* Because you have headache is not a reason you should take pills. Eye-strain is responsible for more headaches than any other thing.

* Properly fitted glasses will relieve eye-strain. When the cause is removed the effect can no longer exist. Glasses fitted by a graduate optician is what you need. I can give you that service.

DR. J. B. LOVE, Scientific Optician.

GEORGE BOWLES

Says It Is Good to Forget, and Mentions the Thrill of a Little Fish Wiggling on the Line.

It is mighty good to get out in the woods occasionally. A few days ago I spent a couple of hours sitting on the bank of the river. I caught a few little fish, the largest one didn't weigh ten pounds, by guess! But it was the same old feel, that electric thrill that goes through your nerves when you feel a fish wiggling on the line and can't tell how big he is.

It is great to live in this country. Just think of sitting in the shade catching fish when it is almost November. It was a pretty place. The river came sweeping around the curve as if 'twas in a mighty hurry. A great cypress stood looking on like some stoic of barbaric days, while the ripples sang love songs to the golden rod on the banks, and the flowers dropped handfuls of gold in the river, to be carried as tribute to the mermaids of the sea. A yellow leaf fell in the streamlet, and started away to the sea, then looking back said to a red one, why, sister, I can leave thee. So he circled around in an eddy and silently sailed to the shore, saying, sister, we'll stay here together, be parted again never more. I didn't hear any more of the leaf song, because I got a little sun perch, and he seemed so anxious about it I put him back into the water. I saw lots of mussel shells, like our beautiful fresh water pearls came out of, but I didn't get any pearls. You have to dig for pearls, and I didn't want to dig. I just wanted to sit on the big rock and watch the squirrel across the stream. That trip made me lazy. I want to fish some more. I don't want to tell you anything, only to tell you that I don't want to tell you. I'm fishin'.

Just sitting on the bank of a crystal stream.

Or stretched on the verdant sod watching the water's silver gleam reading the book of nature's God.

Rev. Drummond—Appointed.

Rev. James Drummond has received the appointment as lecturer on Ancient and Modern History in the San Antonio Academy.—San Antonio Light.

Rev. Drummond was formerly pastor of the Presbyterian church at this place and has many friends here.

Saturday, November 7, Trade's Day at Kerrville.

FROM INGRAM.

The farmers are very busy now, gathering their crops.

Mrs. Chas Gerlach of San Antonio is visiting her cousin, Miss Jessie Denton.

Miss Mamie McNealy has been visiting her friend Miss Leinweber the past week.

Mr. Archie Moore attended our ice cream supper last Saturday night at the school house.

Misses Ola Dowdy, Mary Crenshaw and Lena Denton got the prize for having the nicest table at the ice cream supper Saturday night.

Mr. George Colvin returned from a business trip to Center Point Saturday.

There will be a grand ball given at the Geo. Dowdy hall next Saturday night Oct. 24.

Mr. Allen Lee is with home folks now.

Mr. Clyde Coleman was also seen at our ice cream supper Saturday night.

The Ingram High School started Monday the 19 and is progressing nicely.

Miss Clara Colbath will stay at Mrs. Geo. Dowdy while school is going on.

Messrs. Henry Noll, Star Bacon and Earnest Coleman was seen on our creek last Sunday.

Mrs. Chas Gerlach, while here, will also stay at My Ranch a while.

Hon. J. F. Onion, Democratic Nominee for State Senator, and Hon. Chester Terrell of San Antonio, and Representative J. E. Grinstead of Kerrville, were the speakers at a Democratic rally we had at Ingram Tuesday night. The Mountain Sun Band came out from Kerrville to furnish music for the occasion. The speeches, all of which had the ring of good old time Southern Democratic metal, were well received and generously applauded. The seating capacity of the school house, where the meeting was held, was taxed to its utmost to seat the ladies that were present, the men standing as long as there was standing room in the house, and many at the doors and windows on the out side. This was perhaps, the largest political gathering in the history of the town.

RED BONNET.

A Veteran Drummer.

Col. Max Picard, a veteran Knight of the Grip, was in Kerrville on business Tuesday. Col. Picard sold beads to the Indians in this mountain section when they used shells and snake rattles for money. He is one of the best known men in the "old guard" of traveling men who have helped to develop Southwest Texas.

BUSINESS COMMANDMENT.

Thou shalt not wait for something to start, but thou shalt pull off thy coat, roll up thy sleeves, go to work and "start something." So the word "failure" in thy business lexicon shall spell "success," and shall make the fellow with the little hammer look like 30 cents Mex; yea, even like a parakeet with his tail feathers pulled out.

BRYAN CAMPAIGN FUND.

The Kerrville Mountain Sun has been called upon to secure a Democratic presidential campaign fund from Kerr county, of at least $50. We invite all Democrats to contribute to this fund in any amount they see fit. The list will be kept standing until the amount has been raised, when it will be forwarded to the National campaign committee:

How to Cast Your Vote.

1st. You must have your poll tax receipt.

In making out your ticket these things must be remembered.

1. All tickets will be on one sheet which is called the official ballot.

No name that is printed on the ticket can be written in any other column, but must be voted in the column where it is printed.

Public Speaking.

There will be public speaking at the court house in Kerrville, Friday night Oct. 23, by Hon. W. C. Linden of San Antonio and Judge Julius Real, candidate for State Senator. Music will be furnished by the Mountain Sun Band. The general public, especially the ladies are invited.

Killed by Lightning.

John F. Ferris was killed by lightning at the farm of his mother-in-law, Mrs. J. L. Goss, six miles Southeast of Kerrville, Thursday, Oct. 22. Mr. Ferris was driving a grain sadder, and the stroke killed him instantly, and also killed all of the four mules he was driving. R. C. Mason was in the field at the time and went to Mr. Ferris immediately, but he was past earthly aid when he reached him.

The funeral took place yesterday under the auspices of the local camp Modern Woodmen of America. Services were conducted by Rev. Fred S. Carter.

Our Purpose

It is our purpose to handle any business entrusted to us in such a fair and liberal manner as to make the customer's relation with this bank satisfactory and profitable. Aside from the excellent facilities afforded, this bank has the advantage of an individual responsibility of more than $2,000,000.

Trade's Day!

Saturday, November Seventh

Set Aside By Kerrville

Merchants As

REDUCTION DAY.

Merchants Will Sell All Goods at Greatly

Reduced Prices on That Date.

At an informal meeting of the Kerrville business men, held at Pannells Opera House Tuesday night, the business men of this city decided to adopt the first Saturday in each month as special Trade's day. An executive committee was appointed to meet the following morning. The committee to be composed of J. T. Ligon, A. C. Schreiner, G. H. Coleman, Oscar Rosenthal, J. E. Grinstead, McCulloch Burnett and Dr. A. F. Thigpen. Accordingly the committee met Wednesday, and effected permanent organization by the election of the following officers: J. E. Grinstead, President, G. H. Coleman, Vice President, Dr. A. F. Thigpen, Sec., J. T. Ligon, Treasurer.

Pursuant to the plan designated by the meeting the night before, the first Saturday in each month was adopted as regular "Trade's Day" for Kerrville.

The committee then proceeded to the matter of advertising, and decided to thoroughly cover all the territory comprised in Kerr Bandera, Edwards, Kimble and Gillespie counties.

The committee also voted a prize of $10. for the best bale of cotton on the market on that day, and $5 for the second prize.

The Trade's day is not a new thing. The custom prevailed several centuries ago in the old countries. It originated in the days when the amount of real money in circulation was small, and the people met at the Parish town at certain stated periods and exchanged wares. In addition to many of the features of Trade's Day, it is a "cure for selfishness," that it causes people to meet and discuss all manner of problem.

ON TRADE'S DAY—November 7. Don't forget the date. All Merchants in Kerrville have agreed to sell all goods at a greatly reduced price.

There will be competing cotton buyers to bid on all cotton brought to market.

There will be competing horse and mule buyers. There will be special bargains offered by Merchants.

There will be an opportunity to see what your neighbor has to sell or exchange, and to dispose of the things of which you have a surplus.

Everybody wants to see Trade's Day made a prominent feature in every town in Texas.

Saturday, November 7 will be Trade's Day at Kerrville. At that time merchants will greatly reduce prices

Mr. L. A. Mosly has returned from San Antonio and is about through the returning of all the exhibits to the citizens of Kerr county who furnished them.

The entire people of Kerr county are under obligations to Mr. Mosly, of the Kerrville Orchards and Nurseries, to Mr. Jas Sellers of Center Point, Mr. Geo. Holekamp of Cypress creek and to everyone who contributed articles to the big exhibit.

The list of those who furnished exhibits, would be too long for publication. Below we give a list of Kerr county people who won prize on Kerr county products: Tomatoes, R. E. McDonald 1st. Mr. Pearson, 2nd., Wheat, R. C. Saner, 1st., Wm. Reeh, 2nd., Alfalfa, J. W. Nelson, 1st, and 2nd, Rye, George Holekamp 2nd. Wool, Julius Real 1st., J. R. Colbath, 2nd; Jas. Sellers Irish Potatoes, 1st. Flour, Graham flower, Bran, Corn Meal, Corn Chops, Center Point Roller Mill first.

As has been stated in these columns before the Kerr county Exhibit won second prize in the big contest as a county exhibit.

In addition to winning the prize of $250 the Kerr county exhibit won the admiration of every visitor at the fair.

It did more for the good of the county than any one thing attempted recently.

It gave the people who saw it an idea of the progressive spirit of our people.

It showed the world what can be done in Kerr county in an agricultural way.

It was a success on every part of the ground and went a long way toward "heartening-up" the people to attempt other and yet greater achievement.

The Tuberculosis Exhibit.
 Austin, Tex., Oct. 19.—Dr. W. M. Brumby, State Health Officer, returned today from Dallas, where he attended the installation of the tuberculosis exhibit that has been lent by the New York Charities Aid Association for demonstration purposes in Texas. The exhibit will be displayed in Dallas through out the fair and will go thence to Houston for a stay during the carnival, arrangements have been made for its sojourn there rather than at Shreveport, which city desired the exhibit for contemporaneous dates. Following its Houston display, the exhibit will probably go to San Antonio if the necessary arrangements can be made. From San Antonio it will continue on its tour of the State, coming probably next to Austin and stopping for a day or two at the other large cities of Texas.

The official demonstrator, Dr. Nelbach, accompanies the the exhibit to explain its import. The exhibit contains pictorial representations of the treatment of tuberculosis and the mroads of the disease when it attacks a human system. It is considered one of the most potent influences for awakening interest in the work of the anti-tuberculosis organizations throughout the country.

Texans in the Campaign.
 Washington, Oct. 19.—Representatives Henry of Waco and Beall of Dallas left Washington tonight for Boston, where they will speak tomorrow night. NO POLITICS.

True to our inflexible rule which has prevailed with this publication for the last nine years, no kind of political matter in the nature of a charge against any candidate, will be permitted in these columns next week. No political editorial matter will be printed, except in reply to possible charges, or attacks that may be made upon the paper or its publisher.

The publication of attacks of a sensational nature, and of charges of any kind detrimental to the interests of a candidate, in a newspaper the week before an election, when it is impossible for him to reply in kind is a violation of journalistic decency, and an insult to honest men and women who read it. Such matter is in the same category with the statements of public speakers, and politicians of questionable character who wait until just before the election to spring campaign lies that would nauseate a vulture.

THE FINAL SUMMING UP.

This is probably the last editorial that will be written by this writer touching a national political contest for about four years. The indications at this writing are that Bryan will be president. The one thing that can prevent such a result in the great contest is the use of fabulous sums of money in New York and Indiana between today and the 3rd of November. Conservative Republicans admit the truth of these assertions. There will be the greatest battle waged between unpurchasable manly honor, and the worship of the god of mammon during the next ten days that the world has ever known. The dragon of greed of gold has fastened his jaws upon the neck of our Nation; will the St. George of American patriotism slay the slimy monster? Right and justice are upon the side of the Democratic cause this year. As parties retained too long in power will often do, the Republican party has become grossly corrupt. For sixteen years the Republican organization has been growing stronger in this country, until today its machine is like some fat, slimy monster octopus, lying with its head in the White House at Washington, while its tentacles reach to the very porters who clean the spittoons in every building occupied by a federal office in America.

This condition of unholy greed of power is, perhaps, not chargeable to anyone class of the men who constitute the Republican party, but to a combination of circumstances that has resulted in the present state of affairs. When men do wrong it is within the province of organized society to punish them in one manner or another. When a political organization becomes corrupt in its strength, and its power for doing good has been perverted to unwise and unjust ends, it becomes the duty of organized society to rebuke such failure to do good with authority by taking away the support upon which its strength was builded.

There is now a great wave of reform sweeping across the country. It has swept the west and the middle west; whether it will continue its course on to the eastern seas, or the angry, and aroused octopus of Republican greed, fat on the tribute drawn from protection fed trusts, will lash the political seas until giant waves, crested with gold, shall turn back the flood of reform, remains to be seen.

Every intelligent man, regardless of party affiliation, knows that an unwholesome condition exists in America today. The difference of opinion politically, is the difference of opinion as to the best means of correcting existing evils.

There has been no presidential campaign since 1876, wherein the contest was as close as this one will probably be. We repeat that conditions are most favorable for Mr. Bryan's election. It is just a question of whether or not gold will overbalance patriotism.

In the matter of State politics there is no possibility that a single Republican State officer could by any chance be elected in Texas this year. There will be two, possibly three Republicans in the lower house of the Texas legislature. Almost the entire Republican strength of Southwest Texas, is now being brought to bear upon the contest for State Senator in this (24th) Senatorial district with no probability of Republican success in this district and no possibility of such success in any other. Thus the most that can be hoped for the most sanguine Republican partisan in Texas, is one senator and three representatives. In the event those four should, by some combination of circumstances, be elected, the effect upon the policies of the State would be the same as if four seats in the Texas legislature were vacant. An overwhelming Democratic majority precludes the possibility of so small a minority engraving even a taint of Republicanism upon the affairs of the commonwealth.

These predictions may not be true. They are the last we shall make before the election, and but ten days must elapse before they are proven one way or the other.

THE INQUISITION.

The awful frowning arbiter of the destinies of the condemned sat in august and terrible judgment. To the poor cowering victim, he said:

"What wouldst thou, life imprisonment in the Bastille's silent cell, or a Republican seat in the Texas Legislature."

"Sire," quoth the condemned, "give me the latter task, for if I can but escape the torture of the rack, the penalty of the seat will not confront me."

Some of the big dailies of the State are decorated with the startling 30-point gothic, double column head, "Pierce Will Come to Texas." There are people who will wonder if "Mother Shipton" is doing duty as head writer on Texas dailies. The fame of that lady, it will be remembered, was greatest before the time arrived for her prophecies to come true. The press of Texas, it would seem, should by this time be aware that in mentioning H. Clay Pierce the over worked, but extremely good English word, "alleged," should always be used.

There has been a frightful epidemic of resignation fever raging among Republican aspirants to political office in Texas the last two weeks. Some of them are too busy to attend to the duties of office, while others have been thinking how lonesome a Republican in the Texas legislature would be. Those who have resigned are wisely accepting the teaching that "discretion is the better part of valor."

Walter Wellman, the famous political forecaster of national politics for the last quarter of a century, says Bryan will be elected president. In this immediate section of the State of Texas there should be a lot of "rooster cuts" for rent, as the Mountain Sun is the only publication hereabouts that has shown any considerable evidence of its Democratic convictions.

San Antonio papers are taking some vicious shots at the International Fair. This peculiar behavior is probably due to a vacuum caused in the editorial columns of the press of the Alamo City on account of scarcity of political policy. There is not a daily paper in San Antonio whose editorials are indications of affiliation with any party.

"Col. Taylor Evades Mob, Which Fires 500 Shots at Him, and Arrives in Civilization in Safety." The above sentence is taken from the head of an article that appeared in a Texas paper in regard to recent Night Rider outrages in Uniontown, Tenn. It is a big bunch of language expressed in a few words, but it is a "raw dig" at Uniontown.

Pull as hard against your neighbor as you please, in politics, that is not only your privilege, but your duty; it is when the interest of your town is in question that you should double teams and pull in the same direction.

MORAL.—Kerrville is going to have a Trade's Day November 7.

The wisest reply to a fanatic is silence and a smile.

Did you ever hear the saying: "The kettle shouldn't call the pot 'black.'"

The man who cannot succeed when people know the principles for which he stands, should not succeed.

Don't knock. If you ain't goin' to build nothin' put up your hammer and rock the baby.

If you come along down the street and see an old pair of shoes, and put them on yourself, who is to blame if there happens to be a nail in one, or in both of them.

Even West Virginia is making an effort to get in the column of States that believe in white supremacy. An effort is being made there to secure a "Jim Crow" law.

Don't be grouchy and mean; laugh a little. You cannot prevent the birds of sadness from flying over your head, but you may prevent them building their nests in your heart.

Those Republican candidates who have withdrawn from the race, will spend the first two days after the election shaking hands with themselves, when they see what happened to the fellows that stayed in.

There are a lot of super sensitive people in this world, who sit beside the highway of public opinion with their feet in the track of every passing van of thought, hoping to have their corns 'rod on.

A very good little epigram is going the rounds of the press. "Push—if you can't push, pull. If you can't pull, please get out of the way and let some fellow in that can." Take a dose of the same medicine and boost trade's day.

When a newspaper refers to liars, thieves, fools and some more, in the abstract, no man should take it all to himself. There is always a strong probability that there are others just as much entitled to the appellation as he is.

The big quadriennial political battle is drawing to a close. The Sun, believing in the justice of the rules of journalistic decency, will after this issue keep hands off to see a fair fight to the finish. In saying goodbye to the campaign, so far as these columns are concerned, we desire to say that we have nothing to regret, no word to retract.

The Sun is a Democratic paper, and has fought a strictly partisan fight. We have taken the blows aimed at us in that spirit of political bravery that is becoming him who gives such blows, and have returned them to the best of our ability. Always from principle, never for pay, the Sun, under its present management, has been Democratic, and has tried to merit the place it holds in the ranks of Democratic papers in the State.

GOOD DEMOCRATIC NEWS.

The following letter from Congressman Jas. L. Slayden, who has just returned from a speaking tour in the North, in the interest of Mr. Bryan's campaign, will be good news to Kerr county Democrats.

San Antonio, Texas,
Oct. 17, 1908.

Hon. J. E. Grinstead,
Kerrville Texas.

My dear Sir:

Yesterday I received through our friend, C. C. Lockett, a check for $45.00 which sum I immediately forwarded to Chicago as a Kerr Co. contribution to the National Democratic Campaign Fund. Mr. Lockett advised me that it was money collected through your newspaper, "The Sun," and his personal solicitation. The contribution will be appreciated in Chicago where it is much needed and you and Mr. Lockett and other subscribers will receive acknowledgment from the National Committee.

The campaign for Bryan has been won. We merely need money now to keep the campaign going until the polls shall have been closed and I hope that Kerr county will advance the contribution to a hundred dollars at least.

Very sincerely yours,
JAMES L. SLAYDEN.

A Matter of Efficiency.

The election is now drawing near, and this is probably the last week that I shall be able to solicit votes through the newspapers. As I have had little opportunity to do so in any other manner, I desire to solicit the support of the voters of Kerr County, as a candidate for County and District Clerk of this County. Efficiency, qualification for the proper performance of the duties of the office, experience, as well as clerical ability, should be the one ruling consideration in every vote cast by any voter for any officer. There has been, there can be no question raised as to my qualification. After more than three years experience in the office as deputy, I offer my services to the public solely on my merits. There has been but one objection raised, and that is that I am a woman. There can be no question of the legality of my election to office. I cannot think that there exists a sufficient prejudice on this score to influence the broadminded voters of this County against me. Believing that merit and efficiency are the chief requisites for those seeking public office, I make this final appeal to the voters of Kerr County. I assure you that if elected I shall strive earnestly to give my undivided attention to the duties of the office, and shall fully appreciate the honor conferred.

Very respectfully,
MINNIE L. HUDSPETH.

Expert Accountant Visits Kerrville.

J. W. D. Gould, of the firm of Gunn, Richardson & Co., expert accountants of New York, was in Kerrville Thursday. Mr. Gould was here conducting the labors assigned to him by the firm in making investigation under contract with the State of Texas.

The 30th Legislature passed a law creating a board to provide a new system of accounting for the State. The board so created contracted with the above mentioned firm to make thorough investigation in the premises and suggestions for the new system. In pursuing the investigation it is necessary to pay particular attention to the operation of the present system, and the relation of county accounts to those of the State Comptrollers Department. In order the new system, when adopted, will not work a hard ship, or conflict in any manner. The investigations do not concern counties, as counties, but merely as lesser political divisions, and component parts of the State.

Public Speaking.

Congressman J. L. Slayden and Hon. J. F. Onion will speak at Center Point Thursday night Oct. 29. Mr. Slayden has recently returned from the North where he has been making a speaking tour in the interest of the National campaign. He brings good Democratic news and it will be a pleasure to hear him tell it. On the following night, Oct. 30, Mr. Slayden will speak at Kerrville.

Why Colds are Dangerous.

Because you have contracted ordinary colds and recovered from them without treatment of any kind, do not for a moment imagine that colds are not dangerous. Every one knows that pneumonia and chronic catarrh have their origin in a common cold. Consumption is not caused by a cold but the cold prepares the reception and development of the germs that would not have otherwise have found lodgment. It is the same with all infectious diseases. Diphtheria, scarlet fever, measles and whooping cough are much more likely to be contracted when the child has a cold. You will see from this that more real danger lurks in a cold than any other of the common ailments. The easiest and quickest way to cure a cold is to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The many remarkable cures affected by this preparation have made a staple article of trade over a large part of the world. For sale by all druggists.

HOW BILL GOT CURED.

A True Story of the "Other Side of the Case."

(By J. Arnold Townsend.)

Every proposition that the human mind can conceive has two sides to it, and fair-minded people are always willing to go around on the other side and have a look. There are, however, some problems that can be seen from one side only, and then there are some people, too, who look the other way when the opposite side of the case is presented to them. Most people, though, and especially Texas people, are fair and just; and when a matter is put to them clearly they will look.

The trouble with a lot of people in the world is that they are always crossing bridges before they reach them. Always saying, "I can't." When such people see an unfavorable condition they do not profit by experience, and by the loss that they have felt from that condition. All they see at the time is the condition, and they set up a terrible howl that a calamity is coming and they know they can't dodge it.

There is a story told of Lincoln's school days that very aptly illustrates the disposition of the human mind in such cases, and also the persistence with which hard luck will sometimes "dog a fellow's footsteps." The story runs about as follows:

"For want of school readers an old time class were reading the bible. The lesson for the day was the third chapter of the book of Daniel, and recited some of the trials of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego. There was a boy in the class who was very easily discouraged, and who made no strenuous effort to dodge a calamity. On this occasion the thirteenth verse of the chapter fell to him and he made a woeful mess of pronouncing the names of the famous trio of Hebrew children. For his mistake the oldfield schoolmaster boxed him soundly. The boy set up a doleful howl, but as the ading progressed he forgot his troubles and dried his tears. Finally this coming statesman forgot his sorrow and began to count ahead to see what would be the next verse for him when he found that the thirteenth verse, which also contained the names of the three martyrs would fall to his lot. When the lad discovered this he let out an awful wail. So keen was his anguish and so evidently genuine his grief that the schoolmaster said:

"What's the matter, Bub?"

With shaking finger, the boy pointed at his book, and in quavering tones, he said, "Yander's them same blamed three fellows coming back."

We are always forgetting things, and the same things are always coming back from the trouble world because we fail to profit by experience, and do not prepare ourselves for the next wave of trouble that comes along. Occasionally, however, we find a man who has been cured of this disposition, and such folks are usually cured "good and well."

About a year ago I was traveling across the country from one railroad to another. We came to a well by the roadside, near a house, and as it was about noon we decided to stop, let the horses rest, and eat a lunch. As we sat eating, a man came out of an adjoining field with a hoe on his shoulder. He knocked the dirt off the hoe, hung it on the fence, went to the well and got a drink, and then came over to where we were.

"Are you all agents?" he queried.

"Yes," I replied, "in a way we are."

"Are you selling things from a catalog?" he asked, looking rather doubtful at me.

"Oh, no," said I, "I sell by wholesale to the merchants."

"Well, that's all right," continued my new acquaintance, "but the mail order catalog fellow ain't doin' no good, I'm strong against them, but they did do the best thing for me that has been done in my life."

Thinking the story would while away the hour of waiting for the team to eat and rest, I insisted that he tell it to me. "It won't interest you," he said. "But I insisted that I was anxious to hear it, and told him that every honest, fair minded wholesale house in the country was, or at least should be, interested in the matter of legitimate trade and the protection of the merchant, who patronized them, from the evil of the mail order business."

"Well, stranger," he went on, "this ain't much of a story, and I ain't much of a hand at telling it, but it is a true one, and it is one that happens more times outside of a story book than in them, only they just happen to folks and there is nothing more said."

"Pears to me you fellers are taking dinner a little early," said the farmer, as he looked up at the sun.

"Yes," I replied, "It is not noon, but we started early and I thought we had best eat a little and rest the horses. It is not much further to town is it?"

"No, 'bout three miles," said my new acquaintance, as he sat down on the ground, leaned back against a tree and picked up an oats straw where the campers had fed their horses, "but as I was going to tell you about that catalog business:

"I married about nine years ago. I had been a pretty wild chap early in life and never saved much money, so I had to buy this block of land on time. We settled down on it and I went to work. Emma, that's my wife, and me both had been raised in this county, knew everybody, and we got along fine. The first two years I made good crops, and paid off the notes without any trouble. We went to town to church with the balance of the folks, same as we always had. True we went in a wagon, but everybody knew who we were, and knew it was because we didn't have no buggy.

About that time along came a baby and a long spell of mighty bad sickness for my wife, and a crop failure. That was the first real hard luck I had ever had, but I stood it pretty well. I had to buy everything I had on credit, but the boys in town was all my old neighbors and fellows that I had played marbles with when I was a boy, so that was all right, and I got what I wanted.

"That was the first time that I had kinder felt the pinch of poverty, and I got to studying how to get ahead again. There was a fellow lived in that old house across the lane there and one night he came over to my house and brought a mail order catalog. Now to a fellow who can read and understand good smooth English those fellows put up a mighty good story. They put so much stress upon their own reliability and the implied fact that the home merchant is a robber that a fellow kinder gets to thinking it is true, and the first thing he knows he has given them a trial order.

"When fall came I had made a good crop and paid up everything except a little that I owed at the drug store. I just had one more small bale of cotton, so when I sold it we went over and got the fellow's catalog and Emma and me sat up late that night making out our order. We 'sent off' and got our winter clothes.

"We'd been kinder staying at home because our clothes were pretty shabby, so the first day after the new things came we went to church. Emma had a new hat and a new cloak. The cloak kinder 'drew across the shoulders', and it had a lot of funny little fixings on it that we 'didn't notice in the picture.' Then her hat looked, like it was older than it really was. My new suit was a peculiar blue color that made me look like an old Greek that used to peddle in this country, and my mail order shoes had the appearance of not being happily married, — wasn't mates, — and the 'spur pieces' leaned against my heels powerful hard. I don't think now that there was any difference in the way folks treated us that day from what their treatment had always been, but I thought so then, and I resented it. Several folks asked us to go home with them to dinner, but we refused.

"On the way home I didn't mention the matter, and Emma didn't say a word about it either. When we got home she took the baby in the house and I went on to the barn and put up the mules. When I got to the house, instead of finding the Sunday cold dinner on the table, the baby in her 'high chair' and her mama pinning on her bib, as usual, the baby was sitting on the floor playing with the new catalog and Emma was lying on the bed crying.

"Now, my wife ain't generally bad about crying, and when I saw that I went all to pieces. I went over and asked her what was the matter. She refused to say any thing for a long time, but finally she sobbed out:

"They sn-sn - snub - snubbed me."

"Oh, no. You must be wrong," I said, "but as my poor little broken-hearted wife went on to tell me of the indignities, real or imaginary, that had been heaped upon us, I forgot all about Bill Stovall begging us to go home with him to dinner. I forgot that Susie, Bill's wife, had nursed Emma when the baby was little, and that she had taken the little thing in her arms that very day and hushed it's crying while meeting was going on. I forgot that just when I was ready to get in the wagon Old Dick Hampton had called me and told me that he had a thousand bushels of corn to haul in from the bottom where he had taken it on a debt. I forgot that he said, 'Now Joe, there are a lot of fellows that owe me and will do that hauling, but you and Emma have had a pretty hard time, and if you want to haul some of it, go ahead and I'll pay you half in money and the balance in trade. I am pretty hard run myself on account of bad collections, but if we will all stick together we will come out all right in the end.' And then Dick looked up and saw the wagon and he said, 'why don't you and Emma come on up to the house and get dinner, ain't been there for a year.' I forgot all those things. I persuaded myself that we had been mistreated, and I made a high resolve that I would show those people a few things. We'd quit buying anything from them. We'd quit having anything to do with them. They were envious of our stylish new clothes. We harbored this feeling for a while and then we quit going to church.

"A little later on I sold Emma's turkeys and she put that to her 'butter money' and ordered a folding bed and a rocking chair. The day it came I went to town to get it, and was going to get a sack of flour, but it took all the money I had with me to pay the freight on the bed, so I didn't get the flour. I passed along by Bill Stovall's furniture store and stopped at the postoffice. Bill came out to the wagon and said:

"Hello, Joe, where'd you get that chair and bed?"

"I told him, and he looked kinder queer. I didn't feel very good about it myself, for Bill and Susie had been awful good to me and Emma when she was sick. As I drove off Bill called after me, and said:

"Susie told me to tell you and Emma to come in on Thanksgiving and eat dinner with us. Tell Emma that we have a turkey that is fatter than the one she had that time at the supper they gave to help pay for painting the church."

"I done a lot of studying on the way home, but I didn't tell Emma what Bill said.

"Things went on that way for a couple of years longer. We quit going anywhere, thought everybody was down on us, that we didn't have any friends. We finally played the clam until we got so we didn't have a ny friends, and thought that we didn't need any.

"Three years before that I had borrowed $400 from Tom Cawthorn to pay off a land note. I had been hard run for a long time and had not paid the interest. Tom was an old bachelor that been engaged to my sister that was older than me, and she died just a week before the wedding day. He had never paid any attention to any other woman, and was about the saddest man I ever saw. He loaned his little money and attended to his business, and the only pleasure he ever took was in fine horses. Just about the time my awakening occurred Tom bought a fine standard bred trotter and paid four hundred dollars for it. That made me sore when I heard it. I had reached the point of pessimism when my heart and mind were fallow ground for the sowing of the seeds of envy. The first time I met Tom in the road driving 'Star,' I looked at the horse, but I didn't notice that Tom looked thin and bad like he needed to drive out in the open. I didn't notice that his hair, instead of being a little gray, like other men his age, was almost white. I didn't see him with my eyes, I saw him with a poisoned mind and he looked to me like a money shark, fat, sleek, grasping. He had said nothing to me about the money I owed him, and had asked after my family and all that kind of a thing, but I just knew he was thinking about it and was going to foreclose the deed of trust pretty soon.

"That fall I worried a whole lot. I was flat broke, and I saw that Emma was worrying. I didn't have much clothes but rags, and the worst part of it was that my wife and pretty little daughter, Effie, didn't have no new clothes. One day about that time I was down on the branch in the woods pasture getting up some wood. I got pretty warm and then it came up a rain and I got wet and cold. The way we had been living, without a bit of happiness, and the very windows of our souls closed against the light of pleasure was telling on me and my wife, too. Next morning I was aching all over, and that evening Emma sent for the doctor. I recollect the doctor coming, and that is about the last thing I do remember about it. The next thing I knew they told me it was nearly Christmas and that I had had a powerful bad spell of typhoid pneumonia.

"I wokeup from a nap a day or two later and Tom was sitting by the fire. In an instant the same old poison thought came back into my mind, 'he wants his money,' and I commenced talking to him about it.

He looked at me a moment and then he said:

"Don't talk that way Joe, it might make you worse. I never intended to take that money back from you. I just took that deed of trust because I was afraid you would get wild again some time and sell the place. I done it on Emma's and baby's account. Don't you remember the day your sister died how they had to send for you to get you to come to the house? Well, the last thing she ever said to me was 'Tom be good to Joe, and try to keep him straight.' That $400 that keep you from going wrong and selling your farm, Joe, came from heaven, and has done me more good than any money I ever saw. You don't owe me no money. I released the deed of trust when you first got sick, because I have'n't been right stout for a long time and I didn't want no cloud on the title to Emma's home if anything bad should happen."

"When Tom quit talking I had my face to the wall and I didn't try to say any thing. Pretty soon in come Bill and Susie and shook hands with me and told me how glad they were to see me so much better. Then they all sat around the fire and talked low and I dropped off to sleep. Once Emma woke me up calling Effie to come put on her cloak. I heard Susie say it is right cold out, but it is dry and I guess it won't hurt her.

"About dark that night the doctor was passing and stopped to see how I was getting along. He examined me and said I was doing fine. As I was dosing off to sleep I heard my wife say:

"Doctor I wish you would look at Effie, seems like she has fever. I'm afraid she is going to have eroup."

"She and the doctor passed into the little room and pretty soon I heard Effie coughing. The doctor came back directly and walked over to the fireplace and talked to Tom and Bill pretty low for a minute. I understood the doctor to say there was none nearer than the county seat and that he would like to have Dr. Browne to help him. Then Tom spoke up and said:

"We'll get it, doctor, in five hours. I've got Star out there already hitched up to the road wagon."

"Then Bill said, Tom you can't stand that trip, I'll go. While I was laying there wondering what long trip they could be talking about that would take that horse 5 hours to trot it, doctor came to bed and said "here Joe, take this dose of medicine, I don't want you to take cold to-night." I took the medicine and pretty soon I got drowsy. I remember hearing the doctor say:

"Better put on plenty of clothes Bill, and take an extra pair of blankets. The wind's square in the north and that horse will go against it like a storm."

"Yes, says Bill, and don't you hold him back. There's lots of horses and there ain't but one Effie." But the medicine was taking effect and I heard Effie cough again, then I went to sleep.

"When I awoke the sun was shining in at the window pale and cold. The lamp was still burning and Bill and Tom were sitting by the fire. I heard the door open right easy and Susie walked in and talked to the boys in low tone. The medicine is working all right now, and she is asleep," she said. I went to sleep again, late as it was and when I awoke Effie was coughing like she would choke. After a little she got quiet. Bill and another man came into my room. As they came in the other fellow, who was big fatman, was saying:

"It worked fine, and she'll be all right now."

"He came over to my bed and I saw it was Dr. Browne, a big doctor from the county seat. He shook hands and told that he was passing and stopped to warm, and I was too weak and drowsy to raise a question.

"Things moved on all right, and in a week I was sitting by the fire with my clothes on, and getting awful hungry. My little girl was standing by me with her head laying up against me talking in her childish way, and she looked up and said:

"Papa, did you know that while you was sick, I had the awfullest sore throat, an' the doctor put some stuff in my mouth that made me cough up a whole lot of stuff!"

"Then my wife told me about the whole thing. How the doctor doped me to keep me from knowing that Effie had diptheria. How Bill drove to the county seat and back, forty miles in four hours and a half, and froze his hands and killed Tom's fine horse. How he brought Dr. Browne and the Anti-toxin, and saved my little girl. By that time Emma had such a lump in her throat she couldn't talk, and I couldn't listen to do no good.

After a while she went on to tell me how good Bill Stovall, the Mertz boys, all the fellows at the big department store in town, had been. In fact, she said, everybody in that end of the county had wanted to do something for me, and the fellows from town that I used to run with had been the first to come.

While we were talking old, big, fat, goodnatured Bill Stovall came in and we went over the whole thing and Bill said it was good for sore eyes to see me up again. And he said Effie was as good as new. When he said that I looked at his hands and she put them in his pocket. I saw they were peeling off, and I couldn't say any thing for a while. Finally I said, yes Bill we are all right now, but there is one thing that dead in this house.

"What's that says Bill?"

"It is the mail order business, I replied. Emma got up wiping her eyes on her apron handed me the catalog off the mantel. I threw it over behind the backlog into the fire, and have never had one since. I told Bill that I had reached the conclusion that it took all of us to keep up the community, and that nobody was to blame for mistakes, but I would not make that one again. That I had seen the other side of the case," and that from that time on I was going to ask my friends for help when I needed it, help them when I had a chance, tell them when I thought they were wrong, and put my shoulder to the wheel to help make this community better than neighborhoods where the people done their trading and paid their taxes in Chicago. I've been doing that ever since and I am getting along better than I ever did."

A little girl came out of the farm house and called, "Papa," and my friend arose and said:

"There's Effie calling me to dinner. Good-bye gentlemen."

That evening after I had sold Mr. Stovall a big bill of goods, I had a long talk with him about the matter.

"Yes," said the big, wholesaled merchant, "that's about the way it happened. Joe makes a great story of it, but it did us all good. There are two sides to every case, and we merchants never did see our own side until we got over on Joe's side and looked back at it."
