

THE KERRVILLE ADVANCE

VOL. 5.

KERRVILLE, TEXAS, THURSDAY, NOV. 2, 1916

NO. 7

DUNBAR FOR COUNTY JUDGE

I entered the race for County Judge of Kerr County at the solicitation of quite a number of the very best citizens of the County, and I have tried to conduct my campaign on clean and honest lines. The race is about run and I hope my conduct will meet with the approval of those men who had faith enough in me to believe that I could win the race and make a good officer. In the beginning I made up my mind to win, if it could be done fairly and honestly, and now that the end of the race is almost in sight, I believe firmly that I will win.

If you believe that I am an honest man and qualified to fill the office, I most earnestly solicit your support.

If you believe that I am an honest man and better qualified under the circumstances to fill the office, than either of my opponents, then I have a right to expect your support.

But, if you do not believe that I am an honest man or that I am not qualified to fill the office, then I neither solicit nor expect your support.

It is hardly possible that any candidate for office in this county will see every voter, and I am no exception to the rule. There are quite a number whom I will not be able to see before election day, but I am well enough known over the county, that no man need say that he did not know anything about me. So, if I have not met you personally, I will take it as a favor if you will enquire of some neighbor or friend in whom you have confidence, as to my integrity and qualifications.

Finally, let me say that I am not making any rash promises as a bid for votes. I am not a politician. I will tend its thanks and hearty appreciation.

Hallow'een Program at Ingram

The patrons of the Ingram school and public generally were treated to an interesting program at the school house Tuesday evening.

An address by the principal, Mrs. Gussie Sample, songs by the children, apple eating, witch dance, fortune drawing and other appropriate parts were highly enjoyed. This was followed by an address by Judge Wallace. Miss Edith Sutton, assistant teacher, assisted Mrs. Sample in arranging the entertainment. Due appreciation was shown by those present.

Surprise Birthday Party

A most enjoyable evening was spent last Friday when several of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bailey gathered and gave Mr. Bailey a surprise, the occasion being his birthday. Great excitement and merriment prevailed as "Panic" and other games were played. It seemed as if the men folks know more about the kitchen than they are given credit for, as one of them was victor in a contest, "A Kitchen Romance." The guests were then led into the dining room which was beautifully decorated and where delicious refreshments were served. Lots of fun resulted in the cutting of the birthday cake after which Miss Deering was a dime better off. All expressed themselves as having a most enjoyable time and wished their host many more happy birthdays.

Election Day Dinner.

The Ladies of the Methodist Church will serve a "chicken pie dinner" on election day, Nov. 7th, at the old postoffice building, which through the kindness of Capt. Chas. Schreiner is being cleaned, painted and fixed up in tip-top shape for the occasion. The ministers of the church and their wives are invited to that my pastures are posted and none as guests. The patronage of hunting will be allowed therein. Public is respectfully solicited. Price of dinner will be 35 cents. Committee.

To the Voters of Kerr County.

In my canvass of the county as a candidate for the office of County Judge, it has been impossible for me to see every voter and have a personal conversation with him. I should have liked very much to do this, and have tried to see as many as possible in the time I have had. Since there will be many that I cannot see, I desire to make this public statement:

I consider a public official a servant of the people. Not merely for the purpose of using this as a high-sounding campaign expression, but in real earnest. When I say a servant, I mean one who has an office and regular office hours, during which time he can always be found by the people, as a good servant should be.

If I am elected I shall be at my office during regular, stated office hours five days in each week. On the other day I shall be on the roads or attending to my duties as superintendent of public schools. Such office hours and the day when I shall be absent from my office shall be published in the county newspapers, to the end that every citizen shall know them.

In other words, if I am elected I shall consider myself the hired man of the people, just as much as the farm hand who works for you, and I can see no reason why I should not give you the same kind of service that you exact from him.

SID A. REES.

Mrs. Sarah Jennett Leonard.

Mrs. Jennett Leonard, wife of Z. Leonard, died at her home in Kerrville, Texas, Monday Oct. 30, at 11 o'clock a. m. Mrs. Leonard had been in bad health for some time but had been up and around until about ten days before her death, when she became seriously ill and sank rapidly until the final hour came.

Deceased was 61 years of age and she and Mr. Leonard have been residents of this city for about seven years. She was a faithful member of the Presbyterian church and indeed a good woman.

The body was taken to Fentress, Caldwell county, for burial, the devoted husband and Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Davis, daughter and son-in-law accompanied the body to its last resting place. The many friends of the family here will join us in their deepest sympathy to the bereaved.

On the first of the Sundays observed will preach at Kerrville. Service will take place at 10:30 a. m. Nov. 19.

Barbarians Organize.

The Barbarian Society has been reorganized for the coming year with the following officers to serve for a term of three months: Milton Gold, President; Elizabeth Pheuffer, Vice President; Frith Everett, Secretary-Treasurer and Press Reporter, and Alois Renschel, Sergeant of arms.

The Barbarian Society will render their first program Nov. 10 which will be practically a literary program. Arrangements have been made for the Indians to have the Auditorium on Nov. 10, so the Barbarians will render their program in another room. We will give our first public program on the night of Dec. 22.

We are confident that we can win the cup again if we put our very best into our work and programs.

"Hurrah for the best of societies the Barbarians."

PRESS REPORTER.

"We can win is now $1.50 a year."

TO THE VOTERS:

For your favors and partiality in the past I acknowledge my gratitude.

If I have worked wisely and well in office heretofore, then I lay some claim to your consideration in the coming election.

The ballot is the weapon of freedom and much depends upon its exercise. If wisely cast, good government is the reward. If indifferently used or corruptly employed then lawlessness and oppression will be the penalty. The country's good should be the aim of every voter, and faithful, efficient service should be the aim and aspiration of every public officer. He should stand for morality, the home, a pure ballot free from trickery, honest elections, good government and the happiness and prosperity of the people.

Is he honest? Is he capable? These are appropriate questions for the voter to ask when he comes to cast his ballot. Upon his record and not his "pull" a candidate should be weighed and tested.

I do not come to the voters with vague recitals of things I tried to do, things I would have done or things I anticipate doing, but bring to you a record of things accomplished, and that record is my official redemption for the past and my promise for the future.

It would be impossible without becoming tedious to detail the work accomplished by the County Judge's office during my incumbency but it has been enormous. Some of the work done and for which I stood consisted in the building of nine permanent bridges, issuing bonds and building permanent roads in two commissioners precincts, the erection of five school houses, besides adding to, repairing and painting others, voting originally or increasing maintenance funds in five school districts. A three thousand dollar bond issue has been approved recently by the attorney general and a concrete school house at Ingram will soon be under construction.

These are but a few of the important things for which I have worked and believing that I can aid materially in working with the people and for the people in solving the problems that concern the best interests of Kerr County, I earnestly ask your support in the coming election.

Sincerely yours,
LEE WALLACE.

Presbyterian Party.

About 75 guests attended the Halloween Party at the Presbyterian Manse, Tuesday evening. Dressed as ghost and witches, we were tagged with a number as we entered the door, and later much fun was had guessing the names belonging to the numbers.

Enjoyable games were played during the entire evening.

A program appropriate to the occasion was furnished by Miss Hattie Garrett and Mrs. Bee Malory. The rooms were decorated with pumpkins colored paper through which the lights sent their softened glow, and black cats, bats and owls seemed to be everywhere. Great bowls of chrysanthemums lent their beauty to the occasion. All the Sunday School, League and Church members were invited. Just a little gathering-together party.

Pop Corn was eaten all the evening and refreshments of sandwiches, cake and chocolate were served.

The merrymaking continued until a late hour.

Tivy 5 Junction 19

Tivy football team went to Junction Saturday and on Sunday morning arose a sadder but a wiser team. Now comes the sad part of the story — we were defeated by a score of 19 to 5. We could explain to your entire satisfaction, good reader, just how this awful thing happened, but let this suffice. We played against an altogether different team (that is they played altogether differently) and they played against a decidedly different team. (Our boys didn't wake up until the last half. But by that time they were defeated.) Nevertheless we take our hats off to the Junction team who rose from defeat and won. But our boys say, "They can't do it again." We feel very kindly toward the school, the town and especially toward Mr. Britt and Mr. Morris.

Tivy goes to Llano Saturday Nov. 4 for a game. We expect to bring back their scalp, too. Let every booster boost and we'll win.

ARE FAULT OF COMMUNITY

Many Diseases Which Afflict Humanity Might Easily Be Wiped From Earth's Evils.

Some eminent physicians and surgeons have been telling the public a number of unpleasant truths lately about diseases which ought to be as extinct as the dodo, yet which kill thousands and tens of thousands of people every year. As a paper which has done and is doing its utmost to bring home the same truths to its readers, the Journal hopes the eminent doctors will continue their campaign of publicity.

Diphtheria ought to be as rare as smallpox in every civilized community. Antitoxia is not only an almost perfect cure when given in time, but is likewise a safe preventive, yet diphtheria ranks fourth among causes of deaths of children under ten years of age. Pauper's fever, or child-bed fever, is almost unknown in any well-managed maternity hospital, and ought to be a stranger everywhere, yet it kills almost as many women of child-bearing age as does cancer. Typhoid is a filthy disease, to be banished by effective sanitation; tuberculosis is a disease of bad housing and poor nutrition, but up to date our knowledge of these facts has availed only to check these ailments, not to abolish them.

Medical research is invaluable, but general use of medical facts already known would work a revolution in the health conditions of the world.—Chicago Journal.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE
by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

WOODLAND BALL.

"I haven't had a Ball for ever and ever so long," said the Fairy Queen.

"That is so," said Fairy Twilight Bell; "why can't we have one this afternoon?"

"Yes, why can't we?" said Fairy Ybab, who gives the Music for the Fairyland Balls.

"We shall have one," said the Fairy Queen. She waved her Wand of Gold and from all over the Fairies came.

"We're to have a Ball this very afternoon," she said.

"Hurrah!" they all shouted.

"Quickly fly away," she said, "and get your Costumes, and be back at three o'clock."

"We will," they called out merrily as they flew off.

And just at three all the Fairies came back. But such costumes as they wore! Some of them were dressed as Flowers, and some as Ferns, and others as Butterflies. They all looked so lovely and they wore Wings and Wands of the colors of their Costumes.

"Where is the Fairy Queen?" they all asked.

"Oh, she will give us a Surprise, probably," said Fairy Ybab.

No sooner had she said that, than from underneath a very tall Toadstool stepped the Fairy Queen. And she wore a costume of a red toadstool.

"We're to have Toadstools all around to rest upon when we get tired of dancing," she said.

And in a moment Toadstools of all colors and sizes and kinds sprang out of the Earth!

"Wonderful!" shouted the Fairies, and some of them leaped about from one Toadstool to the other, and so lightly they went that the Toadstools didn't mind in the least. For Toadstools are delicate Plants and will tumble to the ground very quickly.

But soon again the Fairy Queen had disappeared.

"Where has she gone this time?" asked the fairies.

"Let's guess," said the Fairy Princess Twilight Bell.

Some of the Fairies guessed that the Fairy Queen would come as a beautiful Flower, and others guessed that she would come in a Costume which lighted up like a Firefly. They kept on guessing for some time, and just as they were about to give up she came back, drawn in a Chariot. One hundred Robins were drawing the Chariot, and as they were going along the ground, hopping and bobbing their heads, they kept singing and trilling the most beautiful songs.

"Ah, lovely!" said the Fairies.

"The Robins have come," said the Fairy Queen, "to help Ybab with the Music."

Ybab smiled, and in her soft, musical voice, she said: "Then the Music will be perfect!" And the Robins stuck out their little red chests and looked very happy and proud.

"The Fairy Queen is missing again," said the Fairy Princess Joy.

"What? Not again?" said the Fairies, laughing.

And back again came the Fairy Queen, and this time she was being carried in a Cloud Blanket by six Crows.

"Whatever are they doing?" said Ybab. "Surely 'Caw-Caw' Music."

But she didn't wait to hear the answer.

Long Coats for Daily Wear.

Nothing that we buy ready made offers us quite so wide a range of choice in styles as the practical long coats for daily wear. But this variety is more a matter of details in finishing than variation in outline. Long, straight coats of ample width, high collars, big cuffs and rather narrow belts may be looked for and found in the output of nearly every manufacturer, so that the style is established. Also coats are long enough to cover the dress or to come within a few inches of it.

The two coats shown in the picture illustrate the similarity in outline and the variation in materials and in the details of finishing that make so much latitude in choice. The coat at the left is made of plush, and there are others much like it made of Bolivia cloth, heavy wool velours, and other cloths.

ings. It has the regulation turnover collar, high about the neck, but this collar is extended into a smart cape. The cuffs are of the usual pattern. A few big buttons add much to the smartness of the model and are placed on the collar and cuffs purely for ornament. They fasten the front of the coat from throat to waist. A belt of the same material as the coat fastens at the side under a handsome silk buckle.

The coat at the right is a little less full but otherwise much the same as the other one. It is gray, flecked with white and black, and is finished with collar and cuffs of black seal plush. Large buttons in gray barred with black fasten it at the front and are set in groups of three at each side. Either of these attractive coats will bear the burden of daily wear and not grow tiresome.

"With each step she took toward me, ranting, screaming and brandishing the paper cutlass, I backed the chair toward the door, dragging my belongings with me. Finally she stood before me pale, breathless, terrible, knife in the air, ready to strike. When she made the final lunge, I just had strength enough left to fall out of the chair and half ran and rolled into the vestibule. In the scramble I had left my overcoat. When I got on my feet the madame had disappeared. I made a dash for it, just as she protruded her head through the pale blue portieres, presumably to view the corpse. hers were almost those of a maniac, and the nurse signed the distracted father to help her. Gloria was shrieking now as she found renewed strength:

"There, there, look! Look down by the steps of the monument! Dick is lying there. I tell you they've killed him. Oh, my God, why don't you go to him instead of holding me here?"

With one supreme effort she wrenched herself free from the two, only to be mercifully seized with another fainting spell. swooning forward, her face would have been dashed against the forehead of her bed had not Richards recaptured her in her arms. At last Doctor Royce appeared in the doorway. His foot struck the binoculars, which still lay on the floor where they had fallen from Gloria's hand. He started back from them, looked towards the prostrate Gloria, and, stooping swiftly, thrust the glasses into his pocket with an oath. Then he came forward to Gloria, taking her from her father's arms.

Gloria opened her eyes again and stared into the doctor's own with another outcry:

"You will believe me and go to him, won't you?"

Reason seemed to return to her now, and her eyes were overflowing with tears. Her father had to turn his own away, for Gloria's made him think of a child torn from its mother and beaten and pleading. When Doctor Royce spoke his voice was hoarse with emotion:

"Gloria, you know that I would give my life to spare you any pain or to do you any service, but remember that you are still very ill, that any further excitement might be fatal to you. You have a high fever and are not yourself. You are a very sick child. Tell me what is troubling you and what frightened you and I will do anything I can to help you."

Gloria seemed to be holding herself under extreme control as if to convince them of her sanity.

"Oh, Stephen, you must believe, I tell you I saw it all—from the window here. But there is no time to lose. You must go to him. Dick Freneau is dead! Murdered! His body is down there at the base of the monument."

"Miss Richards was sleeping. I couldn't look through my glasses on the drive. I turned them towards the monument. I saw a man in evening dress loitering about. I couldn't see his face. He seemed to be waiting for someone. A policeman went by. The man stepped behind the monument till the officer had gone. Then he came out again. He took a revolver from his pocket. Then he walked away as a tramp came along."

"I saw the tramp—a slouching creature with a hideous face—a face I shall never forget. I saw it plainly under the light of the lamps as he dropped on a bench. But I thought nothing of him and turned my glasses down the drive."

"I saw a man step to light a cigar. It was Dick. I was surprised. I thought he would have been on the train. He seemed to look up at my windows. Then he walked on. I turned my glasses back to the tramp. I saw a terrific look come over his face, under the lamp-post—as he saw Dick approaching I wanted to scream a warning, but he was too far away. I saw the tramp skulk behind a tree."

"As Dick passed him the tramp leaped on him from behind. There was a struggle in the shadows. I tried to scream—not a sound came from my throat. I could only hold the glasses to my eyes and watch. The tramp was like a mad gorilla. Dick got a chance with him. The fiend looked him to death or stabbed him."

"I know which. But I know his body. I know it's something she could understand at last—this was delirium. Then the rest must have been delirium, too?"

The sound of the doctor's step on the landing brought her grateful relief. He came in with a smile on his face. Going at once to the bed, he took her hand to feel her pulse.

"We call it delirium. Did you know it?"

from the pocket a long envelope with seals on the back.

"It was the very envelope that I saw in Dick's pocket tonight as he said good-by to me. I recognized it perfectly, for I laughingly asked him what important business it contained and he grabbed it from my hand so quickly that it startled me. I know it was the same—this man held up the envelope to the light to make sure of it, then put it in his pocket. Then I found my voice and screamed and screamed. And then I don't know what happened."

"But, oh, Stephen, go over there now at once. Bring him back here dead or alive and tell me the truth! I promise to be brave, but tell me the truth—tell me the truth!"

Her sobs choked her now so that she fell back exhausted on the pillows.

Doctor Royce did not go to her. He was at the window, staring through the binoculars. He seemed to be greatly astounded, then he said: "I can see the place perfectly; there is nothing there."

Gloria screamed: "But I saw him killed; I tell you! He must be there!"

Doctor Royce handed the binoculars to Mr. Stafford.

"Mr. Stafford, do you see anything?"

Pierpont stared through the glasses and shook his head:

"Nothing."

He passed the glasses to Miss Richards. She also shook her head, then exclaimed: "A policeman is coming up the drive—he is passing right across the spot—he didn't stop!"

Gloria saw this herself and wondered if she were truly mad. Doctor Royce turned to Gloria, stroked her hand, and spoke to her gently.

"There, there, Gloria, child, don't torture yourself so. You have simply been delirious and imagined these things. But to satisfy you I will go over there at once—if you will promise to lie quietly here on your bed. And try to believe that it is all a hideous nightmare—until I come back to assure you that it is—will you?"

Gloria nodded her head to him, unable to speak, but it seemed to Richards that the doctor's assurance had no effect upon her and that she held herself in leash only until she could get him out of the room.

Then she turned to Miss Richards, sobbing: "Hold me, Miss Richards, hold me up quickly to the window—first give me the glasses. I must look again."

Together they strained their eyes towards the monument. She felt every nerve and muscle of Gloria's body taut strung beneath her hands. And she likened it to a bow. Gloria's soul was the arrow and it was ready at any moment to speed on its swift and terrible journey.

She felt the agony as if it had been her own. The not knowing was the most terrible part of it, for Richards seemed to feel more bewildered than the girl herself. Her instinct and the girl's conviction seemed to point to the truth of Gloria's vision; yet her common sense told her that such a thing was almost impossible, and that Gloria's fever would fully account for it all.

They watched the monument. The doctor appeared there shortly and walked about the empty spot, signaling to the window what he had said before.

"There is nothing here—nothing." And then Gloria began to mutter: "Lay him down there."

She raised her arm and pointed toward the chaise longue. Then her arm dropped. Richards put her hand on Gloria's head, only to have it thrown off by the girl as she shrielled in a weak voice: "Loosen his collar—he's choking. Dick—Dick—it's all right now, dear; they shan't touch you again!"

Richards felt a thrill of joy mingled with pity go through her. This was something she could understand at last—this was delirium. Then the rest must have been delirium, too?

The sound of the doctor's step on the landing brought her grateful relief. He came in with a smile on his face. Going at once to the bed, he took her hand to feel her pulse.

"We call it delirium. Did you know it?"

She Showed the Telegram to Doctor Royce.

doctor drewled the words with strange listlessness, and, sinking into a chair, covered his eyes wearily with his hand, though Gloria babbled faintly:

"Has the mail come yet? Why don't you give me Dick's letter?"

On the following morning Gloria awoke from her drugged sleep with a feeling of hovering calamity. Present realization came. Her lover had been murdered. She hid her face in the pillows and moaned: "It can't be true; it can't be true."

The day nurse tried to soothe her, bathing her face and hands, arranging her hair. Then the butler arrived with a telegram for Gloria, who took it from him with trembling hands.

A glad cry escaped the girl's lips as she read it.

"Arrived safely. Miss you terribly. Hope you slept well and dreamed of me. Am writing. Devoted love. DICK."

Gloria passed her hand across her brow in a daze. She read the telegram again and called to Miss Armstrong and Doctor Royce, who had just entered.

She showed them the telegram, trying to hold her fingers over the words to let them see only "Arrived safely" and "Am writing."

Doctor Royce started, but recovering himself, expressed great delight. "I told you it was a delirium." Yet the nurse, glancing from the telegram to the doctor, noted a puzzled look on his face that belied his words.

At last the doctor was able to place the thermometer in Gloria's mouth. She tried to speak, but he ordered her to keep silence, and stood in a brown study. Gloria indicated by crude and impatient pantomime that she wanted paper and pencil. She proceeded to compose a telegram, shifting her position that the doctor might not see what she wrote.

Doctor Royce took the thermometer from her lips, and she went on writing, without noticing him. He nodded his head, apparently satisfied, and the nurse entered the temperature on the chart. Then bidding Gloria good-by, the doctor left the room, still musing.

Gloria continued her task, apparently a difficult one, and chewed the end of her pencil to bits. At last the result, much underscored and scratched out, read:

"Your angelic telegram received. It was terribly welcome. I did not sleep, but I dreamed a horrible dream. I was so glad to hear of your recovery to know you were well. Much love. GLORIA."

As soon as her father understood the news he put his arms about her. But she gently thrust him from her and stood gazing great-eyed at the paper. She was seeing again that night beneath the stars.

Mrs. Hattie Buckner, Associate Editor

SUBSCRIPTION $1.50 A YEAR IN ADVANCE

Entered as second class matter at the postoffice at Kerrville, Texas.

The Constitutional Amendment

Superintendent of Public Instruction, W. F. Doughty, says: "The proposed amendment to be voted upon at the coming election is one of the most important educational measures to come before the people of Texas in many years.

Every voter in the state should support the measure because it does not carry with it obligation on the part of the people to tax themselves.

It gives authority to certain districts to vote more funds for their schools if they are in need of extra funds. If a district in not in need of more funds they will not be obliged to tax themselves; but if later they needed more funds, they would have authority to vote on the subject." Mr. Doughty further says:

"Texas children are just as deserving as the children of other states, yet in the matter of per capita expenditure for education, Texas ranks thirty-third among the states of the Union. It is my heart's conviction that the people of Texas, if they understand this amendment properly, will be heartily in favor of it."

Some Campaign Squibs.

The candidates are getting down to business and you can see them going here and there, some look excited, some appear enthusiastic and some appear only to be considering the majority they expect to get. Some are even so content that it is said they have gone to threshing pecans.

The writer has been asked a hundred or two times what he expects to do about sticking to the Democratic ticket when things are in such a muddle locally. We say again, go and do as you think best. It is about all we can do to settle the matter for ourself.

It has always been our policy to vote for men as far as possible who are not in any way under obligation to the saloon or liquor interests. It is a well established fact that men elected by such interests are hampered and intimidated in many ways that hinders a just and honorable discharge of official duties.

If the saloons would hands off and let the people elect their officers the contempt and indignation of the public conscience against them would be somewhat mitigated, but not so. There never has been an election in Texas in our knowledge, whether U. S. Senator, Congressman, Governor, Legislator, County Judge, Attorney, Sheriff, or Constable that the saloons haven't butted in, as if they were afraid for good and fairminded men to be elected.

Wilson's stock is still going up in Kerrville. The Hughes admirers have a lonesome look on their faces and are dwindling until after next Tuesday it will be hard to find a man who will have the courage to admit that he voted for the Ex-Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Chas. Butt Entertains

Mrs. Chas. Butt royally entertained at her home in Kerrville on Saturday Oct. 28. Friends were invited to come spend the day and sew for a bride-to-be. As the guests arrived in the morning, some played croquet while others sat in the shade of the trees and their laughter and chatter could be heard everywhere.

Soon the guests were called into the dining room where a most delicious lunch was served. The decorations were of white geraniums and ferns. At each girl's place was her name written in gold letters on a little white booklet, and after found each one puzzling their brain in trying to put together mixed up letters, which spelled different garments found in a Bride's Trousseau. The afternoon was gaily spent in hemming cup towels, followed by games and music which also added to the gaily and fun of the afternoon. A very pleasant day was enjoyed by all.

DAIRY

RAISING CALVES FOR PROFIT

Wisconsin Specialist Gives Interesting Hints About Building Up Money-Producing Dairy.

G. C. Humphrey, a Wisconsin dairy specialist, gives the following facts about building up a profit-producing dairy from home-raised calves:

Use only a good, purebred sire, take good care of the cows, and keep the calves "coming" right from birth.

Try the mother off six weeks before date of calving, otherwise the calf may be weak or undersized.

Give the mother a clean, comfortable box stall a few days before calving, where she may be quiet.

Leave the calf with its mother the first two to four days, so it may get the colostrum, or "first milk."

From then until four weeks old, feed from two to five pounds of its mother's milk three times a day. After two weeks give a little choice hay.

If the calf seems unthrifty or weak, feed four times a day and give slightly less at a time.

Overfeeding is more dangerous than underfeeding. Keep the pails clean and give milk warm, as nearly as possible the temperature of freshly drawn milk.

Beginning the fifth week, gradually substitute skim milk for the whole milk. About the eighth week increase the amount from six to ten pounds twice daily.

Do not feed the froth which rises in separator skim milk, as it is likely to cause indigestion, bloat and scours.

COWS FRESHENED IN AUTUMN

Calves Are Usually Strong and Vigorous—Nothing to Check Growth—Butter Fat Higher.

One thing of great importance to the dairyman is the time to have the cows come fresh. Cows that freshen during the fall months come in at a time when we are not quite so busy and can look after them and give them proper care and attention.

The calves are usually strong and vigorous, and as fly time is practically over there is nothing to materially check their growth.

Fall-freshened cows no doubt require more attention than those coming fresh during the spring months, but as we usually have the spare time at this particular period of the year, the time in caring for them, feeding, etc., is profitably spent.

Butterfat is usually higher during the fall and winter, and of course this makes the business profitable if we have plenty of good feed and of the right sort for producing butterfat.

There are many other good points in favor of having the cows come fresh during the fall months.

IMPORTANT TO MILK CLEANLY

If Not Done Cow Will Soon Have Swollen Udder Which May Result in Her Ruination.

It is important that cows be milked clean. There is a loss in two cents in not milking them clean. Nevertheless the owner loses the milk which will soon have to be thrown away.

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES APPLIED TO DAIRY

MAN FEELS INDEPENDENT WHEN HE HAS GOOD HERD.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are so many links in the dairy business that only by the use of the best business principles can it be made permanently profitable.

Individual cows must each make a profit over the cost of feed; this can be determined only by weighing each cow's milk and the feed that she consumes. The old argument that the best cows are known may have some foundation, but few men know the poorest cows, and the latter go to make up the average as well as the good cows. No dairy is better than its average production.

If this is too low, the herd is not paying a profit. Business principles must therefore be applied to lowering the cost of milk production. Efficiency is as much a necessity on the farm as in the factory.

Few men feed their cows in proportion to the quantity of milk produced, yet what could be more simple and more nearly right? With little regard for her needs, feed is put before the cow in plenty if it is cheap, and in less quantity if the price is high.

Cows use about 60 per cent of their feed merely to keep their bodies working, and it is the quantity that is fed above this fixed necessity that furnishes the material for the milk.

Too often the dairyman says "I would do all the up-to-date things if I had the time." Can the storekeeper afford to run his business without keeping books? Yet that is what the farmer is doing.

Benefits of Cow Testing. Working in co-operation, dairymen can obtain the benefits of business methods at a very small cost through the organization of a cow-testing association. An organization of this kind that hires an expert to determine the feed cost of milk or fat production for each cow in the herds of the members is easily possible.

Such an expert travels from farm to farm, spending usually one day at a place. Each cow's milk is weighed and tested, as is her feed. An account is opened in the ledger for each animal and at the end of the year the profit or loss of each one can be ascertained.

The heifers of good cows should be selected and the poor cows should go to the slaughterhouse, otherwise they may be the means of ruining the owner's business. A cow-testing association is a co-operative organization with local offices, and one that can be of use also for advertising the sale of cattle.

The results obtained with such advertising have often been remarkable. Dairymen and breeders are certain to be interested in such a movement for the bettering of the business.

At present about 350 of the organizations keep the records for about 150,000 cows owned by about 7,500 farmers. These men are realizing the benefits of co-operation.

The dairy business is well adapted for co-operative organization, and concerted effort by dairymen usually means much greater profits on milk and cream through the elimination of waste, the application of more economical methods of production and manufacture, and the development of more productive cows.

UTILIZE CORNFIELD TO PREPARE LAMBS

Light Corn Crop Makes It Necessary to Get Most Possible Out of the Field.

(By H. HACKEDORN, Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station.)

The light corn crop this fall makes it necessary to get the most possible out of the field. The practice of utilizing the undergrowth in the cornfield and the lower leaves of the cornstalks by pasturing the field with lambs has become quite a common one.

Fifty-three to 60-pound western feeding lambs are used. The lighter lambs are used by those who wish to make a lamb in dry lot the last 30 or 40 days. The heavier lambs are used by feeders wanting to make a 60 or 70-day feed. Good to choice lambs are commonly fed.

The number of lambs per acre will depend upon the amount and condition of the forage. Usually 3 to 4 lambs per acre will be sufficient.

A single-deck carload of lambs may be about 150 or 160, and she was being purchased at the Loud Blauket by St. Louis, St. J. yards the "never are the house."

HORSES, PIGS and CATTLE

GET BEEF FROM DAIRY STOCK

Discrimination in Color in Purchasing Meat Animals—Case of Red- and-White Holstein.

Of course all cattle can be divided into two great classes—those of the dairy type and those of the beef type.

In some cases members of the beef type have large milking capacities. These we call general or dual-purpose animals.

But all cattle may be used for beef. In fact, it is said that some of the strictly dairy types furnish a splendid quality of meat. The reason why dairy cattle are discriminated against for beef purposes is that the percentage of offal as compared to that of meat is so great that they are unprofitable as beef animals.

In the West recently a lot of steers were sold, some of them Shorthorns and others Holsteins. The Shorthorn steers sold for a little higher price than the Holsteins, with the exception of one.

Now and then a purebred Holstein is born that is red and white, and in this lot there was one such steer. This animal sold for as much as the Shorthorns. This indicates that there is a discrimination in color in purchasing beef animals. If all the Holsteins had been red and white, they would have sold undoubtedly for as much in the market as the Shorthorns.

GIVE SHEEP SOME ATTENTION

Lambs Must Be Well Cared for in Order to Make Best Growth Before Marketing in Fall.

Many sheep owners have a tendency to let the sheep take care of themselves after shearing time has passed, and there are so many other duties demanding attention.

Where there are young lambs they should be well cared for in order to make the best growth possible before marketing in the fall. They are hard to get in shape to sell when they have been forced to look out for themselves.

His Weather Eye.

Two ladies were hurrying down the street in Worcester in the rain, carrying their umbrellas low for protection. In turning a corner sharply the point of one umbrella struck a passerby in the forehead.

"Goodness!" gasped the woman. "I'll keep an eye out in the future."

"Goodness!" exclaimed the man, "you near had one out in the present!"

Don't Neglect Kidneys

Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Prescription, Overcomes Kidney Trouble

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

The kidneys should receive some assistance when needed. We take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich, heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than nature intended for them.

Difficult Yarn.

"Did you finish that sweater you were knitting?"

"And didn't he bring you the yarn?"

HERE'S AN Individuality About HOSTETTER'S Stomach Bitters that makes it especially appealing to those who need a safe tonic, or who suffer from any stomach, liver or bowel trouble

Try it, but insist on Hostetter's Last of Fine Exposition. An event which was not without its regrettable aspects was the recent wreckage of the beautiful buildings and monuments of the exposition at San Francisco, which were erected only about two years ago.

WAR HAS CREATED BIG NEW INDUSTRY

United States Makes Remarkable Strides in Manufacture of Chemicals.

FREED FROM FOREIGN YOKE

Production of Nearly Enough Coal Tar Dyes to Meet Domestic Demand Big Feature of Development.

"No branch of American industry has ever presented such a marvelous rate of expansion as has that of chemical technology during the past two years," says Dr. Thomas H. Norton, one of Uncle Sam's special commercial agents, who has been devoting a large part of his time to the study of this new development of American industry.

"The national exposition of chemical industries, held recently in New York," says Doctor Norton, "showed the wonderful strides that had been made in this field during the past two years."

"The degree to which this nation was dependent upon foreign sources for the greater part of its chemicals, drugs and dyes was revealed to us in a brusque, uncomfortable manner as the rapid succession of embargoes consequent upon the great European conflict suddenly threatened a multitude of manufacturing activities, dependent upon regular supplies of certain chemicals, with dislocation or paralysis," says Doctor Norton.

Wonderful Progress Shown. "The exposition recently held was a barometer, as it were, showing in a vivid, picturesque way the wonderful progress and adaptation characteristic of these past few months, how American enterprise, skill, science and capital have united to lay broad and deep the foundations of a comprehensive and self-contained national chemical industry. While the genius and energy of European chemists have been concentrated upon means and methods of destroying life and annihilating armed power, American chemists have been equally active in synthetic, constructive fields, swiftly evolving, one after another, various branches of industrial effort destined to emancipate us from a foreign commercial yoke."

"Among the many interesting features illustrative of this evolution were such exhibits as the following: The barium industry, now utilizing to the fullest extent the boundless deposits of barytes; the sulphuric acid process, now used in volume and perfection; chemical glassware and equal to the finest products of the world; bleaching powder of the grade, of which, two years ago, the country's production was only a few hundred tons; domestic origin; the tonitruum compounds, such as cyanide and the chlorate, now produced satisfactorily replacing the foreign potassium salts, in such quantities; and chemical products derived from the waste of the straw industry."

ORCHARD GLEANINGS

CARE FOR YOUNG PEAR TREES

Insect Prefers Trees Weakened by Collar Blight or Mechanically Injured by Frost.

Observations made by an entomologist of the department of agriculture of the American plum borer, show that this insect prefers trees that are in a somewhat weakened condition, such as those partially girdled by the disease commonly known as collar blight or mechanically injured by the frost. Without injury of some sort to its host plant the borer rarely succeeds in establishing itself, and entirely healthy trees are in little danger from its attack.

The insect is known to occur in 21 different states as far separated as the District of Columbia, Arizona and Washington. As a result of the observations made by the entomologist, the conclusion is drawn that this borer will probably never become a pest of more than ordinary importance except in occasional isolated cases.

Hallow'een Party.

The B. Y. P. U. entertained on last Tuesday evening with a Hallow'een party in the basement of the church.

The house was decorated with Hallow'een Motifs, Jack-o-lanterns, Wiches, black cats and ghosts being used in great numbers. "Fortune telling" bobbing for apples and other novel Hallow'een games were enjoyed until a late hour. After which they all gathered around the camp fire and enjoyed toasting Marsh Mallows, drinking Soda-water and eating apples.

A flash-light picture was also taken of the Spooks around the camp fire. A most enjoyable evening was spent by all who were present.
