The woolen mills have decreed that the price of wool "shall not pass" 50¢ per pound, and in order to fight back the possibility of prices making heavy advances after going over the top, the buyers have entrenched behind a barrage of propaganda and are attempting to hold back the advance with a smoke screen of foreign production, says the Herald of Del Rio. But all the carefully planned defensive cam-paign has failed in its effect to weaken the morale of the growers and the advance threatens to break through and annihilate the enemy. And when this is accomplished the growers will dictate the terms of peace. But the wool growers are just and fair, re-gardless of the fact that they have been flayed almost to a finish in other campaigns, and will not attempt the unreasonable in their demands upon settlement. They know full well that they are entitled to 50¢ and better for wool and when the buyers indicate a willingness to pay the price justified by the local supply and the foreign price as considered together with the tariff there will be no delay in the movement of wool to the factories. #### ABATE NOT ITS SPIRIT

Carmen (Okla.) Headlight: The shot that was heard around the world continued to reverberate, in fact, grew in volume, until it culminated in that great explosion of unfettered sentiment known as the Declaration of Independence; hence the custom for so many years of marking the anniversary with explosive rites. This tendency, thoroughly fitting for the young and ardent days of the nation, has decreased considerably and has been supplanted by manifestations of the spirit more in keeping with maturity and a thoughtful patriotism.

We may put aside the more ex-travagent demonstrations, but we must maintain a reverence for the emblems and memories of Independ ence Day and must not diminish the importance of its principles; otherwise our country will be imperiled. From the standpoint of nationalism, the Fourth of July is by long odds the most important day we celebrate. The annual observance keeps the most sacred of American traditions fresh in the hearts of the people. Any lapsing of the spirit, any turning aside from the objects of the occasion, are lessening of vigilance and in favor of the enemies of American institutions. The ideas of the day form one of the strongest bulwarks against that propaganda and those forces, organized both inside and outside our borders, known to be aiming at the destruction of this Nation tion of this Nation.

There are no better methods of arousing patriotic sentiment and teaching the significance of the holidents from which it arose, inculcating its traditions and ideals and pointing out the extremely vital meaning of ts emblems and monuments.
