Weather is Fine and All Signs Point to a Most Auspicious and Successful Entertainment---Fair Will Continue Through Friday and Saturday.

The Fair is on. Beginning this morning and continuing through Saturday Brady will wear her holiday attire and the town will be crowded with people here to see the fair.

An all-day rain Monday caused much anxiety, and it looked for awhile as if the fates had conspired with the weather man to put a damper on the fair. At a board meeting Monday afternoon it was decided to move the dates up one day, starting the fair on Thursday instead of Wednesday, and the announcement was accordingly so made.

This was a wise decision, as the clouds dispersed Tuesday night and the sun came out yesterday and everything assumed its usual course. The race track will be all right by this afternoon, and the wetting it received will really be an advantage. Men and teams have been at work getting it in shape, and it will be a faster track than if it had not rained.

A visit to the grounds yesterday showed a small army at work getting things in shape. The big exhibit tent was in place and the exhibits were being placed. Privilege Row was busy already arriving. ### They Were Decked With Lace and Bows of Ribbon. A FASHION OF OTHER DAYS.

THE MUFFS MEN WORE

Their Use Was Quite Common, Too, and Not Confined to Fops and Dandies-Double Muffs Were Once In Vogue-Extremes of Style In Sizes.

At least so the legend goes. It classic shade found the air of orld so beastly cold when he reascended to earth after his death that his hands were almost frozen.

Consequently it was decreed that the slayer of the poor young gentleman should kill enough sables-evidently sables were appreciated even in those due to the treacherous footing and the early days-to make a covering for the frosted fingers. He did it, and that was the origin of the muff.

Even if one is not prepared to ac cept this account of the first muff as authoritative there is one thing that is certain. / It is only in very modern times that muffs have been the exclu sive property of women. Up to the third quarter of the eighteenth cenmen were quite as_addicted to men were.

In the wardrobe accounts of Henry, prince of Wales, for 1608 the prices of two muffs are set down. The most expensive cost i7, a very big sum in those days, and is described as being made of cloth of silver wrought with purls, plates and Venice twists of silver and gold. The other was a comparatively plain one of black satin embroidered with black silk, and its price was proportionately less, only 60 shil-

At the time of Charles I and Charles there was a curious fashion of doumuffs, a small one for each hand, comething like a big loose cuff. The single or ordinary muffs carried by the English ladies of Hollar's etchings are of medium size and made entirely of smooth fur, arranged, as a rule, with the hair running round the muff.

At the extreme end of the century after the advent of William of Orange men's muffs were still small and were generally suspended from a ribbon round the neck, but in 1703 it seems to have been more usual to loop the muff to a coat button. There is a widely prevalent idea, I think, that masculine iff wearers invariably belonged to the dandy class-the fops, beaus and nacaronies-but this was not actually the case, although the fashion was certainly scoffed at by some contempo-ary writers Staid and elderly gentlemen carried nuffs habitually. For instance, Dr. carried it even when officiating at the her. cathedral services. Englishmen, how-

THE SEA ELEPHANT.

His Fearful Jaws the Chief Danger In an Attack

The chief danger attending the killof the sea elephant is in approach ing too near his terrible jaws, which capable of biting in two an iron rod the thickness of one's finger. The hunter, however, must get pretty close as the thick hide and blubber have rendered the animal practically impervious to attack, the only vulnerable point being a spot about the size of a walnut above each eye. Careless huntthe brute's teeth and have escaped only by dexterously wriggling from their clothes. I had occasion once to shed my coat with great agility, one of the smaller beasts having caught me by the sleeve, says Captain B. D. Cleveland in the American Magazine.

One afternoon's kill had been about forty animals, some of which had given me and my four hunters considerable trouble. This was mainly heavy nature of the work, not only in killing, but in stripping the ponderous brutes. We were anxious to make the afternoon's kill an even fifty, and night was fast coming on.

In cutting out two particularly hard fighters, a male and female, I had overlooked a young bull partly hidden behind an ice hummock. We had stripped both animals and, walking over to the hummock where our guns were stacked, I was leaning to pick mine up when, with a bellow of rage, the oung bull reared and whipped his fiail-like flippers at me. Luckily the guns were stacked so as to form a tem porary barrier, but unluckily one thick aw was impaled on a bayonet. Rearing in fresh rage, the animal lunged at me with incredible speed, snapping the gun between his javelin teeth as though it were a straw. I leaped backward, but slipped.

Instantly he clutched at my body, but missed in the semidarkness, lunged and clutched again, catching my right arm in his powerful maw. His awkwardness enabled me to regain my feet, but, with a ripping tug, the animal fastened on to the sleeve of my heavy skin jacket, out of which I slipped just as one of my men drove a arpoon into him just above the eye.

the eighteenth century, but contented bows, adornments quite sufficiently effeminate, one would think.

Muffs, both ladies' and gentlemen's, varied much in size at different times from the reign of Queen Anne onward.

In 1710 they were very tiny, but grew somewhat larger during the following couple of decades. In 1740, however, they had decreased again, and a little" gentle, "Oh, soldiers, don't hurt them!" later Horace Walpole writes of sending George Montagu "a decent small ish muff that you may put in your pocket, and it cost but 14 shillings." But by 1760 both sexes were carrying such capacious muffs that pet dogs were often concealed in their warm recesses. About this time, by the way, muffs made of feathers were introduced by reason, it is said, of an unusual scarcity of furs in the market. In 1786 ladies' muffs-men, except such eccentric fogies as Dean Tucker, had by this time given up wearing such things-were decidedly diminutive. However, at the beginning of the nineteenth century they were again of monster proportions and so continued for about thirty years.

Two muffs of the year 1800 shown in a fashion plate of that year are of long, shaggy fur, and in the print one is colored yellow and has a bow of purple ribbon in the center, while the other is deep brown and has no trimming. Another huge muff of rough. dark fur is shown in a set of fashion plates for 1803.

A few years nearer our own time the modish muff was large, flat and' so widely open at the ends that it could have afforded but scanty protection to the wrists. One example was made of ermine, a fur which was in high favor from this time up to the mid-Victorian period.-London Queen.

Buried Treasures In Morocco.

In Morocco it is customary for a man to bury most of his riches in a place known only to himself. This cus tom is practiced by all Moors, for they cannot trust their own family, who would murder them directly if it were known where the money was. At the death of the head of a family in Mo rocco digging operations commence at once, but seldom is the money discovered. There must be many fortunes buried away in odd corners of the country. An instance came under the writer's notice at one of the coast owns. During the demolition of a nouse a considerable sum of money

Department Agriculture, Addresses

Farmers Meeting Saturday.

About forty or fifty farmers were at the courthouse Saturday to hear Mr. J. L. Quicksall, of Waco, speak on the subject of intensive farming and the work of the State Agricultural Department in promoting demontration work over the state.

Probably the most disappointgave over a page to showing ing thing in connection with the meeting was the statement of Mr. Quicksall that there would be no possible chance to get a demonstration farm started in McCulloch county soon, as the appropriation for the work had all been taken up for this year. He thought, however, that by another year if this county is awake to her opportunities and will make the proper application in time the department will be able to undertake the work here. Mr. Quicksall's talk was along lines of diversification and intensive farming. He called attention to the fact that this section of Texas was devoted too much to extensive farming and paying. too little attention to the proper methods of soil culture, the selec tion of seed and the principles of diversification. He stated that he had been warned not to devote too much time to corn, as corn was not a safe crop here and it would be a waste of time. This, In fifteen minutes plucky he said, was a mistaken idea, and ittle Brady raised $50,000 of the he then proceeded to talk corn; To me has been assigned the Santa Fe. The Santa Fe is also the matter of corn culture before

We are determined, by sensational price making, to make business hum and swell this month's sales over any previous October by several thousand dollars. We have had urgent request to continue the low prices which have been raging during the first twenty days of this month, which has been lower than our competitors. We will continue to sell first-class goods cheaper than you can buy elsewhere in Brady for ten days only. So come right on and don't be decoyed and we will double any previous October. Remember, our second shipment of Mill Ends is in, and we can duplicate prices found in our large circulars.
