The Ford is lighter than any other car of its size and power. Yet stronger, sturdier, longer lasting. Vanadium steel, that's why. Vanadium is the hardest, strongest, toughest steel made. It is the only steel that is hard and tough at the same time. It is the highest priced steel that is used in automobile construction. Yet the Ford is very low in price. Its quality, terms, price and small cost of operation and upkeep, less than two cents a mile, have made it the universal necessity in town and country.

HOW FAR IS COMANCHE?

Not So Far That the Statements Of Its Residents Cannot be Verified.

Rather an interesting case has been developed in Comanche. Being so near by, it is well worth publishing here. The statement is sincere—the proof convincing:

C. W. Carnes, farmer, Comanche, Texas, says: "Some years ago kidney complaint came on me, the first symptom being a slight irregularity in the passage of the kidney secretions. Later I suffered from dull, heavy pains across the small of the back and a constant feeling of languor. I paid little attention to the trouble at first, thinking it would go away, but I steadily grew worse and at last had to stop work. I had but little energy and there was often a complete retention of the kidney secretions. I also had rheumatic twinges. Doan's Kidney Pills brought me great benefit after I had taken other medicines without benefit."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Carnes had. Foster-Milburn Co., Proprs., Buffalo, N. Y.

Fortified Tires Now in the Light

The supreme test of a tire is to hold top place—the place in the sun—and for years. Goodyear tires have done that. Long they have led, both in sales and prestige.

Men expect much of the top place tire. They look for a superiority in it. Any seeming fault, due to mishap or misuse, becomes a defect in this glare.

But Goodyear Fortified Tires, after years in this light, hold higher place than ever. Last year men bought 1,479,883 Goodyears of the pleasure-car type alone. That's about one tire for every car in use.

Who Is Wrong?

Is it the Goodyear user, whose choice is confirmed by some 400,000 others? Or is it the man who still assumes that another tire is better?

Isn't best average service, as proved by Goodyear supremacy, the right way to judge a tire?

Lower Prices

On February 1 Goodyear made the third big price reduction in two years. The three total 45%.

Yet the tires are constantly bettered. In five costly ways—each exclusive to Goodyear—our Fortified Tires excel any other tire built. And each is a great trouble-saver.

They mean for you tire content. They mean most for your money, because of our matchless output. For your own sake, try them. The following Goodyear Service Stations will supply you:

Announcing The Brady Standard's ANNIVERSARY EDITION

The Brady Standard has under preparation a Special Edition of the paper, to be issued within the next few weeks. We believe the present moment affords the best opportunity we have ever had to boost this whole section, and to acquaint the outside world with our bountiful resources and our limitless opportunities. We shall make no overdrawn statements—the truth about this section will reveal a wonderful story of progress and development and of opportunity for greater ambitions.

A copy of The Standard's Special Edition will be mailed to each family in this section, and the officials of both the Santa Fe and the Frisco will furnish the names of persons residing at distant points who have made inquiries about and are interested in this section, to whom we will also mail a copy.

We have engaged the services of Mr. Robert Howard of San Antonio, an expert in this line, and who has spent the past sixteen years in Texas on special newspaper work. Mr. Howard will call and explain the proposition in detail to you. We want you to become interested—for your own benefit as well as for the good of the community.

Mr. Howard will visit and give an exhaustive write-up of Rochelle, Placid, Mercury, Whiteland, Pasche, Eden, Menard, Nine, Pear Valley, Tucker, Voca, Camp San Saba, Katemcoy, Fredonia, Richland Springs, Lohn, Fife, Waldrip, Stacy and Broadmoor, as well as the immediate Brady territory.

FIFE FINDINGS.

Fife, Texas, March 16. Editor Brady Standard:

Most farmers are about done planting corn now. The acreage is greatly increased this year. With the increased acreage of feed and corn it looks as if the cotton crop is going to be cut more than 50 per cent in this community. If all others do likewise we will get better prices for everything next year.

An error appeared in our letter of last week. The score in the basket ball game should have read 12 to 8 in favor of Lohn. The printer did it, but we were nearly mobbed by the team here, and, of course had to put the blame on the printer.

L. M. Farmer returned Saturday from Ft. Worth, where he attended the W. O. W. Head Camp as a delegate from this camp.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Bradley and baby visited friends at Waldrip Sunday.

Jno O. Beck was at Brady Saturday on business.

B. W. Bradley returned Saturday from a trip to Waco, Comanche and other points north, where he has been on business.

R. K. Finlay is the proud owner of a brand new Ford touring car, purchased at Brady Saturday.

Supt. E. L. White of Brady gave us a lecture on better schools here Friday night. His lecture was good, being illustrated by lantern slides, and we feel sure will put people thinking on how to better school conditions in our district.

Jas. Ashmore of Comanche is here on a visit to his friend, Will Bradley this week.

The Fife basket ball team went to Rockwood Saturday, where they played two games, one against the Rockwood team and one against Whon. Scores were 13 to 24 in favor of our team against Rockwood, and 9 to 13 in favor of Fife against Whon. The girls are getting up a reputation on basket ball and we believe it's going to take a good team to win from them soon.

TUCKER TOPICS.

Tucker, Texas, March 17. Editor Brady Standard:

Careful inquiry among the farmers of our community reveals the fact that the cotton acreage is going to be greatly reduced this year. And now, that we have a compulsory school attendance law you are going to see some brighter boys and girls on Calf Creek in a few years.

The people of this section would appreciate a good road from here to Brady. As it is now, it is almost impossible to get to market with any kind of load for weeks at a time. Several with whom I have talked gladly favor a bond issue for road building purposes.

Quite a contrast in the weather, last week and this. Snowed in last week, this week we feel we want to hustle around for pole and line and hunt the mouth of Calf Creek. We notice that Carroll Gray, Mr. Bridge, Mr. Williams and several others have had fish this week already. OLD SETTLER.

HELPLESS AS BABY

Down in Mind Unable to Work, and What Helped Her.

Summit Point, W. Va.—Mrs. Anna Belle Emey, of this place, says: "I suffered for 15 years with an awful pain in my right side, caused from womanly trouble, and doctored lots for it, but without success. I suffered so very much, that I became down in mind, and as helpless as a baby. I was in the worst kind of shape. Was unable to do any work."

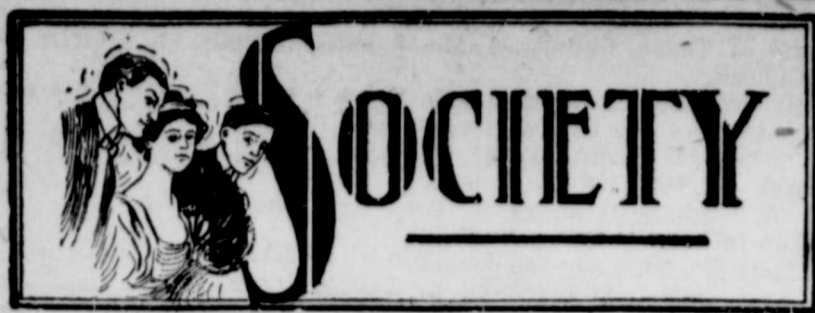

I began taking Cardui, the woman's tonic, and got relief from the very first dose. By the time I had taken 12 bottles, my health was completely restored. I am now 48 years years old, but feel as good as I did when only 16.

Cardui certainly saved me from losing my mind, and I feel it my duty to speak in its favor. I wish I had some power over poor, suffering women, and could make them know the good it would do them."

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, it will certainly be worth your while to give Cardui a trial. It has been helping weak women for more than 50 years, and will help you, too.

Try Cardui. Your druggist sells it.

MEETS REQUIREMENTS

Big Automobile Fire Truck Given Official Test Tuesday.

Brady's big $7,500 automobile fire truck, which arrived Saturday afternoon, was put through its official test Tuesday afternoon, and more than met every requirement exacted by the city council. The test was under direction of State Agent J. Ed. Schmitz of Dallas, representing the American-LaFrance Fire Engine Co., of Elmira, N. Y., builders of the apparatus, assisted by Demonstrating Engineers Raynes of the Dallas office and Meade of the Chicago office and the boys of the fire department.

The first test was at the Commercial National bank corner, where connection with a six-inch main was made with the big pump and three lines of hose converged into an Eastman set near the north gate to the court house yard. With nozzles varying in size from 1 1/8 inches to 2 inches a stream of water was thrown some forty or fifty feet higher than the court house, the pump handling all the water supplied by the mains and creating a 15-pound vacuum in addition. Three single lines of hose were then attached to the pump and the three streams of water which were supplied fully demonstrated the capacity of the machine in handling an immense volume of water and at a pressure which is incalculable in fire fighting.

The second, and probably the most severe test to which the machine was subjected, was in the laying of a line of hose from the Abney & Vincent corner to the Central school building, a distance of 1100 feet, where a stream of water from a 1 1/8 inch nozzle was thrown some 25 or 30 feet above the cupola of the building. This test more thoroughly demonstrated the capacity of the pump and motor than any of the others to which it was subjected, in that the difference in the elevation between the location of the pump and the school building is about 50 feet and the length of the hose line 1100 feet.

Tests were also made on the north side and proved equally as satisfactory as those on the square. The final test was at the filter plant, where it was demonstrated that the machine does not have to depend upon a water main for its source of supply, but will lift the water from a creek or well and deliver it through a line of hose at remarkable pressure. The big suction pipe was lowered into the settling basin at the filter plant and a nozzle pressure of about 60 pounds was developed by the pump.

The demonstration thoroughly satisfied members of the city council that the apparatus had met the most exacting demands to which it could be subjected, and each member of the council expressed himself as ready to formally accept the truck. This was not done Tuesday afternoon, however, but a special session will be called within the next few days for this purpose.

The tests were witnessed by all members of the city council, in addition to a big crowd of citizens of the town, many of whom expressed approbation of the council in making the purchase.

The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS

BY CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF SCENES IN THE PLAY

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—On Misery Creek, at the foot of a rock from which he has fallen, Sally Miller finds George Lescott, a landscape painter, unconscious, and after reviving him, goes for assistance.

CHAPTER II.—Samson South and Sally, taking Lescott to Samson's home, are met by Spicer South, head of the family, who tells them that Jesse Purvey has been shot, and that Samson is suspected of the crime. Samson denies it.

CHAPTER III.—The shooting of Jesse Purvey breaks the truce of Hollman-South feud.

CHAPTER IV.—Samson reproves Tamarack Spicer for telling Sally that Jim Hollman is on the trail with bloodhounds hunting the man who shot Purvey.

CHAPTER V.—The bloodhounds lose the trail at Spicer South's door. Lescott discovers artistic ability in Samson. While sketching with Lescott on the mountain, Tamarack discovers Samson to a jeering crowd of mountaineers. Samson thrashes him and denounces him as the "truce-buster" who shot Purvey.

CHAPTER VI.—Lescott tries to persuade Samson to go to New York with him and develop his talent. Sally, loyal but heartbroken, furthers Lescott's efforts. The dance at Wile McCager's threatens trouble to Samson and Lescott.

"Never mind what ye war jest a-sayin'," interrupted the boy, flushing redly to his cheekbones, but controlling his voice. "Ye've done said enough a ready. Ye're a right old man, Caleb, an' I reckon that gives ye some license ter shoot off yore face, but ef any of them no-count, shifless boys of yores wants ter back up what ye says, I'm ready ter go out thar an' make 'em eat hit. I hain't a-goin' ter answer no more questions."

There was a commotion of argument, until "Black Dave" Jasper, a saturnine giant, whose hair was no blacker than his expression, rose, and a semblance of quiet greeted him as he spoke.

"Mebby, Samson, ye've got a right ter take the studs this a-way, an' ter refuse ter answer our questions, but we've got a right ter say who kin stay in this hyar country. Ef ye 'lows ter quit us, I reckon we kin quit you—and, if we quits ye, ye hain't nothin' more ter us than no other boy that's gettin' too big for his breeches. This furmorer is a visitor here—today, an' we don't 'low ter hurt him—but he's got ter go. We don't want him round hyar no longer." He turned to Lescott. "We're a-givin' ye fair warnin', stranger. Ye hain't our breed. After this, ye stays on Misery at yore own risk—an' hit's a-goin' ter be plumb risky. That thar's final."

"This man," blazed the boy, before Lescott could speak, "is a-avisitin' me an' Unc' Spicer. When ye wants him ye kin come up thar an' git him. Every damned man of ye kin come. I hain't a-sayin' how many of ye'll go back. He was 'lowin' that he'd leave hyar ter-morrer mornin', but after this I'm a-tellin' ye he hain't a-goin' ter do hit. He's a-goin' ter stay as long as he likes, an' nobody hain't a-goin' ter run him off." Samson took his stand before the painter, and swept the group with his eyes. "An' what's more," he added, "I'll tell ye another thing. I hadn't plumb made up my mind ter leave the mountings, but ye've done settled hit fer me. I'm a-goin'."

There was a low murmur of anger, and a voice cried out from the rear: "Let him go. We hain't got no use fer damn cowards."

"Whoever said that's a liar!" shouted the boy. Lescott, standing at his side, felt that the situation was more than parlor. But, before the storm could break, some one rushed in, and whispered to Wile McCager a message that caused him to raise both hands above his head, and thunder for attention.

"Men," he roared, "listen ter me! This here hain't no time fer squabblin' amongst ourselves. We're all Souths. Tamarack South has done gone ter Hixon, an' got inter trouble. He's locked up in the jailhouse."

"We're all hyar," screamed old Caleb's high, broken voice. "Let's go an' take him out."

Samson's anger had died. He turned, and held a whispered conversation with McCager, and, at its end, the host of the day announced briefly:

"Samson's got somethin' ter say ter ye. So long as he's willin' ter stand by us, I reckon we're willin' ter listen ter Henry South's boy."

"I hain't got no use fer Tam'rack Spicer," said the boy, succinctly, "but I don't 'low ter let him lay in no jailhouse, unless he's got a right ter be thar. What's he charged with?"

But no one knew that. A man supposedly close to the Hollmans, but in reality an informer for the Souths, had seen him led into the jailyard by a posse of a half-dozen men, and had seen the iron-barred doors close on him. That was all, except that the Hollman forces were gathering in Hixon, and, if the Souths went there en masse, a pitched battle must be the inevitable result. The first step was to gain accurate information and an answer to one vital question. Was Tamarack held as a feud victim, or was his arrest legitimate? How to learn that was the problem. To send a body of men was to invite bloodshed. To send a single inquirer was to deliver him over to the enemy.

"Air you men willin' ter take my word about Tamarack?" inquired Samson. There was a clamorous assent, and the boy turned to Lescott.

"I wants ye ter take Sally home with ye. Ye'd better start right away, afore she hears any of this talk. Hit would fret her. Tell her I've had ter go 'cross

There was a commotion of argument, until "Black Dave" Jasper, a saturnine giant, whose hair was no blacker than his expression, rose, and a semblance of quiet greeted him as he spoke.

"Mebby, Samson, ye've got a right ter take the studs this a-way, an' ter refuse ter answer our questions, but we've got a right ter say who kin stay in this hyar country. Ef ye 'lows ter quit us, I reckon we kin quit you—and, if we quits ye, ye hain't nothin' more ter us than no other boy that's gettin' too big for his breeches. This furmorer is a visitor here—today, an' we don't 'low ter hurt him—but he's got ter go. We don't want him round hyar no longer." He turned to Lescott. "We're a-givin' ye fair warnin', stranger. Ye hain't our breed. After this, ye stays on Misery at yore own risk—an' hit's a-goin' ter be plumb risky. That thar's final."

"This man," blazed the boy, before Lescott could speak, "is a-avisitin' me an' Unc' Spicer. When ye wants him ye kin come up thar an' git him. Every damned man of ye kin come. I hain't a-sayin' how many of ye'll go back. He was 'lowin' that he'd leave hyar ter-morrer mornin', but after this I'm a-tellin' ye he hain't a-goin' ter do hit. He's a-goin' ter stay as long as he likes, an' nobody hain't a-goin' ter run him off." Samson took his stand before the painter, and swept the group with his eyes. "An' what's more," he added, "I'll tell ye another thing. I hadn't plumb made up my mind ter leave the mountings, but ye've done settled hit fer me. I'm a-goin'."

There was a low murmur of anger, and a voice cried out from the rear: "Let him go. We hain't got no use fer damn cowards."

"Whoever said that's a liar!" shouted the boy. Lescott, standing at his side, felt that the situation was more than parlor. But, before the storm could break, some one rushed in, and whispered to Wile McCager a message that caused him to raise both hands above his head, and thunder for attention.

"Men," he roared, "listen ter me! This here hain't no time fer squabblin' amongst ourselves. We're all Souths. Tamarack South has done gone ter Hixon, an' got inter trouble. He's locked up in the jailhouse."

"We're all hyar," screamed old Caleb's high, broken voice. "Let's go an' take him out."

Samson's anger had died. He turned, and held a whispered conversation with McCager, and, at its end, the host of the day announced briefly:

"Samson's got somethin' ter say ter ye. So long as he's willin' ter stand by us, I reckon we're willin' ter listen ter Henry South's boy."

"I hain't got no use fer Tam'rack Spicer," said the boy, succinctly, "but I don't 'low ter let him lay in no jailhouse, unless he's got a right ter be thar. What's he charged with?"

But no one knew that. A man supposedly close to the Hollmans, but in reality an informer for the Souths, had seen him led into the jailyard by a posse of a half-dozen men, and had seen the iron-barred doors close on him. That was all, except that the Hollman forces were gathering in Hixon, and, if the Souths went there en masse, a pitched battle must be the Jail. The men behind the trees edged around their covers as he went, keeping themselves protected, as squirrels creep around a trunk when a hunter is lurking below. Samson halted at the jail wall, and called the prisoner's name. A tousled head and surly face appeared at the barred window, and the boy went over and held converse from the outside.

"How in hell did ye git into town?" demanded the prisoner.

"I rid in," was the short reply. "How'd ye git in the jailhouse?"

The captive was shamefaced. "I got a leetle too much licker, an' I was shootin' out the lights last night," he confessed.

"What business did ye have hyar in Hixon?"

"I jest slipped in ter see a gal."

Samson leaned closer, and lowered his voice.

"Does they know that ye shot them shoots at Jesse Purvey?"

Tamarack turned pale.

"No," he stammered, "they believe ye done hit."

Samson laughed. He was thinking of the rifles trained on him from a dozen invisible posts.

"How long air they a-goin' ter keep ye hyar?" he demanded.

"I kin git out tomorrer ef I pays the fine. Hit's ten dollars."

"And ef ye don't pay the fine?"

"Hit's a dollar a day."

"I reckon ye don't 'low ter pay hit, do ye?"

"I 'lowed mebby ye mout pay hit fer me, Samson."

"Ye done 'lowed plumb wrong. I come hyar ter see ef ye needed help, but hit 'pears ter me they're lettin' ye off easy."

He turned on his heel, and went back to his mule. The men behind the trees began circling again. Samson mounted, and, with his chin well up, trotted back along the main street.

It was over. The question was answered. The Hollmans regarded the truce at still effective. The fact that they were permitting him to ride out alive was a wordless assurance of that. Incidentally, he stood vindicated in the eyes of his own people.

Simply stayed on a week after that simply in deference to Samson's insistence. To leave at once might savor of flight under fire, but when the week was out the painter turned his horse's head toward town, and his train swept him back to the Bluegrass and the East.

A quiet of unbroken and deadly routine settled down on Misery. The conduct of the Souths in keeping hands off, and acknowledging the justice of Tamarack Spicer's jail sentence, had been their answer to the declaration of the Hollmans in letting Samson ride into and out of Hixon. The truce was established. When a short time later, Tamarack left the country to become a railroad brakeman, Jesse Purvey passed the word that his men must, until further orders, desist from violence. The word had crept about that Samson, too, was going away, and, if this were true, Jesse felt that his future would be more secure than his past. Purvey believed Samson guilty, despite the exporation of the hounds.

Lescott had sent a box of books, and Samson had taken a team over to Hixon, and brought them back.

He devoured them all from title page to final line, and many of them he went back to, and digested again.

He wrestled long and gently with his uncle, struggling to win the old man's consent to his departure. But Spicer South's brain was no longer plastic. What had been good enough for the past was good enough for the future. Nevertheless, he arranged affairs so that his nephew should be able to meet financial needs, and to go where he chose in a fashion befitting a South.

November came in bleakly, with a raw and devastating breath of fatality. The smile died from horizon to horizon, and for days cold rains beat and lashed the forests. And, toward the end of the month, came the day which Samson had set for his departure.

At the threshold, with the saddlebags over his left forearm and the rifle in his hand, he paused. His uncle stood at his elbow and the boy put out his hand.

"Good-by, Unc' Spicer," was all he said. The old man, who had been his second father, shook hands. His face, too, was expressionless, but he felt that he was saying farewell to a soldier of genius who was abandoning the field. And he loved the boy with all the centered power of an isolated heart.

A half-mile along the road, Samson halted and dismounted. There, in a small cove, surrounded by a tangle of briars and blackberry bushes, stood a small and dilapidated "meeting house" and churchyard, which he must visit. He made his way through the rough undergrowth to the unkempt half-acre, and halted before the leaning headstones which marked two graves. With a sudden emotion, he swept the back of his hand across his eyes. He did not remove his hat, but he stood in the drizzle of cold rain for a moment of silence, and then he said:

"Pap, I hain't forgot. I don't want ye ter think that I've forgot."

Before he arrived at the Widow Miller's, the rain had stopped and the clouds had broken.

Sally opened the door, and smiled. She had spent the day nursing herself for this farewell, and at least until the moment of leave-taking she would be safe from tears. The Widow Miller and her son soon left them alone, and the boy and girl sat before the blazing logs.

For a time, an awkward silence fell between them. At last, the boy rose, and went over to the corner where he had placed his gun. He took it up and laid it on the hearth between them.

"Sally," he said, "I wants ter tell ye some things that I hain't never said ter nobody else. In the fust place, I wants ye ter keep this hyar gun fer me."

The girl's eyes widened with surprise.

"Hain't ye a-goin' ter take hit with ye, Samson?"

"He shook his head.

"I hain't a-goin' ter need hit down below. Nobody don't use 'em down thar. I've got my pistol, an' I reckon that will be enough."

"I'll take good keer of hit," she promised.

The boy took out of his pockets a box of cartridges and a small package tied in a greasy rag.

"Hit's loaded, Sally, an' hit's cleaned an' hit's greased. Hit's ready fer use."

Again, she nodded in silent assent, and the boy began speaking in a slow, careful voice, which gradually mounted into tense emotion.

"Sally, that thar gun was my pap's. When he lay a-dyin', he gave hit ter me, an' he gave me a job ter do with hit. When I was a little feller, I used ter set up 'most all day, pollyshin' that gun an' gittin' hit ready. I used ter go out in the woods, an' practice shootin' hit at things, till I learned how ter handle hit. I reckon thar hain't many fellers round here that kin beat me now."

He paused, and the girl hastened to corroborate.

"Thar hain't none, Samson."

"There hain't nothin' in the world, Sally, that I prizes like I does that gun. Hit's got a job ter do. . . . Thar hain't but one person in the world I'd trust hit with. That's you. . . . I wants ye ter keep hit fer me, an' I keep hit ready. . . . They thinks round hyar I'm quittin', but I hain't. I'm comin' back, an' when I comes, I'll need this hyar thing—an' I'll need hit bad."

He took up the rifle, and ran his hand caressingly along its lock and barrel.

"I don't know when I'm a-comin'," he said, slowly, "but when I calls fer this, I'm shore a-goin' ter need hit quick. I wants hit ter be ready fer me, day er night. Maybe, nobody won't know I'm hyar. . . . Maybe, I won't want nobody ter know. . . . But, when I whistles thar like a whippoorwill, I wants ye ter slip out—an' fetch me that gun!"

He stopped, and bent forward. His face was tense, and his eyes were glistening with purpose. His lips were tight set and fanatical.

"Samson," said the girl, reaching out and taking the weapon from his hands, "ef I'm alive when ye comes, I'll do hit. I promise ye. An'," she added, "ef I hain't alive, hit'll be standin' thar in that corner. I'll grease hit, an' keep hit loaded, an' when ye calls, I'll fetch hit out thar to ye."

The youth nodded. "I mout come any time, but likely as not I'll hev ter come a-fightin' when I comes."

Next, he produced an envelope.

"This here is a letter I've done writ ter myself," he explained. He drew out the sheet, and read:

"Samson, come back." Then he handed the missive to the girl. "Thet there is addressed ter me, in care of Mr. Lescott. . . . Ef anything happens—ef Unc' Spicer needs me—I Value of Grazing Peanuts.

An acre of Spanish peanuts yielding 40 bushels, grazed down produces approximately 400 pounds of pork, valued at 6c, equal to $54. Aside from the peanuts, every farmer raising hogs ought to have a patch of peas, rape, sorghum, oats, wheat or rye for spring grazing for their hogs. These crops can be planted for spring grazing about oat sowing time.

The oily or soft condition of peanut fed hogs can be overcome by feeding about two pounds of corn, milo, feterita or kaffir per day per 100 pounds of live weight or by hardening wholly on grain for four or five weeks before marketing. Farmers should plant enough of the grain crops to have enough grain to harden off their hogs. Also a little grain should be fed with the peanuts to balance up the ration.—Exchange.

A Story of Success.

R. V. Holland of Dallas was in the city Wednesday and Thursday, and his mission was so extraordinary as to merit special mention. Mr. Holland is a son of Col. F. P. Holland of Dallas, well known throughout the United States as the founder of two of the very best and most successful publications in the South—Farm and Ranch, and Holland's Magazine. It was Col. Holland who, through his magazine, promulgated the "Cleanest Town in Texas" contest, which aroused so much enthusiasm throughout the State, and which resulted in such a clean-up as Texas and Texas cities had never before known. Col. Holland also was one of the first in Texas to advocate Baby Beef clubs—in short he has been a pioneer in promoting moves for the general welfare of Texas and her citizens, and is loved and esteemed by his fellow-citizens in Dallas, as well as by the people of the State.

He and his son, Frank P., Jr., are undoubtedly two of the liveliest wires in the South today, and one of the reasons for their success with their publications lies in their study of the advertising game. To take rank with such publications as the Saturday Evening Post, Colliers, Ladies Home Journal and others among the national advertisers is surely a wonderful accomplishment—and it is made all the more remarkable by reason of these publications being located in the South, whereas the home of the successful publication is supposed to be north of Mason and Dixon line.

When Col. Holland and his son, Frank, Jr., first endeavored to secure advertising of a national character they ran up against this theory that the only publications worth considering from an advertisers' standpoint, were those located in the north. So then they started upon their campaign of exploiting Texas and the South, to tell of her people and her possibilities, to show that the South was a vital factor in the nation's commerce and that the road to reach the people of the South must be through a southern publication. It was a hard task and a long fight, but in the end they succeeded in bringing the national advertisers to their point of view—and you will understand why this achievement is regarded as remarkable.

Now we are getting down to the main part of our story—the part which we started to tell, and that was why R. V. Holland should come to Brady. To begin with, R. V. Holland is probably not quite so well known to the newspaper fraternity as his brother and his distinguished father, for the simple reason that he has been in the north the past several years studying the advertising game while in the employ of the N. W. Ayer & Sons, one of the largest advertising agencies in the U. S. He has just returned to Texas to turn the knowledge and experience thus gained to the advantage of the publications owned by his father. Now one of the theories of Col. Holland and his sons is to impart all the information and to give all the assistance they can to anyone interested in the advertising game and for a number of years they have been co-operating with the small town publishers to secure better and more effective advertising. Consequently when J. T. Mann of Brady, who, by the way, is one of the liveliest of local advertisers, and who is a firm believer in advertising—the right kind of advertising—quite naturally turned to Col. Holland and his son for advice and information as regards advertising, R. V. Holland dropped all business and came to Brady to offer any assistance he might be enabled to give. So he has been spending two days here, getting ideas as to the line and the character of the goods carried by O. D. Mann & Sons; commending, criticizing and commenting upon the advertising heretofore done locally by this firm, making suggestions and giving the firm the benefit of his experience and knowledge of the business. When he returns to Dallas he expects to outline a campaign of advertising for the firm, to show them the most effective method of presenting their goods and of bringing the salient points of their arguments to the attention of the reading public; in brief, to guide them along the paths of "advertising that pays".

There are two reasons for Mr. Holland's interest in Mr. Mann and his business. Mr. Holland says his motives are selfish, that he expects to profit by his work in the long run; but our opinion is that there is nothing at all selfish about it. It is simply love for the work that prompted him to come to Brady, and a desire to help Mr. Mann because the latter was sincerely interested and anxious to learn all he could about his own business and the best method of advertising his lines. Mr. Holland expects to get no advertising for his publication from the local firm—the only possible way he could be benefitted would result from the live business men of the south advertising "nationally advertised" goods more efficiently and thereby increasing their sales to such proportions that Mr. Holland could go to the national advertiser and point out to him the possibilities of still further increasing their sales by a campaign of advertising in Hollands and Farm and Ranch in co-operation with that of the small town merchant in his local paper. That is his "selfish motive."

It may look far-fetched to the casual reader for a man to start upon such a mission as Mr. Holland's in the hope of some day reaping benefit by securing more national advertising—but it is this forethought that has laid the foundation for the success of Col. Holland's publications.

In conclusion, we wish to speak a personal word regarding R. V. Holland. He is a most agreeable and likeable young man, and his wide experience makes him a particularly interesting and entertaining conversationalist. He is heart and soul in his work, and has the happy faculty of imparting his enthusiasm to his hearers. He has promised an early return to Brady, when he will combine business and pleasure by seeing what effect "nationally advertised" fishing hooks will have upon the finny tribe in the Saba river.

Help the Stomach Digest Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse that ferments and generates poisons that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness. Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative, positive in its effect and that will quickly relieve constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B.
