.

v. 17, (a) the king's commendation and (b) authority over ten cities. Later, (v. 24) be also received another cal fraternity avowed that the habit pound. The second did not give quite so good a report, and his reward maintained that the coca leaves had lacked the apprebation of the king. faithfulness. The third report was bad. It reveals neglect, laziness, and a wrong conception regarding the king. He sought to excuse his sloth by blaming another. The excuses of the sinner "wicked servant" lost what he would

SAVE YOURSELF FROM YEARS OF SLOW PAY

Take this hour to look your future squarely in the face. What progress are you making? What will you be five, ten or twenty years from now? What will you be doing? Will you still be plugging away on a small-pay job, just because you failed to secure the PROPER training early in life? Or will you take your future in your own hands right now-break 'away from the low-pay ranks, or forever avoid them, and get the necessary training that will enable you to take a position where you can earn the kind of salary you are entitled to? THE RIGHT KIND of training is all you need to do this, and DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL LUSINESS COLLEGE, the Big School, San Antonio, Texas, is THE school of the Southwest that is fitted to give you the best there is to be had in a Business Training. You may enter any day in the year (Except Sundays) and take up work in any one or more of our excellent courses in Bookkeeping and Banking, Shorthand and Typewriting, Telegraphy and Railroading and Spanish, Ask for catalogue and any further information you may desire about the course you are most intesested in. How She Was Saved From Surgeon's Keriff

LESSON FOR OCTOBER 26 SIN OF MOSES AND AARON.

LESSON TEXT—Numbers 20:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Jehovah, my rock and my redeemer." Ps. 19:14.

Forty years have passed since Isreal committed its fatal mistake of discbedience. This lesson is a three-sided picture. A murmuring, blindly discbedient people; God, the righteous director of the affairs of men; Moses and Aaron, the divinely appointed but sorely tested leaders of the people. 1. The people's petition, vv. 1-5-The name of this place was Meribah (v. 13), which means strife. It was not the fault of God nor the desired leadings of Moses that brought these people to this place. Forty years of wandering seemingly had not taught them this lesson. Many people accuse God when they themselves, are to be blamed for the evil that comes upon them. James 1:13-15. What a terrible ungrateful these people are.

Their Usual Plan. 11. God's Plan, vv. 6-8. Moses and Aaron followed their usual, and the wisest plan of taking their difficulty to God. Separated from the people they throw themselves upon their faces before him and he graciously manifested himself unto them and gave them explicit directions (v. 8). Other times Mooes had had this same experience, ch. 14:5; 16:4, Ex. 17:4, etc. It is an inspiration to recall the multiplied times God has used these common agencies in the bands of his consecrated zervants to work his mighty deeds—an ox-goad, a boy's sling, a lamp and a pitcher, a few

GO BACK TO MOTHER NATURE

Scientists in Their Discoveries Uncover Lead That May Mean Much to the Race.

If the green plant in sunlight can eiaborate from water and carbon dioxide one of our chief food substances, starch, there is no reason why the biological chemist should not discover the secret of this process and imitate it on a commercial scale. Starch, I believe, has never been synthetized, but some sugars have been so constructed. Two years ago Stoklasa and Sdobnicky made the remarkable discovery that by the action of ultraviolet light on nascent hydrogen and carbon dioxide sugar was formed. Such discoveries as this suggest the means by which we are to throw of. our slavery to the green plant, and 1 am convinced that in time this overthrow will become so complete that our staple foods will be the products of the biological chemist.-Popular Science Monthly.

ice Cavern le Filling Up.

Hungary's world renowned national wonder, the ice cavern of Dobsina, is threatened with serious danger. An official of the meteorologic institute of Budapest established, after a lengthy observation, that ice is forming in the cavern so fast and in such a measure that it will completely fill the cavern in one or two decades, and it is quite possible the cavern will not be approachable in a few years. The temperature is steadily one degree below the freezing point in the cavern, causing the ever increasing precipitation and the water that trickles in turns to ice immediately, thickening the walls and arches.
