THIS MATTER OF EDUCATION

This week the high and grade schools are presenting to a group of students, diplomas which signify that these young men and women have accomplished something eminently worth while.

More and more, as the ranks of men appreciate greater advantages of education, they are willing to make a more acute sacrifice in order for their children to have a better chance to play the game of living in an acceptable manner.

Education will not supply brains. It can only develop native talent. However, the person who has an ordinary intelligence, will far outstrip the genius in usefulness—if his intellect is trained by intensive study, and the genius is neglected.

Education will not make life easier—for he who can read and understand the ills of the world, will find that the call to service is impossible of denial.

An education will not necessarily bring with it riches. As a group, the most highly educated men in America, pay the least income tax.

Why, then, secure an education? Because true learning brings with it joy, and happiness. The ignorant person may be compared to a chicken in a darkened, cramped coop.

Congratulations to our boys and girls who have persevered, and have attained the immediate goal of graduation. May they realize that they have merely taken two steps forward and that learning never ceases.

BEST EDITORIAL OF THE WEEK

(From the April issue of the American Poultry Journal)

"One hears a good deal about low egg prices, high feed costs, shortage of feed due to drought, and the need of selling hens to get cash. Whatever the reason, many a hen house has been swept out with a broom big enough to sweep back the ocean."

"It is true that egg prices are low, but what has happened? The very thing that egg producers have devoutly wished for has taken place! Egg consumption, due to attractive prices at which eggs have sold, has increased—41 per cent more eggs have disappeared thru trade channels during the period of February 1 to 18 than the year previous according to the government report."

"The shorter the crop of baby chicks, the more complete the reaction will be this fall and the more fortunate will be the owner of profitable layers at that time. Every poultryman in the business sees and understands this fact. To the farmers, let us say: 'It often pays a farmer to do the contrary thing to what others are doing.'"

"To summarize the situation in a nut-shell, here it is: Flocks of poultry have been drastically reduced; rearing of chicks is greatly curtailed; egg consumption has jumped up enormously; grain prices are in a very favorable position for the feeder. If a short crop of poultry, low feed prices and increased consumer demand for eggs don't mean a big year ahead for the poultry business, then signs, as lighthouses to point the way, are no good."

COUNTRY CROWNS QUEEN

Washington is much interested in the fact that during the past month nearly a hundred "Wear Cotton" meetings have been held in various parts of the country in support of the national movement to apprise the public of the variety of fashionable and utilitarian uses to which this important native American textile may be put.

The durenne fine cotton division of the cotton industry was asked to co-operate with 78 festivals in ten different states of the Union in April. These events in which interest in the finest mercedized cotton was considered particularly as the new fashion queen, were sponsored by 32 Women's clubs, 11 Federation of Women's club, four home demonstration agents, two colleges, five merchants associations, one cotton exchange, one mayor, numerous stores and mills, and 11 county organizations.

Many of the fashion "promenades" and exhibition festivals were repeated several times in various communities in order to accommodate a variety of audiences. Nearly 30,000 people comprised a single audience on the college campus at Anderson, South Carolina, when Miss Doris Hinman of New York, described the new developments of sheen and beauty in cotton and showed 35 durenne cotton costumes of great charm and fashion importance.

The country is becoming alive to the fact that fine cottons are today capable of going to the most exclusive parties, on the smartest women—children and men are not excepted!

In a good many places the farmer isn't restricted so much in what crop he will plant provided he plants a garden and has a cow, sow and a few hens. Of course the dairy and poultry products have about reached bottom along with other commodities, but the family can maintain them with little cost and eat them if necessary.

CAPITOL SNAPS

By Fred V. Holmes, Washington Correspondent of The Messenger

It is no new experience for Washington to be the mecca toward which many minds converge at this season of the year, but the present season must mark almost the high tide. Presence of the International Chamber of Commerce, with its thousand delegates from thirty-five nations, stamps the American National Capitol for the moment as the meeting ground of the world.

Newspaper advertising was described as "without a doubt the most effective medium for the retail store," by Dr. D. F. Kelly, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, in an address before a plenary session of the International Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Kelly came before the gathering of business men of two score countries as the spokesman of more than 3,700 department, specialty, and dry goods stores of the United States which do an annual business of approximately four and a half billion dollars, and which employ upward of a half-million people.

Russia is getting a cold shoulder from the world's business leaders at the International Chamber of Commerce convention here. Not only has the subject of Soviet trading not come up for formal discussion, but every effort is being used by the European delegates to keep it from being talked about even informally. The American delegates, so far as the subject is concerned, seem to be passive. So do the French. This has brought about a condition where the world's attitude toward Soviet Russia will not be discussed at this convention. Certainly not if the pronounced objections of the German, Italian and British delegations prevail.

Figures revealing that Russia has regained world supremacy as a producer of wheat are expected to be released about May 20 by the United States Agriculture Department. It is said that Russian production for 1930 probably will be announced at 1,097,000,000 bushels more than was produced by the United States, wheat growing champion since Russia left the export picture during the war. The significance of the situation, market experts say, is that it might present to the international wheat conference in London on May 19 the question of re-allocating world wheat areas.

Salvador De Marriaga, the new ambassador whom the republican government of Spain will send to Washington, is an extraordinary brilliant man, a scholar, a diplomat, a witty writer. He writes English better than most writers to whom it is a native tongue. His book on "Disarmament," published in this country a couple of years ago, it is interesting and witty as if it were on some light topic, and at the same time it is the most penetrating analysis of why there is no such thing, after years of international conferences. And he is so versatile as to have been an educator and publicist in Spain and a newspaper writer in England on the London Times.

The tide of migration long headed toward the United States, continues now to flow in the opposite direction, following the new current set into motion last January, it was disclosed in an analysis made by the Commissioner General of Immigration. In March there were 1,100 more aliens leaving the United States than were admitted. For the first quarter of the year the outward movement carried away 13,810 emigrant aliens against 10,815 permanent admissions. For every four aliens departing to make their homes again in their native land, there were only three new comers admitted for permanent residence in the United States.

Declaring for prompt action for independence of the Philippines, Representative Lloyd Thurston, republican, of Iowa, a leading member of the House Committee on Insular Affairs and a member of the Rules Committee, gave out a statement in which he held the time had come to end American control of the island. Representative Thurston asserted that independence sentiment is growing in congress and he predicted an independence bill would pass the house two to one.

Preparations of the American Medical Association to demand that congress next winter "remove the humiliating, crippling restrictions imposed on the practice of medicine," under national prohibition, were announced by Dr. William Gerry Morgan, the association president, in an address to the annual meeting of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia. A special committee of the association, working in collaboration with the prohibition authorities, has developed a proposed amendment to the Volstead Act, Dr. Morgan said, which aims to give physicians much greater freedom in the use of alcoholic liquor in their profession, but apparently fails to wipe out all government regulation. The proposed legislation, which will meet the approval of the prohibition authorities, according to Dr. Morgan, is expected to be ready for publication about June 1.

Retiterating that the work of the National Commission on Law Observation and Enforcement must be carried on after the life of the commission ends June 30, George W. Wickersham told the American Law Institute the "great present menace to our civilization is widespread disrespect for law." The members of the institutes, meeting here this week also heard Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes recommend that "an adequate organization" be maintained in the Department of Justice for the collection and arrangement of crime statistics. The statistics published by the government were severely criticized in a report of the Wickersham Commission last month. Mr. Wickersham, who is president of the institute, said that group was the body qualified to carry on the work of the commission after June 30.

One of the most ambitious plans for arousing public sentiment among the young voters is that recently announced by Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican National Committee. The plan contemplates having in Washington on June 11 and 12 one young man and one young woman from each of the states, designated by the Republican National Committee members of the states, for a general two-day conference to discuss organization. Here would be an opportunity for the republican leaders to obtain a pretty good cross-section of the views of the youth of the country regarding certain issues which are likely to crop up in the coming campaign.

Business men who have been irritated beyond endurance by bores of various kinds and solicitors for this, that and the other, will appreciate the psychology of the hero of this story. He was one who had been thus annoyed. One day he had the misfortune to be bitten by a dog. Word got around that the dog was rabid, and many pestiferous acquaintances came trooping in to his office when they heard that he had gone right on to work after having had the injury treated. He tried to be patient and polite toward them, but it was hard work.

"Good gracious, man!" exclaimed the sixthteenth bore that morning, "you shouldn't be here at a hospital taking shots of hydrophobia serum." "Haven't time to go to a hospital yet—I've got some important writing to do," replied the victim. "Oh, I see. I suppose you are writing your will?" "No. I am making out a list of people I'm going to bite when I go mad."

NEW HEAD FOR ASYLUM

LAS VEGAS—Dr. A. B. Stewart of Raton was elected Tuesday, superintendent of the New Mexico asylum, succeeding Dr. H. M. Smith.

Judge H. A. Kiker of Raton was elected president of the board and George Herman of Las Vegas was made secretary-treasurer.

Other board selections were: Mrs. Gertrude Ladiere of Albuquerque, matron; Miss Adeline Ortiz, of Las Vegas, head nurse; Eugenio Sena, Las Vegas, supervisor. Governor Arthur Seligman recommended Tuesday to the new board of directors of the New Mexico insane asylum that the administrative duties of the institution be divorced from the medical duties.

The recommendation was made in a telephone conversation with members of the board who are meeting in Las Vegas and are expected to decide upon a business manager and a medical director. Heretofore the asylum has been headed by a superintendent who had charge of both administrative and medical departments.

Governor Seligman also recommended that a dietician should be added to the staff. The governor had a conference with the new regents in his office recently and discussed plans for bettering conditions at the asylum.

The young apprentice was whistling merrily. "Stop that!" shouted the foreman. "You mustn't whistle while at work." "Who's working?" queried the apprentice.

Gas Stove Kitchens Are COOL In Summer

No one ever enjoyed cooking over a stove that heats the kitchen like an oven. It may have been necessary once upon a time—but with Natural Gas it is needless drudgery. With a modern gas range you have the heat where it belongs under the cooking vessels. The Gas oven may be insulated, so that oven-cooking does not heat the kitchen, and whole meals are cooked in the oven at one time. Before you face the long summer, see the new model gas ranges at your appliance dealer's. They can be purchased on easy terms, and everyone can afford Natural Gas.

They returned late Saturday afternoon. TYPEWRITERS New Woodstocks, Coronas, and Remingtons, Rebuilt in all other makes at The Messenger.

DIGGING

Hard work means nothing to a hen. She just keeps on digging worms and laying eggs, regardless of what the business prognosticators say about the outlook for this or any other year. If the ground is hard, she just scratches harder. If its dry, she digs deeper. If its wet, she digs where its dry. If she strikes a rock, she digs around it. If she gets a few more hours of daylight, she gives us a few more eggs. But always she digs up worms and turns them into hard-shelled profits as well as tender, profit-able broilers. Did you ever see a pessimistic hen? Did you ever hear of one starving to death waiting for worms to dig themselves to the surface? Did you ever hear one cackle because work was hard? Not on your life. They save their breath for digging and their cackles for eggs. Success means digging. Are you?—Universal Engineer.

GAME FISH STAY AT HOME TAGGING TESTS DISCLOSE RECENTLY

Altho a world of travel may be open to him for the mere price of swimming, Mr. Trout is no gadabout. In fact, he is pretty much of a stay-at-home, to judge from tests made by the Wisconsin conservation department and reported to the American Game Association. Of a number of trout caught, tagged and returned to streams all were recaptured from one to several weeks later within a quarter of a mile from the original spot. Many of them had not moved at all from their favored bit of water. This was said to be the first of a series of experiments to determine the value of fish refuges similar to wild life refuges on land. The state already has many fish spawning sanctuaries, and recently established 96 more for trout, bass, pike and pickerel.

A. surprised the high school by bringing in a beautiful print for the study hall.

Age-Old Tradition

The ground hog superstition is the American descendant of a tradition ages old. Its foundation is the general truth that a mild February is apt to be followed by change and a chilly spring. Our pagan ancestors were more familiar with the habits of hibernating animals than they were with calendars, and the premature return of these creatures became a forecast of bad weather. The notion persisted in Christian times and attached itself to Candlemas day—February 2.

THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN

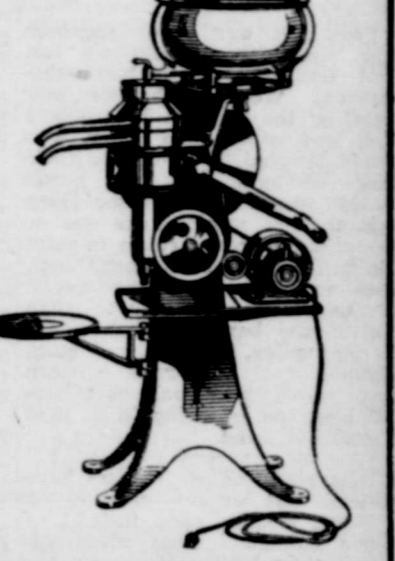

It represents Corot's Dance of the Nymphs. William Ohlenbusch told the school about the picture and the painter. The picture is a gift from the P. T. A. Mrs. Weston gave the picture and Capt. Weston had it framed. The last assembly of the year was one of unusual interest. It took the form of a closing day program for all grades below the seventh and eighth. Mrs. Beasley's little tots gave a thrift exercise; Mrs. Wilkins youngsters surprised and entertained all present with a little play they had composed and staged. It was really of unusual merit. Mrs. Spence had for her part a closing day program in an old-fashioned school. Rather it was the last rehearsal before the closing. Every number of this program was of unusual interest while the comments of the students in the pretending school were amusing in the extreme. The number was of unusual merit and both the play teacher and the real teacher have our congratulations.
