FARM INCOME DECLINES

WASHINGTON—Bureau of agricultural economics reported Monday cash income and government benefit payments of New Mexico farm production had declined from $37,406,000 in 1934 to $36,098,000 in 1935.

Most of the decrease is due to less cash income for livestock, but other income and payments also have declined slightly.

UNCONFESSED

By MARY HASTINGS BRADLEY

Then, for one unforgettable second, it seemed as if the dead had moved, and chill terror gripped us, but it was the soft, dark hair stirring in their air from the withdrawn sheet.

"Not worth it?" the man thundered. "She was worth the whole damned lot of you! I'd rather have her little finger than any woman's body. If I can't have her—"

His voice cracked, recovered. "I'll never get over her. And I'll take this out of the hide of every one of you. Out of you, you interloper," he shot at me, "looking in at windows, and out of you," and he thrust his mottled face toward Deck, "running after another man's wife, writing your damned rot to her beauty—"

He burst out. "She didn't want you. She was playing with you—trying to plague me. . . . You couldn't have held her for a week. . . . She was my girl, mine! And you leave me with her. Clear out, all of you. Leave me alone with her while I've got her. . . . Clear out. Clear out."

CHAPTER XV

WE WENT. Incomprehensible as it may seem, that terrible, that extraordinary scene ended with our streaming out of the room, like dismissed children. We left Harri- den alone with his dead.

The world seemed to go to pieces about me after that. I was as weak as a rag. The tears on my face were tears of tiredness. Unseeing- ly I blundered through the group at the head of the stairs; I heard a voice.

Harri- den's sake. Hard enough to know that his wife was in love with another but harder to know that she had been thrown aside, repudiated.

I said, "I did go in after the cat. But when I saw the case there, I opened it to look for those letters for you. He caught me at it."

His arm which had been lying along the top dropped about my shoulders with a quick caress. "You darling!"

"I didn't feel like a darling. I didn't know that I even wanted to be his darling. His arm dropped so readily about shoulders—it had about Letty Van Alstyn when he wanted her to coax Dan down from his room."

But his voice had taken on a new gravity. "I've never met any one like you, Lella Seton. I'd be a better man if I had. You're all loyalty, all courage. I told you you looked like a fair saint when I met you in that gallery, and I'm taking you as my saint. My bright saint."

Mitchell came out, carrying three tumblers of amber liquid on a tray. I saw his quick eyes taking us in, but if his expression changed, his voice was cheerfully unheeding.

"Here you are. Hot toddies. Sugar? Lemon?"

"I'm telling her what a wonderful girl she is," said Deck gaily.

Mitchell put the tray carefully on a little table before the sofa and sat down on the other side of me. "She's a thorough fool of a girl, to trail into that room after a cat—to open that case for your letters—for I suppose that she was looking for your letters? Knowing all the time how grave the evidence was against her. . . . A thorough-going fool," he insisted firmly, "but—an endearing one. I grant you that."

I smiled over the top of my glass at him. "Mercy, not justice, Your Honor?"

"I hope you never have to say Your Honor," he replied, soberly. Deck leaned forward, across me. "How do you think it stands, Monty? You've just been talking with those fellows. Is there enough of a case?"

"I'm Not So Sure It Wasn't Insan- ity," said Mitchell.

"To hold him—yes. To make it stick—no. Not unless something more turns up. Unless he makes more of an admission than he has done. . . . Lella, here, just did a brilliant bit of guesswork. It was overwhelming when she poured it all out—and it fits. But how much of it can be proved—"

He broke off, taking a drink. "About that scene at the window," he resumed. "Dan probably thinks Lella is prepared to swear to him now—but are you?" he asked of me suddenly.

I shook my head, perplexed. "I can swear to myself that I know it is so—but I couldn't swear to a court that I recognized him."

"But don't say that yet to Donah- ey," Monty counseled. "Our hope now is for some admission."

He went on to tell us that he had been working on estimates about that gruesome pool of blood, about the time it must have taken to form. He said, "That was why I was a little unexcited about Ranciel or Letty—I couldn't persuade myself that either of them had had time enough for that. Now you, Alan, when you were upstairs, had just a little more time—"

"Thanks for nothing," said Deck warily.

Grant came, bearing a silver tray with coffee pot and cups. Behind him was Graft with another tray of sandwiches.

"Splendid!" said Mitchell approv- ingly. "I'll pour the coffee. Lella, engulf this cheese sandwich. You look another girl already."

"The bacon sandwiches will be ready in a moment, Mr. Mitchell."

That food was marvelous. The bacon sandwiches, when they came, were crisp and appetizing. We all ate as if we were famished.

Mitchell went on to tell what else he had been working on—the time it took rust stains to form. The radi- ator had not been rusted; there had been tiny flecks in the paint on which the linen had touched un- stained metal; and for rust to form, in those conditions, required more time than the interval in which Deck had absented himself from the table.

"I've been pointing that out to Donah- ey all along," he said. "You couldn't have left the handkerchief and retrieved it afterwards for you weren't in Harri- den's room after- wards. Only on the threshold of Nora's. Your absence gave time for radiator marks but not for rust. And Lella found rust in her tests."

Deck raised his coffee cup. "To Lella—my salvation."

"Oh, you aren't saved yet," said Mitchell drily.

We talked about everything as it came into our minds; I remember asking about the crescent and its strange appearance in Anson's dead hand and Mitchell's saying "It was just one of those things. Those things that you think are going to be clues and turn out to be will of the wisps."

I know that Mitchell told us something he had found out, that Letty had been in the room with Nora after they had come up to dress. She had let that out when talking about the prints in the room. She had said, "Of course my prints are there. I was looking for Nora—and then I was in the room before—I went to dress. Just for a moment."

"What I think," Mitchell expound- ed, "is that she followed Nora up to find out what she could about the row that had been going on—her eyes wouldn't miss that. And I think she went away because Dan came in. I think Letty knew Dan was in it, somehow, all the time. But she sat tight."

"She would," Deck answered.

"When Dan prompted her for the cigarette case and feel of it, and have Clancy feel of it, he probably told her he was sure the diamond was hidden in it. She followed his lead all right, but when she saw how it worked out, when it came home to her just what the conse- quences were, when she heard him exulting over Deck's fate, then it all rather did for her for a moment. But only for a moment. Do our Letty that justice, Alan."

Deck nodded, unresentfully. "Oh, I could have fried in hell if that would have helped her get Dan."

Mitchell continued: "When Lella, here, brought out what Ranciel had been up to with Anson—"

I interrupted by asking Mitchell when he had first suspected Harri- den.

His dark eyes twinkled. "Hard to say, now. . . . Thought it was you, Alan, at the beginning, but I tried to keep an open mind. . . . The radiator marks puzzled me. But I didn't see my way till I saw that play about the cigarette case and examined the cigarettes, and even then I didn't suspect the beginning of it—the andiron, the dummy on the bed. I kept bothering over An- son's testimony."

They spoke of insanity as the de- fense. Mitchell thought it would end in mistrial. Deck conjectured that with all Harri- den's resources it would never come to trial.

"And I'm not so sure it wasn't insanity—the Anson part," said Mitchell. "No sane man would have choked that girl to death and put himself into such jeopardy over the little she had to tell. . . . Well, he may pull himself together and fight it out. You may be the one tried, after all. Don't lose hope, my lad."

We could banter about it. Reac- tion was strong in us. There comes a time when you are drained of horror, when in sheer self-preser- vation you revert to what is normal and gay.

We ate all the sandwiches; we drank all the coffee and we smoked innumerable cigarettes. Then Deck went to get himself another drink, and Monty Mitchell and I sat there, still talking.

He told me that he declined to take back a word about my fool- ishness, but that he forgave it for the sake of my courage. "You stood up there, facing him, and put that scene together as if you were seeing it!"

He had stood there, too. Beside me. Perhaps he was thinking of that, for he gave me a quick look and said, "By the way—how about that engagement of ours?"

"You were pretty sweet," I said. "Standing by." I realized that he had been beside me every moment in that house. I tried to say so.

"I'd like to take it on as a life job," he told me. And then, "I think I'm rather desperately in love with you, Lella Seton."

For a moment I just looked at him. His eyes, usually so gay with banter, held a bright, deep warmth.

"Am I too late?" he said, and it was strange to hear his voice sounding like that. "Is it Deck?"

I didn't say anything—I was too busy wondering at myself. For it was not Deck, the Alan Deck of my dreams, the man who had taken such possession of my sympathies. Deck was vivid, exciting, romantic—and he was ready. I felt instinctively, to play at love with me, to yield to a new glamor.

But I didn't want him. I was terribly sorry for him, for all the disillusion he had been through in his bitter passion for Nora Harri- den; I was fiercely protective for him against any danger he might be in through her death. I was ready to lie for him, to steal those letters—

But Deck, as a man, had grown unsubstantial. He had simply not been there. He had shielded him- self behind my explanations, he had been willing to use my sympathy on his behalf. He hadn't sprung to defend me as Mitchell had done; it hadn't been Deck who had crossed the room, before Harri- den's glaring eyes, to put his arm through mine. The comfort of that touch I would never forget. . . . Oh, Deck had been everything he ought to have been, but Mitchell had been so much more. And there was so much more to Mitchell.

I didn't think I liked handsome men any more, desperate reckless men who ran to you for sympathy. I was cured of them. I liked men with force and character and steadiness, with bantering gaiety and dark, quizzical eyes.

So I shook my head violently about Deck.

"You mean that?" Mitchell's voice leaped out at me, almost incredulously. "He's such a taking devil! Lella—"

I checked myself; he didn't touch me or make any speeches. He just said quietly, "Don't be—grateful—or anything like that. But—if you could manage to—to learn to love me—"

"I do. I do now," I told him as assuredly as if I hadn't just found it out an instant before. I am stupid about words; I couldn't say anything of what I felt to him. I only sat there, breathless, looking at him, feeling my own happiness and his. . . .

And then Deck came back, his glass in his hand. "Here's a toast—we'll make it a loving cup," he cried and caught me by the hand, drawing me beside him. "To Lella—who loves a lawyer!"

The glass in Deck's hand was motionless. He looked at me. "No foolin'?"

I looked at him. "No foolin'."

Deck put the glass to his lips. He took a long drink. "Well, I'm glad for you, Monty, old chap, and I'm damn sorry for myself. . . . It's the hell of a world."

It was in the silence following that pronouncement that we heard the shot. The shot that Dan Harri- den had fired into his temple as he leaned over his wife's body, the shot that he would rather meet than the courtroom with its pub- licity and scandal—the shot that was the only confession he ever made.

"Go-to-School" Knits and Prints

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DING-DONG goes the bell that sounds the knell of vacation as it rings in "first day of school." And again dotting mothers are confronted with the problem of planning practical and as attractive as practical school wardrobes for the children of the household, for as every mother knows much of the poise and happiness of little girls in the classroom depends upon the feeling of self confidence which a pretty frock inspires.

To help in this matter of apparel- ing little daughter to a nicely here are two suggestions we have to offer—knits and prints. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say crochets as well as knits for as much crocheting is being done these days as knitting. Simply a matter of choice. To emphasize the vogue for crochets and prints we are showing three as cunning classroom outfits as ever a fond mother might hope to include in a little girl's clothes collection.

See little Miss Twelve posing to the left in the picture arrayed in an ensemble that couldn't be prettier if it tried. It is crocheted in two shades of blue knit-croch- een. For the encouragement of would-be crocheters who feel the urge to copy this most attractive outfit we are telling you that the stitch is very simple and goes like lightning when once you get started. The skirt has goes of the lighter blue and the blouse hidden by the scarf is in matching light blue. It has a stylish high neck that closes with a drawstring. There are crocheted buttons to add glamor to the occasion. The cutey-cute bag, the scarf and the hat are crocheted to match.

In a many-piece crocheted outfit as just described, the practical side of the question is self-evident. The blouse, the skirt and the jacket may be worn separately, which means that any number of changes are possible, being just what is a most needful virtue for school togs.

The simplicity and practicality of the blouse-and-skirt two-piece of the left is a big argument in its favor. This crocheted suit for the grammar school Miss is a real find when it comes to appropriate dress for play or for classroom. The blouse contrasts the dark skirt which is in keeping with the pre- stitute trend to bring out striking color effects. The wide sailor collar provides a nautical touch. The gay tassel tie gives a final flourish to this most attractive back-to-school dress which is so easily crocheted or mercerized knitting and crochet cotton. We most forget to mention the crowning glory of these crocheted garments — they wash perfectly and with as little trouble as a gingham, a pique or any wash fabric.

Picture for yourself little daughter clad in a cunning print such as the little girl centered in the picture is wearing. The grand thing about dresses made of the new prints this season is that it is perfectly safe to buy the correct size for no longer does one have to allow for shrinkage. That is, if the fabric is one of the newer prints that are sanforized shrunk. It means a great deal to know that little daughter's gay print frock will not shrink out of fit in tubbing.

In the washgoods sections one finds the cunningest classroom prints imaginable such as fashions the little girl's dress which is pic- tured above.

SQUIRREL IN VOGUE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A pleasing topic of conversation among fur stylists and one that is creating no-end enthusiasm, is in regard to the revival of the ever beloved youthful-looking and won- derfully flattering gray squirrel. When you go fur-coat shopping keep this in mind and look for the charming squirrel models that are making so welcome a re-appear- ance. Perfect for sports and for more formal wear also, is the stun- ning double-duty coat pictured. It brings back squirrel worked in the striking new split skin fashion.

ALIX SCULPTURES CLOTHES TO FIGURE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Outstanding among silhouettes for fall are those drawn by Alix. Her dresses are fashioned to dis- play every curve of a rounded, feminine form through masterly manipulation and drapery of soft, clinging fabric. This season, as last, her favorite is jersey, both silk and rayon.

Some of her skirts are so full and flaring that they resemble lamp- shades or parachutes, while others are caught under the hem like Turkish trousers. Fall coats are cut with a swirling flare.

Evening clothes, particularly, would delight an ancient Greek sculptor. Fullness is concentrated in groups of folds or gathers di- rectly in front or back, not obscur- ing, but rather emphasizing, lovely curving outlines.

Borders of four or five bright colors emphasize the flare at the hem of many evening dresses.

Luxury and Elegance to Dominate Fall Costumes

Elegance and luxury will domi- nate the mode this autumn if the costumes already appearing are any criterion. Magnificent fabrics, beautifully cut on exquisite lines, is the recipe for late afternoon and in- formal and formal evening clothes. Typical of this trend is a white din- ner ensemble with a long slim skirt of white and silver blistered crepe and a simple surplice bodice of plain silver metal cloth. The shoul- ders, with double puffs and the tai- lored lapel collar, are smart notes on the short jacket that is fitted in back and open in front.

Motorist's Buttons

Among the novelty buttons that have made their appearance are those that carry the various road signs for motorists.

France to Spend Vast Sum for Military Defense

FRANCE'S government has decided that conditions in Europe are so threatening that it must spend a huge sum for national defense. So it adopted a program for increasing the efficiency of the army which will cost $930,000,000 in the next four years. The proposal was made by Edouard Daladier, minister of defense. The first installment of $280,000,000 will be disbursed in 1937.

High Labor Costs Drive Big Concern From New York

BECAUSE labor costs in New York city are too high, the Charles Schwinler Press, largest magazine printing house there, has decided to close the plant in which it employs 1,000 men and women and move where costs are lower. Roosevelt and Landon Confer on Drouth

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT and Alf M. Landon, rival candidates for the Presidency, met in somewhat dramatic fashion in Des Moines, Iowa; but they met as chief executives of the United States and of Kansas respectively for the purpose of discussing plans for the relief of drouth stricken farmers. The conference, held at Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion and including the governors of the other states that had suffered especially from the drouth, began in the state house in Des Moines, where Governor Herring entertained the distinguished visitors at a luncheon. The President and Mr. Landon, it was said, did most of the talking at this repast and exchanged a lot of joking remarks. Then the conference was started in earnest, each state being taken up in turn.

Relief Work Will Be Continued for Farmers

IN HIS radio talk the President asserted every governor with whom he had talked on his trip to the drouth area gave approval to his policy of providing federal work relief for the distressed farmers on projects that will protect their crops in the future. This policy, he said, would be continued. He did not give specific details of the drouth relief plan, which will be based on the report of the President's drouth study committee.

FLOYD GIBBONS ADVENTURERS CLUB

Hello Everybody

"The Thing in the Dark"

By FLOYD GIBBONS

ARE you all set for the housewarming party? Well, let me warn you in advance that this is going to be about the loneliest housewarming party you ever saw.

As a matter of fact, it's a one-man housewarming or maybe I should say a one-boy housewarming. The boy was Arland L. Gray, of Trenton, N. J. I say "was" because Arland has grown up in the meantime. This one-boy party I'm going to tell you about was thrown on the night of January 19, 1912.

As a housewarming, it was a terrible flop. It not only didn't warm the house any, but it cooled the boy off considerably by the chills-up-and-down-the-spine system. As an adventure, though, it was a whooping success—and well worth that check for ten bucks that I'm sending Arland right now.

In the spring of 1910 Arland's mother and dad moved from Catskill, N. Y., to Orlando, Fla. That was in the days before the Florida boom, and Orlando was just a sleepy little country town.

Arland Decides to Do a Solo House Warming Act.

Arland's dad bought a piece of partly cleared ground about three miles out of town and started to build a house on it. That's where the housewarming part of it came in.

Arland was just eight years old then—and you know how kids sometimes get funny ideas. Arland somehow or other got it into his head that he wanted to be the first one to sleep in the new home. The house wasn't finished yet. The sides were up and the roof was on, but there were no sashes in the windows, and none of the floors had been laid. But just the same young Arland began pestering his folks to let him go out there and spend the night.

His ma didn't like the idea. She said an eight-year-old boy had no business sleeping in an unfinished house half a mile away from the nearest neighbor. But his dad said it wouldn't hurt him to spend a night alone, and finally his mother gave her consent, too. Arland took a blanket, his .22 rifle and his dog, and off he went, headed for the house on the outskirts of the town.

Strange Animal Terrifies Lonesome Boy.

Darkness had fallen before he got there. It was a warm, tropical night, and the late moon had not yet risen. Arland crept into the building, walking carefully on the uncovered beams of the ground floor. He thattered together some loose boards and lay them across the beams under a low window. Then he spread his blanket and lay down with his head beside him.

The bare boards were hard. Arland's makeshift bed was uncomfortable. It was a long time before he managed to get to sleep, and when he did he slept fitfully. He awoke again, hours later, with the strange feeling that something was wrong.

The moon had risen but it was behind a cloud bank. But what was that queer, crunching noise that sounded so close to his ear? As he came wider awake he realized with a sickening feeling in the pit of his stomach that some sort of animal was standing over him.

Dog Whines With Terror Over Strange Visitation.

Arland lay still. He didn't dare move—couldn't if he'd wanted to, for his whole body had gone stiff with fear. Over in a corner he could hear his dog growling and whimpering. The dog had crawled away as far as he could—was cowering on the far side of the room, whining with a terror that was as great as Arland's own.

"I have no idea how long I lay there," Arland says. "It seemed like hours, but it might have been only a few minutes. The beast—the thing—whatever it was—seemed to be standing right over me. I could feel its hot, fetid breath on my face—hear the regular crunch—crunch—crunch of its moving jaws.

Every now and then a splash of slimy froth would fall on me. I had a wild impulse to get up—to run out of that house as fast as I could go. Then I remembered that I couldn't run—that if I moved at all I would have to go slowly, picking my way over the bare joists. I didn't even have a floor under me."

Intruder Turns Out to Be Broken-Down Nag.

Thought of the uncovered floor gave Arland another idea. If he could roll from the boards on which he was lying he could fall through between the joists and land safely on the ground only a couple feet below. He had just about decided on that course of action when he remembered something else. His .22 rifle! He began moving his hand cautiously toward it. Inch by inch his hand crept toward that rifle.

His groping fingers found it at last. With his thumb he cocked the hammer. It gave out a resounding click and that startled the beast. In the dim light he could see its huge, blurry head raise—stay poised—motionless—as if it were listening. Arland moved the gun around silently. At length he had its muzzle pointed at the beast's head. His finger tightened on the trigger.

And then, suddenly, the moon came out from behind the clouds. Bright yellow light streamed into the house, and in its glow Arland saw, thrust through the window above him the pointed ears and the long narrow head of—an old horse!

The rifle was never fired. The moon had come out just in time to save that poor old nag's life. "And just in time, too," says Arland. "to save me from heart failure. I spent the rest of the night in the middle of the floor far from any window, and it was a very sleepy and very chastened little boy who trailed along home the next morning as soon as it was light."

Bulldog, "Sour-Mug," Has Changed From Old Habits

Probably the most pugnacious appearing, but one of the most amiable members of the dog family is the bulldog. He is the dour looking fellow with the mashed-in face, the wrinkled brow, bowed front legs and the pronounced turned-up lower jaw.

Because of the bulldog's expression he has been nicknamed the "sour-mug," observes a writer in the Philadelphia Inquirer. In reviewing the history of this breed it is noticed the dog has changed from a tugging, vicious baiter of bulls to one that is peace-loving, a perfect companion and intelligent despite his facial contour.

This dog's past was one of a dark shade. In fact, there was a time in England when bulldogs appeared headed for oblivion. Early in the 17th century the barbarous "sport" of bull baiting, a test of endurance between a dog and a bull, was frowned upon by folks possessing kindness to dumb animals.

Bulldogs used for this cruel practice were naturally more massive than those of the later type. The gallery of "sportsmen" gathered in a veritable "arena" to watch a bulldog grab the bull by the nose. It was a tugging battle to the death for either animal.

The dogs were trained to hang on to their "prey," to tug and pull until the bull would fall to the earth exhausted. Invariably, the dog was gored in this bloody one-sided battle. There were exceptions when the bulldog triumphed, and money changed hands.

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JERRY MUSKRAT had about decided that Farmer Brown's Boy wasn't coming back when he heard footsteps and a moment later Farmer Brown's Boy appeared coming down the Laughing Brook toward the Smiling Pool. Jerry remained hidden where he could not be seen, but where he himself could see all that went on around the Smiling Pool.

In one hand Farmer Brown's Boy carried a bunch of things that clanked as he walked. Jerry knew what they were. He would know those things as far as he could see them. They were steel traps. Jerry scowled as he saw them. The sound of them hitting together sent little cold shivers over him. They were dreadful things, even more dreadful than terrible guns. There was nothing to fear from the latter save when they were in the hands of hunters, and any one with his wits about him ought to be able to see a hunter in time to seek safety.

But these dreadful traps were left hidden in the very places where a fellow had the right to feel safest, ready to seize him in cruel steel jaws and hold him to suffer pain and dreadful fright for hours and hours, sometimes for days. Jerry could think of nothing so dreadful as those steel traps, and so he shivered at the sight of them.

Farmer Brown's Boy threw the traps down on the bank of the Smiling Pool. His usually sunny face was clouded. From his pocket he took a piece of paper and a pencil. Then he sat down and began to write. When he had finished he went over to Jerry's favorite log and thrust a stick in the bank just above it. The top of the stick was split, and in this he slipped the piece of paper. Then he went back, gathered up the traps, slung them over his shoulder and tramped off in the direction of home.

All the rest of that day Jerry kept an eye on that piece of paper at the end of his favorite old log. He didn't dare to. He was suspicious of it. It might be some new kind of trap. Jerry was very unhappy. Early the next morning Jerry heard some one coming down the Laughing Brook. He promptly hid where he could watch. In a few minutes the stranger whom he had one time thought his friend appeared, and it was plain to be seen that he was very angry. He was muttering as he strode along. Almost at once he saw the piece of paper left by Farmer Brown's Boy. He strode over to it, picked it up, and read it. This is what was on it:

"No trapping or hunting is allowed on this property. You, whoever you are, can get your traps at Farmer Brown's house."

The trapper turned and shook his fist in the direction of Farmer Brown's. Then, still muttering, he walked away hurriedly, but not in the direction of Farmer Brown's. Jerry didn't understand it at all but for some unknown reason he felt better.

The longer he attempts to tie the knot the more hopeless his task will come. Eventually, he will challenge you to perform the trick, whereupon you oblige.

Stretch the handkerchief and lay it on a table. Fold your arms, bend forward and grasp one end of the handkerchief between the fingers of your left hand; then shift and gain the other end with the fingers of your right.

Unfold your arms, holding the ends of the handkerchief as you do so. A knot forms automatically in the center of the cloth.

CULINARY THOUGHTS

IT IS just a matter of taste, of course, the kinds of foods we like; tomatoes we all admit are one of our choice vegetables, rich in vitamins and adding attractiveness to any dish by their rich color, but are we not overdoing the tomato sauce business? It is served over all kinds of meat, fish and fowl, as spanish rice, pilaf, creole sauce goulash, hungarian, and otherwise, until the sight of tomato on spaghetti, macaroni and noodles makes us wish we could get back for a while at least to the days of our grandmothers when the tomato was simply an ornament and considered poisonous to eat.

We have too many mixtures in our diets. A sliced ripe tomato served fresh and natural is a thing of beauty and a joy forever, but when we put it into all sorts of mixtures they become a mess. A few such dishes once in a great while might be really enjoyed, but served too often we lose all respect for the delightful vegetable.

Recently on the bill of fare in a famous restaurant we ordered "Old-fashioned Beef Stew." There were visions of brown juicy meat with the accompanying brown gravy, but when it appeared there were

Lesson for September 20 CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12:1-3, 9-12. GOLDEN TEXT—Christ liveth in me.—Galatians 2:20. PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants His Friends to Act. JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Explains How to Act. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What is Christian Living? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live as a Christian.

As a fitting conclusion to a three-month study of the spread of Christianity to the gentile peoples of Western Asia, we consider the teaching of the great apostle to the gentiles concerning "Christian Living." The early chapters of Paul's epistle to the Romans present the greatest exposition of profound Christian doctrine ever written. But even as it is true that the fruit of Christian living can grow only on the tree of Christian doctrine, it is equally true that the knowledge of Christian truth should result in Christian living. "Faith without works is dead."

Our lesson pointedly presents the true Christian life as being I. A Life Yielded to God (Rom. 12:1-3). A recognition and deep appreciation of the mercies of God leads to a yielding of body and mind in living sacrifice to God. If we are Christians our bodies are the temples of the Holy Spirit. We must not lend our bodies to activities which destroy their usefulness or hinder our service for God but rather yield the body with all its abilities to God!

But after all "it is the inside of a man that counts." The presenting of the body in living sacrifice is possible only when there has been the inner transformation by the renewing of the mind. One cannot live physically without being born; it is equally impossible to live a Christian life without having been born again.

The Christian life is yielded to God not only for its own peace and satisfaction, but it is to be II. A Life of Service (vv. 9-15). We are not saved by serving but we are saved to serve.

In the first place the Christian serves the Lord. He abhors evil, but his life is not merely negative, for he cleaves to that which is good. He is not lazy, but diligent. His spirit is aglow with zeal for God and his cause. He is full of joy and hope, patient under trials, a man of steadfastness in prayer.

Such a man will not fail to serve his fellow-man. He will really love the brethren, not merely make a hypocritical show of loving them. He will seek the honor of others rather than his own glory. He will be given to the almost lost art of hospitality. He will be ready to stand by his brother, in the day of joy or of sorrow. He will go even further, for he will bless those that persecute him. The measure is not yet full for we note next that the Christian lives III. A Life of Humility (v. 16).

In these days when we are urged to assert ourselves, to demand our rights, to "succeed" at any cost, and when men are measured by their worldly achievements, it sounds rather old-fashioned to talk about humility, about condescending to lowly things, of not being "wise in our own conceits." But humility is still the crowning grace of a truly Christian life. Those who follow the lowly Jesus, in fact as well as in profession, are still strongest when they are weak, and mightiest for God when they are humble.

Note also that we follow a victorious Christ who calls us to IV. A Life of Victory (vv. 17-21). It is possible to talk much about the victorious life—to discuss it at length as a theological question—and have little real victory.

Paul speaks plainly. The Christian is honorable in all things. He meets every obligation. He is a man of peace. He is not concerned with avenging himself upon one who has done him wrong. Spite, quarrels, boundary disputes, family quarrels, are not for him. Evil is not to overcome him. God gives the victory.

A great lesson, and one that we cannot study without some disquieting thought. Christian, how does your life and mine appear as they are held up to the mirror of God's Word? Let us make a covenant that by God's grace and power we shall go forward in real "Christian living."

On Being Just Whatever is unjust is contrary to the divine will; and from this it follows that no true and abiding happiness can be gained by those who are unjust.—Stretch.

Shirtwaister for School Girl

1959-B.

Here is the frock for juniors to make for school days. A combination of rhythm in its hemline, rhyme in its color scheme and racy in its style. For late summer wear, try tub silk, linen, cotton or shantung with long or short sleeves. For autumn and winter—"tweedy" silk crepe or broad-cloth.

The waist, gathered slightly to the shoulder yoke front and back,

To clean glass in oven doors rub over with vinegar then wash with soap and water.

A damp cloth dipped in baking soda will remove tea and coffee stains from china cups.

Never prune climbing roses in the fall. Cut out all dead canes but wait until next spring before cutting out dead shoots.

In pressing never put an iron on the right side of any goods except cotton. Always lay a cloth between the iron and the goods.

If the soil in which bulbs are to be planted is acid, work hydrated lime into the top soil two weeks before planting.

Pull out old stalks in your vegetable garden as soon as the crop has been picked. This will make the cleaning up of the garden later much easier.

If a thick cloth is placed at the bottom of a pan or bowl in which delicate china or glass is being washed the danger of chipping will be lessened. This will also prevent silver from being scratched.

Woodwork which has to be painted should be well smeared with lime water, which can be obtained at any druggist's. Let dry and then paint. The paint will dry in half the time. Put the brush in water when you have finished. It will be quite soft for next day.

DEXTER WOMAN'S CLUB OPENING MEETING

Beautiful with fall flowers for decorations, the Lake Van club house made a lovely, impressive setting for the opening meeting of the Dexter Woman's club last Thursday, September 10th.

After routine business and roll call, the president, Mrs. L. Parker, made a short but appropriate address, her main objectives being: to assist the Junior Woman's club, recently organized, and to cooperate with the state beautification committee in making our state and community more beautiful. She also stressed the beautifying of Dexter's little park.

Midshipman Donald Mehlhop was introduced and spoke on his recent travels in Europe and life in general at the U. S. Naval Academy.

The surprise package was a clever mock trial. This was staged by the composer, Mrs. L. Parker. She was assisted by Mmes. Ira Marshall, George Wilcox, Loman Wiley and Bob McNeil. The defendants in the case were Mrs. E. J. Hubbard and Mrs. F. L. Mehlhop, both were convicted of the charges. The charge brought against Mrs. Mehlhop was for having set a precedent during her two years as president, that is hard for her successors to follow, namely: hard work, generous contributions and leadership in furnishing the club house. The penalty was a gift of a beautiful Indian bar pin. This proved to be a real surprise package for Mrs. Mehlhop.

The special guests for the day were the teachers from the Dexter school. Miss Rosamond Deen, junior club sponsor, was introduced and graciously responded. Season refreshments of sandwiches and punch were served to about forty-five members and guests. Later the assembly made a tour and inspected the newly remodeled kitchen, cloakroom and bathroom.

The next meeting will be held on October 1st, and it is hoped that all members will have their dues paid before that time, so their names will be in the year book. Hostesses for this delightful occasion were Mmes. Bob McNeil, Loman Wiley and George Wilcox.

L. C. CLUB MEETS

The L. C. club met at the home of Mrs. W. L. Heitman last Thursday. The meeting being opened by the president, Mrs. E. D. Menoud, in the usual manner. Roll call was answered by reminiscences of early school days. Finishing of the quilt was also discussed.

Following the short business session three games were played, the last being a guessing game at which Miss Ruth Wiggins won the prize.

Delicious refreshments of ice cream, wafers, and iced tea were served to the following members: Mmes. J. W. Wiggins, Jim Sanders, Marion Woody, Fred Evans, A. M. Ehret, E. D. Menoud, Earl Stine, J. F. Bauslin, C. O. Holloway, W. R. Jacobs, Lester Hinrichsen, W. E. Utterback, I. E. Boyce, A. M. Hedges, Willis Pardee, E. G. Lathrop, and the hostess, Mrs. Heitman and five guests, Mmes. Harry Cowan, Jerry Conklin, G. E. Wimberly and little Grady E. Wimberly, Jr., and Miss Ruth Wiggins.

The total cost of the Carlsbad school district for the second week was $137 over the budget for the period of last year. The district for the following oil schools, it was estimated, would be $1,000 over the budget.

The Buel car, a model A Ford coupe, was stopped on the edge of the pavement with the dimmers on. Lights could be seen both from the front and rear of the car. Buel was found lying about eight feet in front of his own car. He had been knocked about fifteen feet, Dwight Lee, sheriff, said. Evidence was also found where the truck driver had attempted to throw on his brakes. The Buel car had been knocked off of the jack and had apparently rolled three or four feet.—Artesia Advocate.

said Monday.

The meeting will be in conjunction with the meeting of the southeastern New Mexico Grazing association, district No. 6, to be held in Roswell September 25th. All stockmen including those of districts No. 4, 5 and 6, are being urged to attend, Stablein said.

Have YOU Been Fooled

The answer to that question should determine how you will vote on November 3. Only by answering it fairly in their own minds can the people of New Mexico decide intelligently whether a change in state administration is desirable for their own best interest. Partisan sentiment or affiliation must not influence the people's decision, if they are to do full justice to themselves by reaching a sound conclusion, and a proper determination of how they will cast their ballots.

The Republican party in New Mexico and many Democrats—those who retain their regard for true Democratic principles—believe

The Tingley Administration Has Deluded and Deceived the People

In proof of that charge let the record speak for itself. Compare the 1934 platform and promises of the Tingley candidates with their actual performances—and remember it is virtually the same group that seeks re-election on November 3. Here is some of the record:

PROMISE—	PERFORMANCE—
Strict economy and no increase in cost of government or of the tax burden in the state. Continuance of Seligman financial policy.	Highest appropriation of all time by the legislature. Largest public payroll and increase in bureaus and boards in New Mexico history.
"In order that the highest reputation and general standing of our Courts shall be maintained we favor a non-partisan judiciary."	Killed non-partisan judiciary bills in legislature and have placed a "reprimanded" preme Court Justice, tried for juggling funds, on the ticket for re-election.
"In order to remove all appointive boards and commissions, as far as possible, from the influence of politics, we recommend that in the future a policy of continuation of such boards and commissions for the entire terms of appointment as designated and prescribed by legislative action shall be adhered to."	Tingley disregarded the promise by appointing the Child Welfare bureau, putting in boards at State College and the State American Normal school and ousting for political reasons well-qualified, efficient and well-schooled department heads who would help to build the Tingley political machine.
"We declare for the fullest and most unrestricted expression of political preferences in election at all times WITHOUT INTIMIDATION OR COERCION."	No other administration in New Mexico approached the "vote right or starve" employed by Tingley in all state departments in state and federal relief, both direct work. Full proof of this will be given in the campaign.
"In appreciation of the fact that the Democratic party has throughout its entire existence continuously aided those engaged in the occupations and activities commonly classed as labor, we pledge ourselves to strengthen our present labor laws."	The Tingley-controlled legislature killed the bill or amendment offered in fulfillment of this promise. Not one piece of labor legislation was passed and the state labor commissioner who sought to have the pledge kept, was fired for his honesty by Tingley.

That is only part of the Record. More will be published later. Watch your paper for it!
