TRADE'S DAY.

MERCHANTS PLEASSED WITH GREAT SUCCESS OF ENTERPRISE.

The First Event Exceeded the Most Sanguine Expectation. A strenuous effort will be made to perpetuate the custom.

DECEMBER 4 AND 5

Are Dates Set For Next Even, and Nothing Will Be Left Undone To Make These Meetings Equal the Famous

FALKIRK TRYSTS!

The first effort at Trade's Day was a wonderful success. At an early hour on Saturday morning of last week people began arriving in Kerrville from all parts of Kerr and adjoining counties. They came to sell and to buy. They brought farm produce, poultry, horses and endless variety of the things that the producers of the country have to dispose of at this time of the year.

It was truly a history-making market day for Kerrville, and business men say there never has been such a day's business in the city before. More cotton was sold and unloaded from wagons here last Saturday than ever in any one day in the history of the town. The price paid was from $5. to $10. above the market. Merchants made liberal discounts and the day was a profitable one all round.

The first prize of $10 for best bale of cotton was awarded to W. W. Barnes, of Medina. The second prize, of $5, went to A. J. Norwood, of the Turtle creek community.

When a Sun reporter went the round of the business houses Monday morning the story everywhere was, "all to the good." Many merchant say the chief trouble was that they could not sell fast enough to meet the demands made upon them. It was a clear case of selling "all they could wrap up." Inquiry elicited the following expressions from business men:

John C. Graves and W. G. Carpenter of the Kerrville Mercantile Company: "It was fine business. We had more than we could handle, and are well pleased."

W. A. Fawcett, of W. A. Fawcett & Company: "Fine business, kept us busy all day. Think it is the best thing that has happened for the town."

T. F. W. Diertert: "Couldn't have been better. I was a little bit skeptical before, but I am converted. Trade's Day is a fine thing. We had more business than we could handle."

J. P. Mosel, of Mosel, Saenger & Company: "We are well pleased with Trade's Day results. Did not make special preparation for it, but had very gratifying trade on that day, and think it a fine thing."

J. L. Pampell: "My line is not especially adapted to Trade's Day business, but I am well pleased because I think it is a fine thing for the town."

Dr. E. Galbraith: "It is a long stride in the right direction. It shows the value of concerted action on the part of the people."

A. C. Schreiner, General Manager of the Chas. Schreiner Company: "The biggest day's business in the history of this company covering almost forty years continuous business. It could not have been finer. The only possible drawback was that salesmen could not wait on the trade in the limited time given. I think it is the greatest thing ever suggested for the town and the country."

ness in the history of this company covering almost forty years continuous business. It could not have been finer. The only possible drawback was that salesmen could not wait on the trade in the limited time given. I think it is the greatest thing ever suggested for the town and the country."

Dr. A. F. Thigpen, Secretary of the Business Men's Club: "It is most gratifying to the officers and members of the club. A first success is a tonic to greater effort, and we expect the next Trade's Day to be still better."

J. T. Ligon: "I am well satisfied with the result of Trade's Day, and am ready right now to get busy on another one."

Albert Williford, of the Monse Carlo restaurant: "I did a good business, and am well pleased. Anything that makes business for the town makes business for me."

Oscar Rosenthal, of the Famous: "It was a winner on every part of the ground. The biggest, and the most satisfactory day's business I have ever had. The merchants are all well pleased, and the people are pleased with the treatment they received."

A. B. Williamson: "I am well pleased with Trade's Day. It is certainly a good thing for the town and I hope it has come to stay."

A. R. Jones, of the Palace of Sweets: "I had a fine trade and am right in line on the Trade's Day proposition. It was good for business and fine for the people."

W. G. Prisch, of the Golden Rule Arcade: "Trade's Day is a splendid thing. Business was good and the opportunity for getting acquainted with the people was worth a great deal."

R. S. Newman: "A fine thing for town and country. A good thing for individual merchants from a trade getting view point; an excellent means of getting business men and farmers, the buyers and sellers, together."

Dr. J. B. Love: "Did a good business. Think it a good thing for the business men and for the farmers and traders."

Geo. W. Weltner: "Such things can't come our way two or ten. It was a great day in the old town, and I like it and want to see another one."

H. Noll, President H. Noll Stock Company: "The only trouble we had was not being able to wait on the trade, although we had extra men. It was a good thing every way."

C. A. Schreiner, Jr., manager dry goods department Chas. Schreiner Company: "Biggest business we ever had. Our people could not serve the trade. Had no idea so much business could be started in this county."

Thos. Frayne: "My business was twice as good as any previous day."

A. E. Self: "My trade was greatly increased. Think Trade's Day a fine thing for the town."

And so the story went on. Everybody pleased, and the great majority enthusiastic. The only hitch in the arrangements was the failure of horse and mule buyers from other points to be here. Local buyers did all they could do to handle the offering of stock, but the vast number of animals on the market swamped them. A special effort is being made now to provide against the possibility of a recurrence of such a misfortune.

At a meeting of the Business Men's Club held Monday night it was decided that it was impossible to handle the trade of such a throng of buyers in one day, so the next Trade's Day season will comprise two days, December 4 and 5.

The Kerr County Exhibit.

At a meeting held at the court house Tuesday night, pursuant to call the matter of the disposition of funds on hand was taken up and discussed.

The report of Mr. L. A. Mosty, who had the enterprise in charge showed that, after paying all expenses there still remained in the fund $140.00. That is, that much is left of the entire fund including collection made for the purpose by Mayor Renschel and the premium of $250.

The meeting decided to turn the funds over to the West Texas Fair Association to be held in trust by them. If at any time within the next two years it is decided to get up another such exhibit, the fair association shall pay amount over to the person or persons having the exhibit in charge. If no such exhibit is made within two years, then the $140 shall become a part of the general fund in the fair association treasury.

The big exhibit, as stated before in these columns was the greatest advertisement and demonstration of the agricultural possibilities of Kerr county that has been made.

M. E. Wallace of the Bryan Eagle, whose family are sojourning in Kerrville for the winter, arrived in Kerrville Wednesday accompanied by his brother-in-law Frank Higgs.

Marion Newton killed another fine ten-point buck Tuesday.

BUSINESS PROVERBS.

Then shalt not make excuses in this wise, saying: "I didn't go to do it." Verily, the heartless world will not care a tinker's dam whether you went to do it or not; they care only to do with the disgraceful fact that you did it, and got caught with the goods.

Make no mistakes as long as you can make anything else; when you make them don't lie about it if you can help it, but if you find that you must lie, tell a good one. Never say, "I didn't think." That is telling a lie and confessing ignorance at the same time, either of which is criminal.

THE CIVIC PRIDE.

The great success of Trade's Day in Kerrville was a death knell to the Can't family. No community has ever witnessed a more complete reward for organized and united effort, or a more thorough vindication of the judgment of leading business men, than was evidenced by the great throng of buyers and sellers that were on the streets of Kerrville on Saturday of last week.

There are probably people whose civic and business vision is so short that they saw nothing in that great Trade's Day triumph, except a day of "good business," and of large sales for merchants and business men. If that is true it is not more remarkable than that less than a week before the realization of the great success for which this organized effort was being made there were business men who said there would be little doing on Trade's Day. There is, to the thinker along the lines of civic advancement, much in this great success, besides its immediate result in dollars and cents.

The greatest tonic known to the fields of human endeavor is the encouragement of success, be it ever so small. Thus, we have had the first draught of the gratifying wine of successful achievement. We have also had in this affair the finest possible object lesson in the fact that where the entire citizenship of a town is united and pulling together for a common cause there can be no such thing as failure.

The success of this first serious effort at concerted action on the part of Kerrville's business men is also a striking illustration of the value of "get together and printer's ink" as a remedy for civic lethargy. Kerrville has for years been the most successfully advertised town of like population in America. Advertising the town is a matter upon which the people have long been united and agreed, and the result has been most gratifying.

The good that can be achieved for a town or a community by organized effort on the part of the people can not be overestimated. Kerrville has now a regularly organized Business Men's Club, and it is to be hoped that its organization may be permanent for generations to come. Those men who are bearing the chief burdens of the government of nation, commonwealth, municipality and community today will not finish the work of city building and of statecraft, any more than Romulus and Remus built the city of Rome. The tentative efforts of the Kerrville Business Men's Club have been successful. The earnest perseverance of the club, and of its individual members, will cause everything it undertakes to succeed.

Some wise man has said, "life is a battle for supremacy." If that is true it is, proportionately, of organizations, municipal, civic, social, and all the integers that go to compose the great body politic. It is the part of wisdom that we have such organization, and that we wage such a "battle for supremacy," to the end that those who come after us may have the advantage of wise precept and emulable example in the prosecution of the affairs of that part of the world we are supposed to have benefited by having lived in it.

In traveling about the country one sometimes sees a town having a "one-gillus" appearance, unpainted houses, ill kept streets, and a general air of slovenliness. Perhaps not more than ten or a dozen miles further on, in the same kind of country, having the same environment, under the same government, he sees another town where everything and everybody has a look of being wide-awake and doing things. In the first instance there was, perhaps, abundant material for town building, but that great leader, "Civic Pride" was dead! In the last case where there was possibly not so much to work on, things were happening because "Civic Pride" had come into his own, was very much alive, and was making an aggressive fight for the purpose of driving selfishness, narrowness and sloth to the swamps of oblivion.

The people of Kerrville have cause to congratulate themselves that they have long been reasonably progressive, and that they have of their own accord become awake to the demands of civic righteousness. Less than two months ago one of the leading manufacturing cities in America awoke to the fact that business lethargy was sapping its vitality because of civic shortcomings. They did not awake of themselves as a whole people, but the progressive element of the city of Grand Rapids, Michigan, lead by progressive newspapers, and by men of affairs and wide observation, becoming alarmed at the conditions existing in a city of 90,000 inhabitants, caused a civic revival to be held for the purpose of bringing to the minds of the people the duties of citizenship. At this revival, which was held at a church, Prof. Zeubelin discussed such subjects as "The New Civic Spirit," "The Making of the City," "The Education of the Citizen" and other like themes. So much interest in civic affairs was aroused that the city government, and the people of Grand Rapids turned to the right about and that city is today one of the most progressive in America. Once people get to thinking along the proper lines they can achieve a great deal with little apparent effort.

The chief difficulty in town building in the young west has been, for many years, the restless, floating disposition of the population. Towns and cities cannot be made to prosper upon the precarious support afforded by the operations of the man who engages in business for a season to accumulate sufficient funds, by speculation, to keep him in plenty in some other community after his fortune shall have been made. City builders, town builders, society builders, are the men who pull off their coats, assume their share of the burden and perform their part of the toil, without which there can be no achievement. The transient tradesman and the itinerant peddler do little toward town building. "For where your treasure is there will your heart be also," and little should be expected in a civic way of any one who has no investment in the community. For that very reason alone farmers and herdsmen have been the especial foundation of governments since the days when the Egyptians first settled in the valley of the Nile and became farmers and flock-masters. For that reason it is unwise to trade with a traveling peddler, or within retail house that is located in Chicago.

Kerrville has in the last month made a long step in the way of civic advancement. It is gratifying to this publication to see this action taken. Every permanent citizen of Kerrville should become a member of the Business Men's Club, put his shoulder to the wheel of progress and go over or through all obstacles that lie in the road to success.

The crusade for the extirpation of narrowness and fanaticism, and consequent cruelty, is God's work, no matter if the business chances to be conducted by the devil's attorneys.

The less business a man has of his own, the more time he has to devote to the business of other people. The more time a man devotes to the other fellow's business, the less business of his own he will have to attend to. Moral: Cut it out and get busy with your own affairs.

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nichols died Nov. 1, 1908. GIRARD L. PERIL.

The surrounding country has been greatly shocked by the recent tragical death of Girard L. Peril. This sad event occurred Thursday morning about seven o'clock and was the accidental discharge of his rifle while hunting in the pasture near his home. He left home before breakfast and shortly afterward the sound of his gun was heard by several. His failure to return alarmed the family, who together with neighbors began a search for him. The direction was not known and though every effort was made, the body was not found till just before night. The search had lasted so long that the gravest results were feared, but no words can describe the horrors when the relatives and friends found the body lying face downward where it had fallen. A large number of men had gathered to aid in the search and no one present will ever forget that night.

An inquest was held and Dr. Merritt pronounced death instantaneous from a wound in the throat.

The funeral took place at four o'clock next day at the family cemetery near the Peril home. The young man's popularity was shown by the friends who came from far and near, to be present at this sad time. People were present from Fredericksburg, Kerrville, Center Point, Morris, Sawyer and Live Oak ranches, Harper and the immediate neighborhood. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Nicholson, of Harper, after which the grave was covered with a mass of beautiful flowers.

The deceased was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Peril, one of the first and most highly respected citizens of the county.

He was born in the country, and apart from the time spent at school, has spent his entire life there, not from lack of ambition, however, but in the unswerving observance of his duty, which was the most marked characteristic of his life.

In the most perfect health, with the brightest prospects before him, life meant much to him and we can see nothing but the great tragedy in it all. But it means much when a young man lives such a life that he is deeply regretted by all; that no other child can ever be to his parents what he has been; that his place will remain unfilled in his neighborhood and in the hearts of the friends who knew him best and understood him. This fact should be a great consolation to the deeply grieved parents.

Its acts on nature's plan, relieves the lungs, aids expectoration, opens the secretions and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. During the many years in which it has been in general use we have yet to learn of a single case of cold or attack of the grip having resulted in pneumonia when this remedy was used, which shows conclusively that it is a certain preventive of that dangerous disease. Chamberlain's Cough remedy contains no opium or other narcotic and may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by all Druggists.

Little Miss Katie,

Kerrville, Texas.

Dear, Truly Little Girl:

Your letter was forwarded to me by the Kerrville Mercantile Company, and I was sorry to hear that your toys had been so unfortunate, but when Christmas comes I will fix all the trouble by bringing new ones.

One of my reindeer had a sore foot, and for a while I was afraid I would not get to come, but it is well now and I will open my pack at the Book Store Department on Saturday, November 14. I shall make that headquarters while I distribute toys to all the boys and girls in that part of Texas. I have the biggest and nicest pack of presents this year that I have ever had, and I am afraid I can't get all of them on my sleigh.

Give my love to all the little folks and tell them I am coming.

Yours truly,
BILL SANTA CLAUS.

Business Men's Club.

The Kerrville Business Men's Club met Monday night in called session and transacted business for which call was made.

The Trade's Day committee was discharged. The amount of money left in the hands of the treasurer of the committee was transferred to the Business Men's Club, which was organized since the Trade's Day committee was created by a citizen's meeting. All matters pertaining to the civic affairs of the city, not directly under official jurisdiction, are now under the supervision of the Business Men's Club including Trade's Day.

A new Trade's Day committee under the direction of the club, was appointed. The committee is composed of J. L. Pampell, chairman, G. H. Coleman, McCallum Barnett, J. C. Graves, T. F. W. Dietert, A. F. Thigpen, J. B. Love and J. E. Grinstead.

The next tryst, market, fair or trade's day, as you may please to call it, will be held on Friday and Saturday December 4 and 5. The setting apart of two days instead of one is on the account of the fact that merchants were unable to serve the trade last Saturday, and they wish to give the people more time to make their purchases.

In addition to the prizes given for cotton, as were given in last week's event, there will also be a prize of $10, each, for best mule colt, and for best horse colt, and a second prize of $5, in each case.

The next regular meeting of the Business Men's Club will be held next Wednesday night, Nov. 18.

Card of Thank.

We wish to extend our heart felt thanks for the kind attention offered to us in this our hour of our affliction and the kind attention given to the memory of our be loved son Girard Peril and it will always be held in fond remembrance.

Just at this season of the year we devote special attention to the matter of cold weather clothes. It is just as easy to combine comfort, service and good appearance in winter clothing, if you buy at the right place. No matter where you go you are not likely to buy articles just as good—unless you pay more. We buy larger stocks and therefore buy cheaper, consequently, we sell the same quality of goods for less.

The Money You Have Left

Everybody makes a living in some way or another. It is the money we have left after securing a living, the little bit of profit on the year's work that helps men and women to lay up a little for a "rainy day" that helps. If you will trade with us the little saved on the various articles you buy will in the course of the year amount to a nice little saving—a neat profit on the year's business. We are right now operating a great money saving sale six days in the week—come in and get the money saving habit.

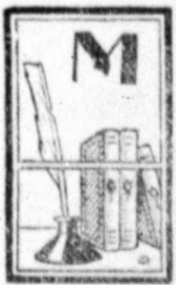

If an article costs a little more, at our store, it is because it is worth a great deal more. The first consideration, with us, is always QUALITY

GEORGE BOWLES

Tells a Mixed Story About Hard Luck and Things.

Most of us have heard the comic song, "Every Little Bit Helps."

Like a lot of other comic things, that song, to use a slang expression, "said a mess of talk." The first time I heard that song I laughed a while, and then it kinder got over being funny, because it made me think of hearing a fellow say that very thing one time when I was not feeling funny.

I have been told that there are people in the world who have never been "broke," and don't know how it feels. If there are such, they are unable to appreciate the saying, "every little bit helps." When I say "broke," I don't mean to have no automobile, and be without more than half a dozen suits of clothes. The word "broke," as far as I know is not recorded by any lexicographer, but it means a lot. It takes a good while to say, "so poor that he couldn't pay freight on a foot of cobweb the measly little yard that separates the upper ten from the lower million." That is what "broke" means, and I know its meaning.

One day when I was a lad I went out into the wide pitiless world to make my fortune. Like many other young fellows who go out into the same world, for the same purpose, I didn't have the right tools to make a fortune with. I fell on hard lines. It was winter. Snow was on the ground. I got "broke," a stranger in a strange land. There is no place on earth that is not lonesome if a fellow has no money and knows no body, and as general rule the more people you know the lonesomer it is if you ain't got no money and can't get any.

That time I got a lesson in how much "every little bit helps." I got a job driving a team on a railroad grade. The first day I thought all day about the fact that "every little bit helps," and that if I worked that way all day for about two months I should have enough money to pay my way back home. The next day I was feeling pretty bad. I took cold I ached in every joint. Every time I would stoop down to turn that scraper it seemed like the top of my head would fly off. There was a big blue-eyed giant filling scrapers. He noticed that I was sick, and asked what was the matter. I told him, and he ask why I didn't quit. I told him I was broke and had to work. He sized me up a minute and said, all right my boy, I'll turn your scraper, it ain't my business to do it, but "every little bit helps" a fellow when he needs help. After a while Jack, that was his name, said, to me:

"What are you going to do with the money you are going to get for this, kid?"

"Goin' home I replied." The next time I came around to fill my scraper the big laughing giant had a tear in his eye. The straw boss on the dump spoke roughly to me and Jack said to him, "Cut that out, you big duffer or I'll beat the face off of ye. The kid is sick."

The next day I was sick, and it rained and the gang lay around the tent all day. Jack waited on me. One moonlight night, when I was well and strong again, Jack and I were sitting on an old log close to the camp. He turned to me and said:

"Kid tell me about your home."

"I told him all there was to tell, and then he told me how he had left home when a lad to make his fortune, just as I had done, but had never gone back. He had fallen among evil companions. Had wasted his earnings and never had enough to go back. He talked to me about his poor old mother and a blind sister. The first pay day that came we drew our money and Jack said to me, "salt it down kid. I am saving this to go home on myself." When I got enough to go home on Jack took me to the train, and while we were waiting for it to come we sat on the platform at the little country station, and Jack said:

"I hate to part with you kid, but it is the best thing for you to go home. You recollect that evening when I turned the scraper for you and told you that "every little bit helps," well you done something right then that helped a lot. You made me homesick. I have not wasted a cent since that night. I am going to save my money, and some day I am going home to mother just as you are doing. We saw the smoke of the train. He made me give him my address. A few moments later I was looking out at the window as Jack disappeared around a curve.

About two years later I got a letter bearing a strange post mark. I opened it, and on the corner of the sheet was "Jack Hargrove, Storage and Transfer." The letter ran:

Dear Kid:
I am just writing to let you know that "Every little bit helps," and a fellow don't know when he is helpin'. I never wasted no more money after you left me. When I got back home I found mother and Ella mighty pore. I bought a team with my money, and now I have 7 teams and a ware house rented. I am getting along alright, and I hope you are. If you ever get close to this little old New England town come to see me. If you don't, always remember "every little bit helps" an' it ain't always the stoutest one as does the helpin'.

JACK.

Jack could 'nt spell as good as Webster, but he was a gentleman I know, because he whipped the big corral boss for refusing to pull the harness off my mules. Then he told me he loved his mother, and his blind sister. He saved his money and went home and took care of them. If I should ever get near his town I would go to see him, even I was a prince and he was a pauper, because he was my friend, and a feller don't have many. And besides,—"every little bit helps."
