Hints and suggestions of benefit to poultrymen will be appreciated by the editor of The Brady Standard at any time, and will be included in these columns.

To begin a short column on Poultry to be edited by and for The McCulloch County Poultry Association, I would first attempt to discuss a few points of common interest: "Pure Breeds, a Profitable Business' and "System of Breeding."

As I size up the situation, the most difficult thing to persuade the average farmer to do is to make a start with better poultry-namely, to get him to exchange his scrubs and dunghills for pure-bred stuff. One of the dullest tools on the average farm or town lot today is this same dung-hill poultry. No sane or thinking person in any walk of life would think of going into fruit growing or producing with an orchard of, say, apple seedling trees. The matter of varieties or improved varieties would be his first thought. So it should be with his chickens. It is not quite as easy as it may seem for a farmer to get the kind of pure bred poultry that he wants and needs. Much poultry breeding is for mere external points, such as feather markings, exactness of combs, head marks, beak and shank colorings, and so on. Many of the best breeders lose trace of the great internal points of heavy laying and early development. The best breeders of the entire country owe it to themselves and to their business to make strenuous efforts to produce still better utility pure breeds. There is an enormous field among our farmers open for this work.

A poultry farm or plant, rightly conducted, operated by a man or woman with reasonably good horse sense and judgment, will pay as well as any business, and better, considering the same amount of invest ment. There are thousands and thousands of people in this great land of ours making money, besides a comfortable living. raising poultry.

Your title is like the links o chain; the chain is no stronger than the weakest link. So with your title; it is measured by the makes a defective link in the title, or a lost deed makes a break in the chain of your title. Do you know whether the chain of your title is well connected and whether there are any defect-ive links in it? You ought to know how strong your title is. You will never know from the file of deeds you have in your trunk. There is only one method yet devised whereby you can be certain as to the true condition of your title, and that is by means of an abstract. You have no abstract, have you? when you purchased, you did not think it was necessary. You took the seller's word. He said he had a good title. His neighbors told you his title was good. Think. What do you really know about your neigh-bors' titles? What do you really know about your title? Today advise with your wife and go and have an abstract made of your home. We make abstracts that show you how your title stands; that show the defective and missing links. Remember, our plant compiles "The abstract you will eventually use.

The greatest trouble we find with people raising poultry today is the lack of system in their breeding.

Careful breeding and selection is necessary to make a success of poultry raising. Select, and mate individuals that have come up to a certain standard of egg production, or size rather than from the entire flock, as most people are inclined to d at the present time. The application of the laws of breeding is essential to success with any kind of livestock. This important matter is too often overlooked, and as a result man / failures are recorded that otherwise could have been listed un der the head of success.

Let's all push for a greater and better hendom.
