GRAVE WAS EMPTY.

Mysterious Grave in Western Part of City Opened.

Considerable excitement was caused Saturday afternoon by the discovery of what looked to be a new grave in the flat just west of the Red Cross wagon yard, and a few feet from the banks of Brady creek.

The discovery was made by some of the residents of that section of the city, and was immediately reported to the county authorities.

An investigation was made by Deputy Sheriff John Martin, who found that the supposed grave was at the exact spot where a Mexican family had been living in a tent for several months, but who left for parts unknown a week or so ago.

The matter was reported to Justice of the Peace T. J. King and he ordered the grave opened up. This was done late Monday afternoon, with the result that no body was found, nor was there any pot of gold at the bottom to award the toilers.

The only explanation offered for the extraordinary find is that the Mexican camped at the place had been digging for treasure, which he thought lay buried in the vicinity, and when he failed to locate it filled in the hole and moved away.

The excavation was in the exact proportions of the average grave and a number of citizens who visited the place vouchsafed the opinion that it would be found to contain the body of some member of the Mexican's family.

Purchased Tin Shop.

C. V. Globber, who for the past ten or twelve years has been conducting a tin shop on the southwest corner of the public square, has disposed of his business to H. J. Rowlett of Hico, the change being effective last week.

Mr. Globber is one of the best workmen in his line in this section of the state, and since coming to Brady has built up a very substantial business, and has won a host of friends by his straightforward, honest business dealings with his fellowmen.

For the present he will be associated with Mr. Rowlett in conducting the business, but expects to leave with his family some time next month for an automobile trip through West Texas and New Mexico, and next fall will assume the management of his mother's ranch near Paint Rock.

Mr. Rowlett is an experienced workman, having held positions with some of the largest concerns in the state and comes to Brady with highest endorsements, both as an experienced workman and a desirable citizen.

He will be joined here by Mrs. Rowlett and baby as soon as a desirable residence can be secured.

We sell the Mr. Bill planter. O. D. Mann & Sons.

I have been engaged in the business in Brady a good many years and have always sought to give each and every customer a fair, square deal, and believe that I have been uniformly successful in this respect.

With best wishes for your future happiness and prosperity, I am, Yours very truly, C. V. GLOBBER.

TEACHERS ELECTED.

Supt. W. L. Hughes Again Chosen to Head City Schools.

At the regular meeting of the city school board last Friday night Supt. W. L. Hughes, was again selected to head the schools for another year and a majority of the faculty of both high school and grammar grades were re-elected.

In addition to the election of Supt. Hughes the board selected other faculty members as follows:

High School—Mrs. W. B. Anderson, History; Miss Florence Ryan, formerly a member of the Cherokee Junior College faculty, English; grade teachers—Misses Jewel Caperton, Lena Carrol, Winnie Stout, Emma Young, Inez Butler, Gertrude Stout and Mrs. F. A. Knox.

Neither Principal Phillips of the High school faculty, Mrs. Williamson, teacher of English, nor Miss Musa Irby, principal of the grammar school, were applicants for re-election. A number of applications for both the principal's positions are on file, but the selection of these two teachers was deferred until a subsequent meeting.

The election of Prof. Hughes for the fourth time is quite a compliment to his ability as a capable school man, and is an honor of which he is highly deserving. He resigned his position as County Superintendent of Schools of Tom Green county in 1913 to accept the superintendency of the Brady schools, taking up the duties of his new position in September of that year. At that time the local school was on the probationary list of schools affiliated with the State University, with only 12 units of credit. The standard of work done under Prof. Hughes' direction the past three years has been such as to place the school on the University's unconditional affiliated schools, with a credit of 16 1-2 units.

The present session will close Friday, May 21st. The commencement address will be delivered by Dr. H. T. Musselman of Dallas, editor of the Texas School Magazine and one of the foremost authorities on school work in the South.

Commencement sermon will be delivered by Rev. I. T. Morris pastor of the Methodist church at the new Methodist tabernacle on Sunday, May 16th.

He had only one dog and the wolf was about to get away from it, when Will got the wolf by the back of the neck, intending to cut its throat, when the wolf got him by the hand. Will says he forgot he had a knife then and will let the dogs handle all the wolves he finds after this.

BUNNY BRIGHT EYES.

TIME TO ACT.

Don't Wait For the Fatal Stages of Kidney Illness. Profit by Brady Experiences.

Occasionally attacks of backache, irregular urination, headaches and dizzy spells are frequent symptoms of kidney disorders. It's an error to neglect these ills. The attacks may pass off for a time, but generally return with greater intensity. Don't delay a minute. Begin taking Doan's Kidney Pills and keep up their use until the desired results are obtained. Good work in Brady proves the effectiveness of this great kidney remedy.

C. V. Glover, tinsmith, Brady, says: "For years I was troubled by a dull ache in my back. I consulted a doctor and he pronounced the complaint 'lumbago.' He gave me a prescription, but it brought me no relief and I tried other remedies without help. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and used them. Before long I noticed that the trouble was beginning to leave and after taking two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, I was cured. I haven't lost a day from work since." Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Glover had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Co-operative Tire

Goodyear has always built co-operative tires. Every saving has gone to the user. The more men bought the better we built them, and the lower we sold them.

That is why Goodyear has held top place, outselling any other tire.

3 Reductions

Note that in two years we made three big price reductions. The last—on February 1st—brought the total to 45 per cent.

Yet in costly ways these tires have been bettered. In not one iota were they ever skimmed.

Our Fortified Tire is still "On-Air" cured to save blow-outs. Yet that one extra cost us $450,000 yearly.

It still has our No-Rim-Cut feature. It has in each base 126 braided piano wires to make the tire secure. It embodies hundreds of rubber rivets, formed to combat loose treads.

Our All-Weather tread is still double-thick. It still has the sharp, tough, resistless grips.

Those extras—all exclusive to Goodyear—are all retained, despite our price reductions. And we still spend $100,000 yearly to discover new ways to better them.

Your Ally

In all these ways, Goodyear is your ally. You do injustice to yourself when you fail to secure this advantage. Never in tire history was such value given as you get in Goodyear tires today.

No smaller makers can ever give so much.

Any dealer will supply you. [2327]

Society is getting better in and around our community which we are very thankful for. Church at Onion Gap Sunday morning was postponed on account of the rain. Mrs. Baze and Miss Mary Bell, our teachers, were shopping in Brady Saturday. A party of Onion Gap folks attended singing at Corn Creek Saturday night. Mr. and Mrs. Brown and Miss Ollie Philips were visiting school Friday. We should have more such visitors. It seems parents don't realize that teachers and pupils love visitors as well as they. A bunch of the good citizens met at the school house Saturday and hauled sand and put it around the doors. Such work is appreciated and the time is well spent; there should be more such work at home and at the rural schools. Mrs. Bud Sutton is at her mother's, at Rochelle for a few days. Mr. Hailey was trading horses in Rochelle the past week. Mr. Mix was trading some this week. He swapped his cart for a buggy. Mr. and Mrs. David Young were in the Gap Saturday on business. We regret to report Mrs. Will Turner very sick and hope she will soon recover. Mrs. Cottrell is still at her daughter's. Hurrah for the editor. He has a level head. What time for the picnic? Along in July, when those juicy Albertas and Honeydrip Melons will be plentiful! Also those yellow legged guineas. Farmers are getting along nicely with their crops. Lots of cotton now up. Mrs. Buss Ince and sister, Miss Beulah Myrick visited the cemetery at Rochelle Monday afternoon, seeing after the newly-made grave of Mr. Buss Ince. The Gap school closes Friday week. We are sorry to see it closed, but hope the teachers and pupils many such successful sessions. Not only has there been success, but not a single unpleasantness has marred the entire term. Joe Myrick has been water and mud bound at Camps the past week. I cast my vote for "Ranting Tim" this month. Mr. Neal has a sick child, though it is some better at this writing. OLD WOMAN.

McCalloch County, Its People and "Standard" Best in U. S. Brady Texas, April 26. Editor Brady Standard: D. L. Rambo and C. T. Terry were guests of John Robertson Sunday.

Answering your question of why The Standard has so many correspondents, I will say: McCulloch county is one of the best counties in the United States. I can say that Peruna is a fine remedy for catarrh and diseases of the tonsils and many other ailments. It is manufactured by a well-known company, who are perfectly reliable.

COGGIN ESTATE.

Inventory Shows Total About $285,000. The will of the late Mrs. Mattie R. Coggin has been probated and the inventory of property was filed with County Clerk Byrd Saturday afternoon. The inventory was made by the executor, Judge Poindexter of Cleburn, and by Will A. Bell and R. D. McClelland, appointed by the court for that purpose. The total value of the estate is approximately $284,160.00. Of this amount approximately $119,950 is in real estate, the bulk of which is in Brown county; the personal property amounts to approximately $79,312, of which $55,800 is stock in the Coggin National Bank, and a large part of the remainder is stock in various corporations in Brownwood and elsewhere; approximately $85,000 of the remainder is in claims of the estate, in the form of promissory notes maturing at various times, with various interest credits and debits which will change this total to some extent.—Brownwood Bulletin.

TRESPASS LAW.

Interesting Case in Brown Co. Results in Conviction. County Attorney Ed Wilson and Attorney Mark McGee spent Saturday in May prosecuting a case in justice W. H. Campbell's court. The case was an interesting one, and resulted in conviction. The complaint was made under the state law prohibiting fishing or other trespassing on enclosures of land of less than two thousand acres. This law provides that such trespassing is a violation of law whether such enclosures are posted or not; on tracts larger than two thousand acres it is necessary to post notices prohibiting trespassing.—Brownwood Bulletin.

UNBELIEVEABLE.

Truth is indeed stranger than fiction.

Not long ago a gentleman was here from Belton, Texas. Perhaps you have heard of Belton. It is the county seat of Bell county and is located just about 130 miles due east of Brady.

This gentleman was astounded at the city he found upon his arrival here; he was thoroughly impressed with the substantial appearance of the town; he made note of the energy and enterprise displayed by the citizens of Brady. Further, he was highly elated over the country he found around Brady and more especially did he view with appreciation the splendid prospects in the Brady country.

Yet this gentleman, living only 130 miles distant, said that until shortly before his trip here he had NEVER HEARD OF BRADY!

Does that sound like truth? Or like fiction?

But he was sincere—he had never heard of Brady—at least he had never heard of Brady and the great Brady country in such a way that it was fixed in his mind as one of the greatest commonwealths in the State of Texas.

Does that sound like Brady was well advertised?

Doesn't that reason that something should be done to put Brady on the map?

Doesn't that call for something just in the line of The Brady Standard's big, illustrated Special Edition?

Friends, neighbors, fellow-citizens! It sure do!

SWAT THE PEDDLER.

Some peddlers were arrested in McKinney the other day for selling goods without a license. That was right. The same character of goods and of a very much better quality, in most instances, may be bought from the stores in McKinney. The peddlers give employment to no one, pay no taxes and spend as little money for necessary expenses during their short visit in any town as possible. Swat the peddler; stay with the home man.—McKinney Courier.

"Swat the credit system," advises the Hill County Review. "The credit system has nearly ruined Texas. Retail prices are to some extent influenced by it. Every wise merchant who does a credit business has to figure a certain percentage of bad accounts. The result is that the paying customer has to pay the bills of the dead beats. This year of enforced economy ought to teach a valuable lesson along this line. Pay as you go and get the best prices in the long run."

EDITORS OUT OF JAIL.

The Prison Mirror, published in the penitentiary at Minneapolis, says:

Why is it that from the first inception of our paper to the present time we have never had an editor to sojourn in our midst? Other professions have been well represented. Of preachers we have had enough to furnish subsistence to an African chief of a year, of doctors sufficient in numbers to populate a state, and of lawyers enough to establish a good-sized colony in hades. But editors—not one.

The same reports have come from time to time out of other great prisons. Editors are law-abiders. And the same is true in almost equal measure of printers. In numerous large penitentiaries there are not enough printers to put the little prison papers into type, nor pressmen enough to take the papers through the press. This is as good evidence as possibly could be submitted as to the integrity of that large class of people who produce our publications. It is a condition to be proud of. If all classes were equally guiltless, our prisons would be all but tenantless, our courts all but useless, our country all but crimeless. Undoubtedly the men who write, edit and print newspapers and books are the best posted citizens in any land. The making of the printed words teaches caution. The printed word lives, therefore it must not be wild or woolly. We hear the uncensored orator on the stump giving thunderous expression to vagaries and hallucinations; we hear the lawyer at the bar indulge in outbursts of bitterness and prejudice; we hear the evangelist in the pulpit hurling anathema right and left, and occasionally we hear even the judge on the bench deliver dicta of the most intemperate and exaggerated character. The editor, on the other hand, chooses his words with care. He may be partisan and prejudiced and vindictive, but he retains his equipoise and remains judicious in the selection of his terms. This principle soon permeates his whole life, therefore he thinks and lives conservatively. Besides, editors are so busy they don't have much time to rob trains or pick the pockets of widows and orphans.—Dallas News.

27 1-2 CENTS FOR EGGS.

The standardization of farm products is, in a sense, a new subject for thought with producers, particularly in this section of the state, but it is growing and producers are gradually coming to be convinced of its importance.

For instance, the Coleman County Co-Operative Marketing Association has now an opportunity to sell eggs, delivered to a city market, at 27 1-2c a dozen, whereas the open market only affords around 13c a dozen.

This wide range of difference in price is easily explained. To get 27 1-2c a dozen for eggs the marketing association would have to guarantee the quality or standardization of the eggs—that is, guarantee that they were infertile—and also guarantee the output or quantity to be delivered.

The marketing association is unable to take the contract because it could not supply the required number of pure or standardized eggs. According to date in its possession the association could not secure more than four or five dozen standardized eggs a day in Coleman territory, which would fall far short of the amount of eggs required to fill the contract.

Producers will readily see the importance of the subject of standardizing their products. In this single instance, poultry producers of Coleman are losing from twelve to fourteen cents a dozen on eggs, simply because of lack of organization and education, in that we are ignoring the advice of agricultural experts by permitting the rooster to have the run of the flocks at a time of year when eggs should be infertile to prevent their deterioration upon reaching market.—Coleman Voice.

PART IN PROGRESS.

Nothing binds a rural community closer together and makes neighbors more sympathetic and helpful to each other than to undertake a great enterprise, such as building a schoolhouse, voting bonds and building good roads, erecting a church building, etc. It takes sacrifice to do these things where every man is expected to bear his share of the burdens, both in expense and in the encouragement of those who must be encouraged to do their part.

There is no better training in citizenship than sacrifice for public good. Men who have never borne their part of the financial and social burdens necessary to build up the community in education, religion and civic attractiveness have little conception of the brotherhood of man. It takes self-denial usually, but this is what men must practice if they would render service to the community, the county and the state.

The community that makes the greatest strides in co-operation is the community that does the most in the way of progress. The people who are willing to sacrifice, if necessary, to provide education for their children, good roads for those who live after them as well as those who get the benefit of them now; sanitation and health for posterity as well as the present citizens—these are the people who render service to the state and nation, and they are the people whose citizenship and neighborly kindness are worthy of emulation.—Farm and Ranch.

THE MORTGAGE LIFTER.

Possibly no other animal has been bred up and improved so much as the hog. A few days ago I was looking on a herd of old-fashioned razorbacks and I could hardly think it possible that all of our magnificent breeds of hogs had come from such creatures. I thought of the wonderful works of nature when guided by the subtle hand of man. And the thought struck me, what a wonderful race of people we would have been, had the human family been bred up and improved in the past twenty-five years as much as the hog family.

Aside from the fact that the Scriptures give the hog a very bad reputation, he has gained favor very fast in the past quarter century. It was said by ancient man that the hog was a possessor of the devil and many people called the meat of the hog the flesh of Satan. Regardless of the hog's past reputation he has lifted more mortgages than any other animal. He has been able to remove the bonds of indebtedness from many and place them on easy street. There is nothing wasted about the hog, his flesh goes to feed the teeming millions; it is a universal food; there is possibly no race of people on the globe but what relishes hog flesh. Besides, the fat or lard from the hog gives our bread and other foods a wonderful strengthening effect.—J. T. Fitzgerald in Farmers' Fireside Bulletin.

If you are playing the game of life and only hold deuces, be a sport just the same and bet like you had an ace full. A true sport will never lay down a hand as long as he has a bean left.—Temple Mirror.

It is glorious to die for one's country, but at the same time with a full yield of frying-sized chickens only a few weeks off, I can't help but think it is sublime to live for it.—Temple Mirror.

No doubt it was God Himself who first put a song in the mocking-bird's throat, but I don't think He had anything to do with learning a donkey to Bray—that is so much like man's doings.—Temple Mirror.

The Temple State Bank has bought twenty-one one hundred-ton silos and will sell them to an equal number of farmers in Bell county on very liberal terms in order to encourage them in raising more feed crops and less cotton.—Coleman Daily Voice.

BABY DESERTED.

Left on Step of W. H. Ballou Home Tuesday Night.

A three-weeks-old baby boy, well wrapped and placed in a large lunch basket, was discovered on the front porch of the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ballou about midnight Tuesday.

The discovery of the basket containing the child was made when Mrs. Ballou, who had gotten up to give one of her children a dose of medicine, heard the child crying. She called to her husband, in an adjoining room, to go and bring the basket in, and on opening it up found the infant, fully dressed and securely wrapped in a heavy cloth.

Sheriff Wall was immediately notified and an investigation was made, but no trace of the parents was found. Mr. and Mrs. Ballou have agreed to care for the little stranger until a desirable home may be found. Five or six applications have already been received from families who want the baby, and it is quite likely that he will be adopted by one of this number.

Every Woman Should Know

There are three entirely different kinds of baking powder, namely:

- (1) Cream of Tartar, derived from grapes,
- (2) Alum, a mineral acid, and
- (3) Phosphate of Lime.

(1) Baking Powders made of Cream of Tartar add to the food the same healthful qualities as exist in the ripe grapes from which Cream of Tartar is derived.

(2) Baking Powders made of Alum add to the food some form of Alum or Aluminum, a heavy metal, wholly foreign to any natural article of food.

(3) Phosphate of Lime is made from rock or by burning bones which by chemical action are changed into a white powder. It is used in baking powder only because it is a cheaper substitute.

A Cream of Tartar powder never contains Alum or Phosphate.

Every housekeeper should read the ingredients printed on the label and know what she is using.

COUNTY COURT.

Jury for The Week Discharged Wednesday Afternoon.

With the returning of a verdict by the jury in the case of J. F. Crew vs. John Meadows et al. late Wednesday afternoon, all jury cases in county court were disposed of for the term and the jury for the week was discharged by Judge Brown. The remainder of the week will be taken up with the trial of cases on the non-jury docket, and court will adjourn for the term Saturday afternoon.

One case on the criminal docket set for trial last week, which had to be postponed on account of failure of a material witness to appear, was called for trial Wednesday. The case was that of the State vs. Ben Brown, charged with aggravated assault, and a plea of guilty was entered. His punishment was fixed at a fine of $25.00 and costs.

The only order entered on the civil docket since Monday is as follows:

O. D. Mann & Sons vs. G. W. Dunning et al., appeal from J. P. Court, Precinct No. 1; transferred to jury docket.

The following orders have been made during the term on the probate docket:

Estate of Mozelle Glenn et al. F. M. Richards, guardian; application for final settlement granted and estate closed and guardian discharged.

Estate of Jas. Rogers et al., O. E. Rice, guardian; bond of guardian filed and approved.

Estate of Henry Powell, deceased; will admitted to probate and H. P. Jordan, John Rainbolt and S. S. Graham appointed appraisers.

Simpson & Co. Occupying New Quarters.

Simpson & Co. this week completed the removal of their garage and machine shop from the Willbanks blacksmith shop building to the Bumbardner building on East First street.

The new quarters are most commodiously arranged, the building having been recently remodeled to meet their requirements, and they are now in better position to take care of the needs of their customers and friends than ever in the past.

Manager B. Simpson is most optimistic regarding the outlook for business in his line this year, and states that he believes his sales for 1915 will far exceed those of any previous year since he has been engaged in business here.

This firm recently accepted the agency in this and several adjoining counties for the Sax-on car, and two weeks ago received a demonstrator, which they later sold to Burl Wiley of this city. They report the sale of another of these popular machines this week to Mrs. W. N. White, delivery to be made about the middle of May.

A car load of Studebakers—for which they have the agency in this section—was received and unloaded Monday. The shipment consisted of three Model 4, 5-passenger touring cars, completely equipped. One of the number was delivered yesterday to A. R. Carlson, one of McCulloch county's progressive Swedish farmers living in the East Sweden community.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—On Misery Creek, at the foot of a rock from which he has fallen, Sally Miller finds George Lescott, a landscape painter, unconscious, and after reviving him, goes for assistance.

CHAPTER II—Samson South and Sally, taking Lescott to Samson's home, are met by Spicer South, head of the family, who tells them that Jesse Purvey has been shot, and that Samson is suspected of the crime. Samson denies it.

CHAPTER III—The shooting of Jesse Purvey breaks the truce of Hollman-South feud.

CHAPTER IV—Samson reproves Tamarack Spicer for telling Sally that Jim Hollman is on the trail with bloodhounds hunting the man who shot Purvey.

CHAPTER V—The bloodhounds lose the trail at Spicer South's door. Lescott discovers artistic ability in Samson. While sketching with Lescott on the mountain, Tamarack discovers Samson to a jeering crowd of mountaineers. Samson thrashes him and denounces his as the "truce-buster" who shot Purvey.

CHAPTER VI—Lescott tries to persuade Samson to go to New York with him and develop his talent. Sally, loyal but heartbroken, furthers Lescott's efforts. The dance at Willie McCager's threatens trouble to Samson and Lescott.

CHAPTER VII—At the dance Samson tells the South clan he is going to leave the mountains. Lescott goes home to New York. Samson bids Spicer and Sally farewell and follows.

CHAPTER VIII—In New York Samson studies art and learns much of city ways. Drennie Lescott persuades Wilfred Horton, her dilettante lover, to do a man's work in the world.

CHAPTER IX—Prompted by her love, Drennie teaches herself to write. Horton throws himself into the business world and becomes well hated by the "insiders" and politicians. At a Louisville resort Samson meets William Farbish, sporty social parasite, and Hort. is his enemy.

CHAPTER X—Farbish sees Samson and Drennie dining together unchaperoned at the Wigwam roadhouse. He conspires with others to make Horton jealous and succeeds.

That same evening, Farbish dropped into the studio, explaining that he had been buying a picture at Collasso's, and had taken the opportunity to stop by and hand Samson a visitor's card to the Kennore club. He found the ground of interest fallow, and artfully sowed it with well-chosen anecdotes calculated to stimulate enthusiasm.

On leaving the studio, he paused to say: "I'll let you know when conditions are just right." Then, he added, as though in afterthought: "And I'll arrange so that you won't run up on Wilfred Horton."

"What's the matter with Wilfred Horton?" demanded Samson, a shade curiously.

"Nothing at all," replied Farbish, with entire gravity. "Personally, I like Horton immensely. I simply thought you might find things more congenial when he wasn't among these present."

Samson was puzzled, but he did not fancy hearing from this man's lips criticisms upon friends of his friends.

"Well, I reckon," he said, coolly, "I'd like him, too."

"I beg your pardon," said the other, "I suppose you knew, or I shouldn't have mentioned the subject. I seem to have said too much."

"See here, Mr. Farbish," Samson spoke quietly, but imperatively; "if you know any reason why I shouldn't meet Mr. Wilfred Horton, I want you to tell me what it is. He is a friend of my friends. You say you've said too much. I reckon you've either said too much, or too little."

Then, very insidiously and artistically, seeming all the while reluctant and apologetic, the visitor proceeded to plant in Samson's mind an exaggerated and untrue picture of Horton's contempt for him and of Horton's resentment at the favor shown him by the Lescotts.

Samson heard him out with a face enigmatically set, and his voice was soft, as he said simply at the end: "I'm obliged to you."

Samson did not appear at the Lescott house for two weeks after that. He had begun to think that, if his going there gave embarrassment to the girl who had been kind to him, it were better to remain away.

"I don't belong here," he told himself, bitterly. "I reckon everybody that knows me in New York, except the Lescotts, is laughing at me behind my back."

He worked fiercely, all the while his work such fire and energy that it came out again converted into boldness of stroke and an almost savage vigor of drawing. The instructor nodded his head over the easel, and passed on to the next student without having left the defacing mark of his relentless crayon. To the next pupil, he said:

"Watch the way that man South draws. He's not clever. He's elementally sincere, and, if he goes on, the first thing you know he will be a portrait painter. He won't merely draw eyes and lips and noses, but character and virtues and vices showing out through them."

And Samson met every gaze with smoldering savagery, searching for some one who might be laughing at him openly, or even covertly, instead of behind his back. The long-suffering fighting lust in him craved opportunity to break out and relieve the pressure on his soul. But no one laughed.

One afternoon late in November, a hint of blizzards swept snarling down the Atlantic seaboard from the polar fogs, with wet hurries of snow and rain. On the marshes where the Kennore club had its lodge, the live decoys stretched their clipped wings, and raised their green necks restively into the salt wind, and listened. With dawn, they had heard, faint and far away, the first notes of that wild chorus with which the skies would ring until the southerly migrations ended in the horizon-distant honking of high-flying water fowl.

Then it was that Farbish dropped in with marching orders, and Samson, yearning to be away where there were open skies, packed George Lescott's borrowed paraphernalia, and prepared to leave that same night.

While he was packing the telephone rang, and Samson heard Adrienne's voice at the other end of the wire.

"Where have you been hiding?" she demanded. "I'll have to send a truant officer after you."

"I've been very busy," said the man. "and I reckon, after all, you can't civilize a wolf. I'm afraid I've been wasting your time."

Possibly, the miserable tone of the voice told the girl more than the words.

"You are having a season with the blue devils," she announced. "You've been cooped up too much. This wind ought to bring the ducks, and—"

"I'm leaving tonight," Samson told her.

"It would have been very nice of you to have run up to say good-by," she reproved. "But I'll forgive you, if you call me up by long distance. You will get there early in the morning. Tomorrow, I'm going to Philadelphia over night. The next night, I shall be at the theater. Call me up after the theater, and tell me how you like it."

It was the same old frankness and friendliness of voice, and the same old note like the music of a reed instrument. Samson felt so comforted and reassured that he laughed through the telephone.

"I've been keeping away from you," he volunteered, "because I've had a lapse into savagery, and haven't been fit to talk to you. When I get back, I'm coming up to explain. And, in the meantime, I'll telephone."

On the train Samson was surprised to discover that, after all, he had Mr. William Farbish for a traveling companion. That gentleman explained that he had found an opportunity to play truant from business for a day or two, and wished to see Samson comfortably encoined and introduced.

The first day Farbish and Samson had the place to themselves, but the next morning would bring others.

The next day, while the mountaineer was out on the flats, the party of men at the club had been swelled to a total of six, for in pursuance of the carefully arranged plans of Mr. Farbish, Mr. Bradburn had succeeded in inducing Wilfred Horton to run down for a day or two of the sport he loved. When Horton arrived that afternoon he found his usually even temper ruffled by bits of maliciously broached gossip, until his resentment against Samson South had been fanned into danger heat. He did not know that South also was at the club, and he did not that afternoon go out to the blinds, but so far departed from his usual custom as to permit himself to sit for several hours in the club grill.

And yet, as is often the case in carefully designed affairs, the one element that made most powerfully for the success of Farbish's scheme was pure accident. The carefully arranged meeting between the two men, the adroitly incited passions of each, would still have brought no clash, had not Wilfred Horton been affected by the flushing effect of alcohol. Since his college days, he had been invariably abstemious. Tonight marked an exception.

He was rather surprised at the cordiality of the welcome accorded him, for, as chance would have it, except for Samson South, whom he had not yet seen, all the other sportsmen were men closely allied to the political and financial elements upon which he had been making war. Still, since they seemed willing to forget for the time that there had been a breach, he was equally so. Just now, he was feeling such bitterness for the Kentuckian that the foes of a less personal sort seemed unimportant.

In point of fact, Wilfred Horton had spent a very bad day. The final straw had broken the back of his usually unruffled temper, when he had found in his room on reaching the Kennore a copy of a certain New York weekly paper, and had read a page, which chanced to be lying face up (a chance carefully prearranged). It was an item of which Farbish had known, in advance of publication, but Wilfred would never have seen that sheet, had it not been so carefully brought to his attention. There were hints of the strange infatuation which a certain young woman seemed to entertain for a partially civilized stranger who had made his entree to New York via the police court, and who wore his hair long in imitation of a biblical character of the same name.

The supper at the Wigwam inn was mentioned, and the character of the place intimated. Horton felt this objectionable innuendo was directly traceable to Adrienne's ill-judged friendship for the mountaineer, and he bitterly blamed the mountaineer. And, while he had been brooding on these matters, a man acting as Farbish's ambassador had dropped into his room, since Farbish himself knew that Horton would not listen to his confidences. The delegated spokesman warned Wilfred that Samson South had spoken pointedly of him, and advised cautious conduct, in a fashion calculated to inflame.

Samson, it was falsely alleged, had accused him of saying derogatory things in his absence, which he would hardly venture to repeat in his presence. In short, it was put to Horton to announce his opinion openly, or eat the crow of cowardice.

That evening, when Samson went to his room, Farbish joined him.

"I've been greatly annoyed to find," he said, seating himself on Samson's bed, "that Horton arrived today."

"I reckon that's all right," said Samson. "He's a member, isn't he?"

Farbish appeared dubious.

"I don't want to appear in the guise of a prophet of trouble," he said, "but you are my guest here, and I must warn you. Horton thinks of you as a 'sun-fighter' and a dangerous man. He won't take chances with you. If there is a clash, it will be serious. He doesn't often drink, but today he's doing it, and may be ugly. Avoid an altercation if you can, but if it comes—"

"He broke off and added seriously: 'You will have to get him, or he will get you. Are you armed?'"

The Kentuckian laughed.

"I reckon I don't need to be armed amongst gentlemen."

Farbish drew from his pocket a magazine pistol.

"I won't hurt you to slip that into your clothes," he insisted.

For an instant, the mountaineer stood looking at his host and with eyes that bored deep, but whatever was in his mind as he made that scrutiny he kept to himself. At last, he took the magazine pistol, turned it over in his hand, and put it into his pocket.

"Mr. Farbish," he said, "I've been in places before now where men were drinking who had made threats against me. I think you are excited about this thing. If anything starts, he will start it."

At the dinner table, Samson South and Wilfred Horton were introduced, and acknowledged their introductions with the briefest and most formal nods. During the course of the meal, though seated side by side, each ignored the presence of the other. Samson was, perhaps, no more silent than usual. Always, he was the listener except when a question was put to him direct, but the silence which sat upon Wilfred Horton was a departure from his ordinary custom.

He had discovered in his college days that liquor, instead of exhilarating him, was an influence under which he grew morose and sullen, and that discovery had made him almost a total abstainer. Tonight, his glass was constantly filled and emptied, and, as he ate, he gazed ahead, and thought resentfully of the man at his side.

When the coffee had been brought, and the cigars lighted, and the servants had withdrawn, Horton with the manner of one who had been awaiting an opportunity, turned slightly in his chair, and gazed insolently at the Kentuckian.

Samson South still seemed entirely unconscious of the other's existence, though in reality no detail of the brewing storm had escaped him. He was studying the other faces around the table, and what he saw in them appeared to occupy him. Wilfred Horton's cheeks were burning with a dull flush, and his eyes were narrowing with an unveiled dislike. Suddenly, a silence fell on the party, and, as the men sat puffing their cigars, Horton turned toward the Kentuckian. For a moment, he glared in silence, then with an impetuous exclamation of disgust he announced:

"See here, South, I want you to know that if I'd understood you were to be here, I wouldn't have come. It has pleased me to express my opinion of you to a number of people, and now I mean to express it to you in person."

Samson looked around, and his features indicated neither surprise nor interest. He caught Farbish's eye at the same instant, and, though the plotter said nothing, the glance was subtle and expressive. It seemed to prompt and goad him on, as though the man had said:

"You mustn't stand that. Go after him."

"I reckon"—Samson's voice was a pleasant drawl—"it doesn't make any particular difference, Mr. Horton."

"Even if what I said didn't happen to be particularly commendatory?" inquired Horton, his eyes narrowing.

"So long," replied the Kentuckian, "as what you said was your own opinion, I don't reckon it would interest me much."

"In point of fact"—Horton was gazing with steady hostility into Samson's eyes—"I prefer to tell you. I have rather generally expressed the belief that you are a damned savage, unfit for decent society."

Samson's face grew rigid and a trifle pale. His mouth set itself in a straight line, but, as Wilfred Horton came to his feet with the last words, the mountaineer remained seated.

"And," went on the New Yorker, flushing with suddenly augmenting passion, "what I said I still believe to be true and repeat in your presence. At another time and place, I shall be even more explicit. I shall ask you to explain—certain things."

"Mr. Horton," suggested Samson in an ominously quiet voice, "I reckon you're a little drunk. If I were you, I'd sit down."

Wilfred's face went from red to white, and his shoulders stiffened. He leaned forward, and for the instant no one moved. The tick of the clock was plainly audible.

"South," he said, his breath coming in labored excitement, "defend yourself!"

Samson still sat motionless.

"Against what?" he inquired.

"Against that!" Horton struck the mountain man across the face with his open hand. Instantly, there was a commotion of scraping chairs and shuffling feet, mingled with a chorus of inarticulate protest. Samson had risen, and, for a second, his face had become a thing of unseizable passion. His hand instinctively swept toward his pocket—and stopped half-way. He stood by his overturned chair, gazing into the eyes of his assailant, with an effort at self-mastery which gave his chest and arms the appearance of a man writhing and stiffening under electrocution. Then, he forced both hands to his back and gripped them there. For a moment, the tableau was held, then the man from the mountains began speaking, slowly and in a tone of dead-level monotony. Each syllable was portentously distinct and clear clipped.

"Maybe you know why I don't kill you. . . . Maybe you don't. . . . I don't gaze page: the item that had offended Horton.

"I may not have good manners, Mister Farbish, but where I come from we know how to handle varnaints." He dropped his voice and added for the plotter's ear only: "Here's a little matter on the side that concerns only us. It wouldn't interest these other gentlemen." He opened his hand, and added: "Here, eat that!"

Farbish with a frightened glance at the set face of the man who was advancing upon him, leaped back, and drew from his pocket a pistol—it was an exact counterpart of the one with which he had supplied Samson.

With a panther-like swiftness, the Kentuckian leaped forward, and struck up the weapon, which spat one ineffective bullet into the rafters. There was a momentary scuffle of swaying bodies and a crash under which the table groaned amid the shattering of glass and china. Then, slowly, the conspirator's body bent back at the waist, until its shoulders were stretched on the disarranged cloth, and the white face, with purple veins swelling on the forehead, stared up between two brown hands that gripped its throat.

"Swallow that!" ordered the mountaineer.

For just an instant, the company stood dumfounded, then a strained, unnatural voice broke the silence.

"Stop him, he's going to kill the man!"

"Don't You See That This Thing is a Frame-Up?"

give a damn whether you do or not. . . . That's the first blow I've ever passed. . . . I ain't going to hit back. . . . You need a friend pretty bad just now. . . . For certain reasons, I'm going to be that friend. . . . Don't you see that this thing is a damned frame-up? . . . Don't you see that I was brought here to murder you?" He turned suddenly to Farbish.

"Why did you insist on my putting that in my pocket?"—Samson took out the pistol, and threw it down on the table-cloth in front of Wilfred, where it struck and shivered a half-filled wine-glass—"and why did you warn me that this man meant to kill me? I was meant to be your catspaw to put Wilfred Horton out of your way. I may be a barbarian and a savage, but I can smell a rat—if it's dead enough."

For an instant there was absolute and hushed calm. Wilfred Horton picked up the discarded weapon and looked at it in bewildered stupefaction, then slowly his face flamed with distressing mortification.

"Any time you want to 'ght me'—Samson had turned again to face him, and was still talking in his deadly quiet voice—"except tonight, you can find me. I've never been hit before without hitting back. That blow has got to be paid for—but the man that's really responsible has got to pay first. When I fight you, I'll fight for myself, not for a bunch of damned murderers. . . . Just now, I've got other business. That man framed this up!" He pointed a lean finger across the table into the startled countenance of Mr. Farbish. "He knew! He has been working on this job for a month. I'm going to attend to his case now."

As Samson started toward Farbish, the conspirator rose, and, with an excellent counterfeit of insulted virtue, pushed back his chair.

"By God," he indignantly exclaimed, "you mustn't try to embroil me in your quarrels. You must apologize. You are talking wildly, South."

"Am I?" questioned the Kentuckian, quietly; "I'm going to act wildly in a minute."

He halted a short distance from Farbish, and drew from his pocket a crumpled scrap of the offending maga-

The Mineral Wells Index tells of a man in that city who has been troubled for years with insomnia, but it troubles him no more. He has found a cure. Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell."

I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together.

My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it.

Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlastingly tired feeling?

If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century.
 Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. All druggists.

that she was the mother of seven, would run again. And unless she came from good race stock she never would catch us.

Some anti-suffragist should bring all possible influence to bear on Jess Willard to get him to come out against lady votes. Already Ty Cobb has announced in favor of ballots for the ballotless, and we just must have some prominent men on our side.

It appears that the Pullman porter would fare well even if the public didn't give him a tip. Suppose he doesn't receive but $27.50 per month to begin with. It seems that after 15 years his wages are raised to $28.87. Now if this same increase continues through all time, in only 500 years the porter would receive about $72.50 per month, and at the end of a thousand years he would be drawing down the handsome sum of $117.50.

Returns indicated that a majority of the women participating in the Chicago election voted the Republican ticket. Still some people contend that they are entitled to the ballot. If it were certain that all would vote with the Democrats there would be some excuse for extending them the privilege. Even women could be improved by becoming members of the great and honest party, but just consider the other side of the question. It is awful to think of an account of a wedding, concluding with the information that "the bride is a prominent Republican, at one time served as county chairman, and has made many speeches over the state in behalf of that party's candidates."

 A small henpecked little man was about to take an examination for life insurance.

"You don't dissipate, do you?" asked the physician as he made ready for tests. "Not a fast liver or anything of that sort?"

The little man hesitated a moment, looked a bit frightened, then replied in a small, piping voice:
 "I sometimes chew a little gum."—Exchange.

The Church in The City.
 The country supplies the Church with most of her ministers. Among a hundred preachers in a particular conference, most of whom had city charges, it was discovered that only two were born and reared in the city.

Fortunately, church membership is increasing in the cities at a faster rate than the population, but this is only because of exceptionally hard work and accessions from the country and town churches.

In 1906 the percentage of the total number of communicants in the cities for all denominations was 31.9 per cent, as compared with 25.7 per cent in 1890 but this includes all non-Protestant bodies.

An examination of the membership of six leading Protestant denominations shows that the proportion of church members to population is only from one-half to one-fifth as great in the city as in the country.

During the last half of the nineteenth century, in the United States as a whole, the Protestant Church membership grew faster than the population, while in the city population grew faster than Protestant church membership.

If you take all the Protestant population of New York City and add to it all the Roman Catholics, the Greeks, and the Christians of every nation, you have less than one-third of the entire population. Nearly one-third is Hebrew, and more than one-third is atheist, infidel, or rothing at all. There are 1,200,000 nominal Protestants in the city with no church connections whatever. Only about 8 per cent of the city's population are members of Protestant churches.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is operating in 28 cities having populations of more than 50,000 each, and with a total population of 5,228,554. In the states known as the South there are 40 cities with populations above 25,000, and aggregating 3,570,770 persons. In each of these there is the problem of the non-church going masses, the problem of the slum, the problem of the rich who create the conditions in which men and their families work and live, the problem of the suburb, and many others which require wisdom, wealth, faith and heroic service to solve. The challenge of the cit to the modern Church calls forth all the recruits which home missions can muster.

Such children need the rich medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion above everything else; its pure cod liver oil contains nature's own blood-forming, flesh-building fats which quickly show in rosy cheeks, better appetite, firm flesh and sturdy frames.

Very Careless of Him.

Two colored men were employed in tearing down a three-story brick building. One colored man was on top of the building taking off the bricks and sliding them down a narrow wooden chute to the ground, some 30 feet below, where the other was picking them up and piling them. When this latter colored man was stooping over to pick up a brick the former, accidentally let one fall.

Instead of its killing him, he merely looked up, without rising, and said:

Positive Relief For Constipation

The progress of modern medical science is, perhaps, no more forcibly evident than in the simplifying of many of the old time remedies of past generations. For instance, the harsh cathartics and violent purgatives used by our forefathers to relieve constipation are now known to be not only unnecessary but really harmful. Constipation can be more effectively relieved without the discomfort and pain these old-time remedies occasion.

A combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is most effective, yet mild and pleasant. It is absolutely free from opiates and narcotics and equally as desirable a remedy for the tiniest babe as for rugged manhood. A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

J. Q. Triplett was in from Pasche Wednesday on business. Mr. Triplett reports his community in good shape, and prospects very bright. He states that cash sales have been unusually good for this time of the year, which is one of the best indications that the people of the Brady country are in good financial circumstances.

Messrs. R. V. Holland and Mont Wyman of Dallas, and A. L. Gale of Chicago were in the city last week conferring with the local merchants upon their plan of community co-operation. ### Trustee Election Tomorrow.

An election for school trustees of Brady Independent School District No. 1 will be held tomorrow, the voting box being in the northwest room of the first floor of the court house.

Four members of the board are to be selected to succeed Messrs. Ed Broad, H. C. Samuel, Harvey Walker and Lee McShan, whose terms expire this year. With the exception of Ed Broad and Mr. Samuel, the latter of whom has acted as secretary of the board the past two years, none will consent to offer for re-election, but sufficient urging on the part of those deeply interested in the success of the schools was done to cause them to agree to serve another term. All other retiring members of the board have served two terms each and feel that they should not be called upon to give more of their time, but rather that they be relieved by some of those who are equally as capable of managing the schools.

Citizens who have consented to allow their names to go on the official ballot as candidates to fill the four vacancies on the board are as follows: H. C.

A Beautiful Display.

One of the most attractive exhibits ever seen in Brady is the art display in the show window of the Central Drug store by Miss Alice Taylor and her art pupils. The display includes hand painted china of every description, the work being exceedingly artistic in every instance and the "firing" having been done to the highest degree of perfection. The display also includes a number of paintings which are likewise worthy of note.

Miss Taylor, and her pupils as well, have been the recipients of many compliments upon their work, and the display reflects great credit upon the efficiency and thoroughness of Miss Taylor in her chosen work.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Dimmitt County Smugglers in Moving Pictures Coming.

Fred and Ethel Hayes, who have played all week to good houses, rendering bills that intensify in interest with each succeeding scene, will render "The Common Law," tonight (Friday). This is said to be one of those creations that play upon the innermost and hidden emotions in such way that the pure will see no suggestiveness, while those who do will create it by their inner emotions. No company that has ever visited Brady has at any time put on a more touchingly pathetic bill than that of last night, "Shadows of the Past," or handled its technic with more delicate touch. In monologue and song M. J. Landrum, who played three characters last night, gave a clever specialty. Fred and Ethel Hayes Stock Company conclude their week's engagement Saturday night, when one of the few remaining scenes in the exciting novelette "The Trey O' Hearts," will feature in a 10c concert after the regular play.

There will be a matinee Saturday afternoon. Popular prices prevail and reserved seats are on sale at Jones Drug Store.

Monday night, "The Dimmitt County Smugglers" in motion pictures will reproduce the Mexican bandit killing of Ortiz, which caused such a sensation throughout Texas a few years ago, resulting in Gov. Colquitt dispatching Rangers to the scene. It will be a 10c and 20c attraction.

"Lucille Love," now in its 7th episode, will feature Tuesday night.

Organize Church.

The colored citizens of Brady have recently completed the organization of a church of the Missionary Baptist denomination and secured the services of Rev. Isaac Mackkinnon of Cuero as pastor.

A suitable building in the vicinity of the Brady Oil mill has been secured for use as a church, and services are held here regularly each Sunday. At present a protracted meeting is in progress, the services being conducted by the pastor.

This step on the part of the colored people of Brady is most commendable, and their solicitation of financial aid in launching the new organization has met with liberal responses from the business men and citizens generally.
