Black Box Coming On or About July 24.

Manager Levy is rejoicing that at last he has been able to secure the serial pictures of the photoplay of the "Black Box," a thrilling novellette, being produced in the best cities of Texas. The first of these films will be shown on or about July 24th, and it is likely to be a continuous Saturday night feature.

Tonight a five reel feature "The Price of Treachery" will be shown. The story of two brothers, one of whom is so crooked he couldn't lay straight in bed if he tried, and of a lighthouse keeper's daughter, who is saved from the snares of the crook by his brother, furnishes plenty of drama, while ocean waves and the bounding

WILL BUILD PIKE ROAD.

Mason Puts Business Proposition Up to Brady and Llano.

Ex-Secretary T. P. Grant of the defunct Brady Commercial club is in receipt of a communication this week from Secretary Max T. Loeffler of the Mason Business Men's club, in which he calls attention of the citizens and business men of Brady to a matter of the utmost importance.

A mass meeting of citizens of Mason was held last week, at which time the matter of good roads connection with adjoining towns was discussed at considerable length. After a full discussion of the subject it was unanimously decided to offer to build a pike road either to the east line of Llano county or to the south line of McCulloch county to connect with a similar thor-son have been in very bad condition by reason of the unusually heavy traffic, and much freight is delayed here, especially during bad weather, because of the condition of the roads.

So unsatisfactory is the service from Brady that the Mason merchants have decided to divert their traffic to Llano in case this county is unwilling to build the road to connect with that to be built from Mason, and they have put the matter squarely up to the citizens of Brady.

Mr. Loeffler's letter is as follows:

"Our people are very much interested in having a road built to your town which could be travelled by freight trucks, rain or shine. Our organization instructs me to get in communication with you and ascertain if the proposition appeals to your people, and if you would be willing and ready to build such a road to your county line. Please bring this matter before your people as soon as possible, and let me know how they feel about it."

Brady can ill afford to lose the Mason trade, and it behooves the business men to get busy and see to it that a first class thoroughfare is built to the Mason county line. It will be a mighty good investment, and is a matter in which all good citizens should co-operate.

Let us have that old hat—either Panama or felt—and get the best job of cleaning and re-blocking you have ever had. Mann Bros.

Don't of Mothers.
Countless scores of fathers, delighted to see their boys rolling, rolling and tumbling, in mischievous, healthy joy, it may be to wind up with a bump or a quarrel, like gamboling kittens, on the carpet or sward, have in quiet moments turned mental eye backward to when they were boys and, in a flash, the difficulties and struggles of their maturing years passed in review before them, and they wonder what can be done for their boys. Quicker in perception, but less practical, mothers settle the problem by asking, "O, why weren't you born all girls?" Of course, fathers smile—they know the best way to make a coat last, is to make the pants and vest first, but they can't answer mothers' question—so they smile, and think. Think of the countless wonders of this world since they were boys; Think of the days when at home they called their own father's attention to the news that some one had invented a box that when spoken into, a person at the other end ten miles distant, could hear the human voice; and again in retrospect, hear their father say, "Ah, that's another darn newspaper lie!" The automobile, electric light, dictograph, kintoscope, the submarine and the flying machine. All these they think of, and of their boyhood days; the severely adhered to precepts and admonitions of their fathers, and the "don't's" of their loving mothers, many of which they now see robbed them of the initiative and self-confidence more valuable to a boy than inherited wealth, and they see where the loss of these have handicapped them. They realize that boys are not raised as they were; at least that those in whom few "don't's" are bred, have both initiative and self-confidence that if not run to weeds make the best of business men. Naturally they wonder if the fathers and mothers of fifty years ago were wrong.

Perhaps they were right, who shall say; but the proof of the pudding is in the eating. If it is true there is no effect without a cause, and also that our doubts and fears make cowards of us all, then is it not true that the terrible loss to a boy of initiative, (self-inspired effort) and self-confidence (relying upon himself to carry his effort to success), is the result of the cause, the effect of which is to make boys rely, not on their own courage, ambition and effort, but on a series of "don't's" promulgated and inspired by a mistaken love and a fear of Mother Grundy? It is true the parents of the past produced mighty good men, but is it not also true that these men, like Lincoln, split their own rails, learned by their own efforts, and rose to their sterling manhood by their own inherent, self-inspired confidence.

Who does not love a bright boy; with head erect, quick, jaunty step, clear eye, and a retort something like this, when the hearer's auto stalls: "Say, mister; you're arrested!" "What for?" "Killin' an E(I)ngin'?" Impertinent it may be, but snappy, the brains are keen, the eye observant; he knows he is the making of an American king, and he will be, for he will mature early and is splitting his own rails. But "don't's" did not raise him. Isn't it true they produce the other sort; dutiful, loving, kind-hearted, honest boys, to see whom is to love, but as impractical as the mother who asks why her boys had not all been born girls?

So, it is this, initiative and self-confidence, the result of few "don't's," fathers would see in their boys today, that parents paid little attention to or stifled years ago. It is the antipode of "I can't," and will make men of honest boys scarce out of their teens.

SEVERE PUNISHMENT

Of Mrs. Chappell, of Five Years' Standing, Relieved by Cardui.

Mt. Airy, N. C.—Mrs. Sarah M. Chappell of this town, says: "I suffered for five years with womanly troubles, also stomach troubles, and my punishment was more than any one could tell. I tried most every kind of medicine, but none did me any good. I read one day about Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I decided to try it. I had not taken but about six bottles until I was almost cured. It did me more good than all the other medicines I had tried, put together. My friends began asking me why I looked so well, and I told them about Cardui. Several are now taking it." Do you, lady reader, suffer from any of the ailments due to womanly trouble, such as headache, backache, sideache, sleeplessness, and that everlasting tired feeling? If so, let us urge you to give Cardui a trial. We feel confident it will help you, just as it has a million other women in the past half century. Begin taking Cardui to-day. You won't regret it. EVER SALIVATED BY CALOMEL? HORRIBLE!
Calomel is Quicksilver and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into the system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for 50 cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.

Wes Hall of Justin, who has been a guest of relatives here the past few days, left last night for Mineral Wells, where he will spend a few days with his family, who are visiting there for the summer, before returning home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Trigg and children returned yesterday morning from Brownwood, where they were called last week by the illness of Mrs. Trigg's grandmother, Mrs. E. D. Hurlbut, whose death occurred Monday morning.

Rev. J. J. Richardson, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. R. W. Fenton, and two children, Frank and Mary Elizabeth, arrived in the city Wednesday morning from their home in Argyle for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Richardson.

F. A. Von Rosenberg left this morning via auto for Fredericksburg enroute to Hallettsville, where he will spend several days with home folks and friends. He will return here about July 1st to accept a position on the Ford ranch.

Superintendent J. M. Lyle of the Brady Water & Light Works returned Wednesday afternoon from Galveston, where he attended the meeting of the Southwestern Waterworks Superintendents' association. He also spent a few days visiting his sister, Mrs. W. F. Ward, and family, at Fentress during his absence.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Murphy and children came in Wednesday from Alpine, where they are now making their home, and will spend several weeks here as guests of Mr. Murphy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Ward, and other relatives and friends. Mr. Murphy reports the Alpine country as being very dry at present, but grass is still good and cattle are in excellent condition.

Dairy Wagon in Smashup.

A team of mules driven to the Model Dairy's delivery wagon became frightened Tuesday afternoon in the southern part of the city and ran away.

The wagon was completely demolished and milk bottles and other contents of the wagon scattered over a large area. Earl Keith, the driver, fortunately escaped with only a few slight bruises.

FREE! COOKING DEMONSTRATION

and Instruction in Domestic Science

WITH SOMETHING GOOD TO EAT ALL THE TIME

Don't Forget the Dates, 28, 29, 30. Last Days of June

With the assistance of Mrs. Reese, a skilled operator of the Florence Oil Stove and learned in domestic science, we will show you many advantages the FLORENCE AUTOMATIC Blue Flame Oil Stove has over other kinds and makes

We are having this demonstration for several purposes. One is, we will likely never have another opportunity of securing the services of Mrs. Reese. Another: We believe every woman is interested in anything that tends to improve and lighten her work, and we are sure everyone that comes to the demonstration will be benefited in some way.

Summer Cooking Shouldn't Cook the Cook

Getting dinner ready in July is just as comfortable as in November—if you use a FLORENCE OIL COOK STOVE.

The heat goes into the cooking, not into the kitchen. It does your work well and reliably, and keeps you comfortable. It requires less watching and regulating than a coal stove.

You can keep one or four burners at an intensely hot or merely simmering flame.

Come in and let us show you how these Florence Automatic Stoves work, how simple and reliable. No Wicks to burn out. No Valves to leak. Once started, each burner will keep going at the same power until you turn it out.

"Look for the Lever"

Then another reason is we want you to visit our Store. We want to show you we have changed our Merchandising policies, and are selling as cheaply for cash as any one, Quality considered. We want every person to go away convinced that we are positively going to sell high-grade goods at a very small margin of profit.

We extend an invitation to everybody to come, especially the ladies. Even if you have an oil stove you will be sure to learn something that will more than repay you for the trouble coming, and while you are here we want to show you through our store and point out the many nice things we are selling. We expect to sell on credit, but we do not attempt to make prices and terms at the same time.

BRADY, TEXAS, June 25, 1915.

Elbert Hubbard said at fifty-eight he had never consulted a physician and never was sick an hour in his life. He thought a man ought to live five times the length of time he spends reaching maturity, which is twenty years. That would make us all one hundred years old at death. His recipe for living a hundred is this: Deep breathing in the open air with your mouth closed. Moderation in eating; simple dishes; Fletcherize; eat fruit every day, especially bananas. Exercise at least two hours in the open each day, walking, working in the garden, playing with the children. Sleep eight hours in a thoroughly ventilated room. Drink all the water between meals you care to. Don't bother to forgive your friends, just forget them. Keep busy. It is a beautiful world and we must and will and can leave it more beautiful than we found it.

IT WASN'T A PATCH.

Two ladies gay met a boy one day,
His legs were briar scratched;
His clothes were blue but a nut-brown hue
Marked the spot where his pants were patched;

They bubbled with joy at the blue clad boy
With his spot of nut-brown hue;

"Why didn't you patch with a color to match?"
They chuckled, "Why not with blue?"

"Come, don't be coy, my blue-brown boy, Speak out," and they laughed with glee;

And he blushed rose-red, while he bashfully said:
"That ain't no patch; that's me!"—Ex.

An ant got on Miss Flutie Belcher at a picnic at Bounding Billows the other day, but Slim Pickens, who has been trying to do something worthy of admiration for some time, immediately went to her rescue.—Hamilton Herald.

THE LITTLE THINGS.

"Too many people are neglecting the little things," said a Brady merchant the other day. He himself is at one and the same time connected with the biggest, and the littlest thing in a business way in Brady. The biggest is the best mercantile establishment in town; the smallest is an incubated chick;

but he is turning the latter out by the hundreds. They are little; but these fluffy balls of beauty are part of a billion dollar industry. His words call to mind a curious fact. City people, notoriously, overlook the small things. One instance may well serve, out of a thousand, to illustrate this. A clean rag will remove oil and dust from the mechanism of an auto, but the city man prefers to allow oil and dirt to choke pipes, carbureter and engine; and pay experts to remedy his neglect. Isn't that the gospel? The death of one man is said to have caused the present European war which has involved well nigh the entire civilized world, cost the life-blood of a million, made widows of a million women or more and destitute orphans of many more millions of boys and girls, to say nothing of billions of dollars destroyed. The curious fact is that everyone is familiar with the precept of watching for the little things, but most of us do not apply the lesson. The admonition goes into one ear and out of the other. There was a leak once in the dome of the Holy Sepulchre. A ten cent patch of zinc would have remedied it. But the story is told that out of a quarrel as to who should do it, grew the Crimean war, with England, France and Turkey on one side and Russia on the other. That little thing cost the lives of half a million men. A few goods bought away from home never ruined any city—that's a little thing. But, like the leak in the dome of the Holy Sepulchre, the results are disastrous. This little thing is draining the life blood of the best cities in Texas, and every Texan knows it; still people will not tie a knot in it. Why? Because they think it's a little thing! It's the same in the home, in business and on the farm. Can anyone say why, with the best incubator in the world selling at from $7.00 to $12.00 every farmer should not be turning out chickens by the hundred, instead of the dozen? This is the littlest big thing in the world when it comes to profit. But is it not so that while they want the profit, people are neglecting the little things? Again, on the farm is every opportunity to grow many of the goods that are canned. Nobody thinks of these little things until they are wanted, not even the farmer. Yet, there is a factory in Hot Springs, Arkansas, turning out family canning outfits for about $5.00, and one for marketing purposes for $14. Thousands of dollars are lost here. An acre of land that will make a bale of cotton, will grow enough tomatoes to fill 5400 three-pound cans, worth $540. All these things are perfectly true, and people know it. Why don't we do it? It may be said people are too busy with the big affairs. Strictly speaking this is utterly false. It would be nearer the mark to say that the piece of silver we call a dollar has hypnotized us until we fail to realize that products are value; that while we may not have one dollar in the world, the very fowls, the animals and various products are the things on which dollars rest and that if we have plenty of these, they will act like a magnet, on silver, on which, after all we would starve to death were there none of these little things. Is it this false view of relative value of coin and product that lures boys to the city and sickens the wife of life on the farm? Horses, cattle, hogs, chickens, turkeys, or any farm products, if not forced onto the market by debt, are, though not branded with the mint mark, more truly money than silver or gold that is so marked. And this is another little thing many of us overlook. The lesson learned is that products are value, not silver nor gold; that the little things must not be neglected, and that when we think of them we should tie a knot to the thought in the brain, so it will stick, and then apply the lesson.

Granville-King Nuptials.

The solemn and impressive words were spoken uniting the lives of Miss Vera King and Dr. B. Granville in the holy bonds of matrimony on Thursday evening, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. A. King, by Rev. T. P. Grant, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Members of both families, together with Miss King's club friends, assembled in the parlor, hall and dining room, which were attractively and tastefully decorated with ferns and blooming Texas daggers. In the parlor an arch was suspended under which the ceremony was performed. Miss Lucile Yantis, clad in pink and white embroidered organdie, rendered Lohengrin's wedding march preceding and during the service, after which the happy couple received congratulations. Grape punch was served in the dining room by Miss King and the handsome collection of presents to the bride were on display in the guest room.

The bride wore an olive green tailored suit of faille cloth with hat, shoes and gloves to match.

Dr. and Mrs. Granville left immediately on the Frisco for Fort Worth, Galveston and San Antonio.

The happy couple will be at home to their friends at their residence on South Blackburn street after July 1st.

Mrs. Wood Entertains.

Honoring her sister, Mrs. Henry Gray, and daughter, Miss Fay Gray, of Llano, Mrs. D. J. Wood gave a delightful Five Hundred party on Tuesday afternoon from 4:00 to 6:00.

The home was tastefully and artistically decorated in daisies.

Unique and artistic hand-painted score cards—executed by the hostess herself—were used in scoring the interesting series of games enjoyed by seven tables of players, high score prize being awarded to Mrs. Misses Lucile Benham, Fay S. S. Graham, while Mrs. Lewis Brook received the booby.

At the conclusion of the games the hostess served a delicious salad course to the following guests: Mesdames S. S. Addie Puckett of Gainesville, Graham, J. T. Mann, C. D. Allen, J. S. Anderson, J. G. McCall, C. T. White, J. S. Wall, F. W. Henderson, J. R. Stone, A. F. Rose, S. A. Benham, B. Simpson, Jess Ballou, Paul Willoughby of Ozona, Lewis Brook; Misses Ruth and Ruby Wood, Lois Bradley, Cora Hill, Hayde Willoughby, Lillian Roberts, Ida Mae and Elizabeth Souther, Harriet Cook, Rose Stallings, Fay Wall, Lucile Benham, Nellie Anderson, Bessie Wallace of Fort Worth and the honorees.

Woman's Missionary Society

The regular business session of the Woman's Missionary Society was held at the Methodist tabernacle Monday afternoon.

The Mission Study Class will meet Monday, June 28, at 4:00 p. m.

The Story Telling Hour.

Fifty children gathered at Ogden Park last Saturday at 5 o'clock for the regular story hour conducted by the Tuesday Club. Mrs. W. N. White had charge of the afternoon's entertainment. She told the story of "A Day in Flanders" by De La Rame, illustrating it with pictures of "Reubens," "The Cathedral of Antwerp," "The Elevation of the Cross" and scenes of Flemish home life.

Mrs. F. W. Henderson will be the entertainer next Saturday.

Informal Dance.

One of the most enjoyable features of social life of the city was an informal dance given Tuesday night at the Knights of Pythias hall in the Gibbons building. Music for twenty numbers was furnished by the Mexican orchestra.

Delicious fruit punch was served throughout the evening.

Under the chaperonage of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Benham, the following were in attendance: Messrs. and Mesdames C. T. White, D. J. Wood, W. H. Ballou, Mrs. Henry Gray of Llano; Mrs. Misses Lucile Benham, Fay S. S. Graham, while Mrs. Lewis Brook received the booby.

At the conclusion of the games the hostess served a delicious salad course to the following guests: Mesdames S. S. Addie Puckett of Gainesville,

Sticking Pins in Nutmegs

That is the expert's way of telling the good ones. The natural oil in the nutmeg is what gives it its flavoring qualities—the more oil there is the greater the nutmeg's value for flavoring.

Stick a pin in a nutmeg that is full of this oil and oil will ooze out of the pin hole when the pin is withdrawn—little or no oil will follow the pin if the nutmeg is a poor one. So you see wherein two tins of perfectly pure nutmeg may differ widely in flavoring value—the one kind being ground from oily nutmegs and the other from nutmegs that could not pass the pin sticking test.

You must be certain that besides being pure the ground nutmeg you buy is oily nutmeg. Looks tell in a way—the oily kind is a smooth, rich brown—the other kind looks more grainy and is specked with black woolly particles. Your best assurance is to buy a brand that is packed by a company of integrity and reputation—and so packed that none of the flavor is lost through evaporation. Every bit of White Swan Ground Nutmeg is made from nutmegs that have, in the highest degree, passed the pin-sticking test—that are full of the oil that flavors. That's why White Swan Nutmeg costs a little more but, because it takes so little to give a rich flavor, is so economical to use.

Your grocer sells and recommends White Swan Nutmeg—and other White Swan Goods—ask him.

Five Hundred Club.

Miss Ida Mae Souther was hostess last Friday afternoon to members of the Five Hundred club and a few invited guests at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Macy.

Three tables of players enjoyed an interesting series of games, in which club prize for high score was awarded to Mrs. C. T. White, while guest prize was won by Miss Fay Wall.

Following the games the hostess served a delicious salad course, with an ice.

Club members in attendance included: Mesdames J. S. Anderson, J. G. McCall, J. R. Stone, J. S. Wall, C. T. White, G. V. Gansel, B. Simpson; Misses Elizabeth Souther and Lillian Roberts. Guests of the club for the afternoon were: Mesdames G. C. Kirk, S. A. Benham; Misses Rose Stallings, Fay Wall.

It was decided to disband for the summer months, and no more meetings of the club will be held until some time in September.

Entertains Little Folks.

Complimentary to little Misses Lota Clyde Head and Kathryn Smith of Rochelle, Mrs. Jess Merwin entertained a number of little folks Tuesday afternoon from 4:00 to 6:00 o'clock.

Games and contests were enjoyed by the little folks to their hearts' content, and refreshments of delicious ice cream and cake were served by the hostess just before departure of her guests, all of whom declared Mrs. Merwin a most delightful entertainer.

The little folks who enjoyed the afternoon were: Mary Louise Davis, Rachael Wilkerson, Louise Richardson, Marjorie McCall, Jean Gray of Llano, Dorothy Wood, Frances Samuel, Mary Eugenia Wood and the honorees.

The Young People's Missionary Society held their business meeting at the home of Mrs. J. T. Mann Friday, June 18. It was quite interesting to note that nineteen new members were added during the meeting.

Informally Entertained.

Last Friday afternoon a few ladies gathered at the W. P. Bevans home to meet and visit with Mrs. Dr. Anderson of Brady. The games of "Hearts" was indulged in and Mrs. Louie Callan carried off the honors, having won the most games and was presented with a hand embroidered bath towel by Mrs. Bevans. Mrs. W. W. Russell and Mrs. Anderson carried out a musical program which was greatly enjoyed by all. Ice cream and cake were served after which the ladies departed, voting Mrs. Bevans a pleasant hostess and regretting that the afternoon passed all too quickly. —Menard Messenger.

Benefit Performance.

Members of the local Rebekah lodge are making extensive preparations for the presentation of the 3-act comedy "A Southern Cinderella" at the opera house next Monday night by the ladies of East Sweden.

The ladies appeared at East Sweden last month, and their work in the bill created a most favorable impression. The bill is replete in comedy interwoven with numerous dramatic climaxes, and those who attend Monday night's performance will witness a high-class performance, as well as assist the local lodge in their efforts to raise funds with which to defray expenses of the degree staff to the annual district convention.

A number of high-class specialties will be introduced between the acts by the Rebekahs.

Two Different Effects

The quality of food is very largely determined by the ingredients in the baking powder with which it is made. Cream of tartar baking powders, such as Dr. Price's, add only healthful qualities to the food.

The cream of tartar of Dr. Price's Cream Baking Powder as used in food has the same wholesome effect on the digestive system as the cream of tartar in grapes, from which it is derived.

In like manner it is in evidence that the unwholesome effects of alum, which is a mineral acid salt, exist in food made with alum baking powder.

There is a clause on baking powder labels which names all the ingredients. Read it and let it guide you.

Don't Forget the Date and Place

The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS

BY CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF SCENES IN THE PLAY

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—On Misery Creek, at the foot of a rock from which he has fallen, Sally Miller finds George Lescott, a landscape painter, unconscious, and after reviving him, goes for assistance.

CHAPTER II—Samson South and Sally, taking Lescott to Samson's home, are met by Spicer South, head of the family, who tells them that Jesse Purvey has been shot, and that Samson is suspected of the crime. Samson denies it.

CHAPTER III—The shooting of Jesse Purvey breaks the truce of Hollman-South feud.

CHAPTER IV—Samson reproves Tamarack Spicer for telling Sally that Jim Hollman is on the trail with bloodhounds hunting the man who shot Purvey.

CHAPTER V—The bloodhounds lose the trail at Spicer South's door. Lescott discovers artistic ability in Samson. While sketching with Lescott on the mountain, Tamarack discovers Samson to a jeering crowd of mountaineers. Samson thrashes him and denounces his as the "truce-buster" who shot Purvey.

CHAPTER VI—Lescott tries to persuade Samson to go to New York with him and develop his talent. Sally, loyal but heartbroken, furthers Lescott's efforts. The dance at Wile McCager's threatens trouble to Samson and Lescott.

CHAPTER VII—At the dance Samson tells the South clan he is going to leave the mountains. Lescott goes home to New York. Samson bids Spicer and Sally farewell and follows.

CHAPTER VIII—In New York Samson studies art and learns much of city ways. Drennie Lescott persuades Wilfred Horton, her dilettante lover, to do a man's work in the world.

CHAPTER IX—Prompted by her love, Sally teaches herself to write. Horton throws himself into the business world and becomes well hated by predatory financiers and politicians. At a Bohemian resort Samson meets William Farbish, sportsy social parasite, and Horton's enemy.

CHAPTER X—Farbish sees Samson and Drennie dining together unchaperoned at the Wigwam roadhouse. He conspires with others to make Horton jealous and succeeds.

CHAPTER XI—Farbish brings Norton and Samson together at the Kenmore club's shooting lodge, and forces an open rupture, expecting Samson to kill Horton and so rid the political and financial thugs of the crusader. Samson exposes the plot and thrashes the conspirators.

When the cabin door opened, its jamb framed a patch of yellow candle light, and, at the center, a slender silhouetted figure, in a fluttering, eager attitude of uncertainty. The figure turned slightly to one side, and as it did so, the man saw clasped in her right hand the rifle, which had been his mission, bequeathed to her in trust. She hesitated, and the man, invisible in the shadow, once more imitated the bird note, but this time it was so low and soft that it seemed the voice of a whispering whippoorwill.

Then, with a sudden glad little cry, she came running with her old feet grace down to the road.

Samson had vaulted the stile and stood in the full moonlight. As he saw her coming he stretched out his arms and his voice broke from his throat in a half-hoarse, passionate cry: "Sally!"

It was the only word he could have spoken just then, but it was all that was necessary. It told her everything. It was an outburst from a heart too full of emotion to grope after speech, the cry of a man for the One Woman who alone can call forth an infection more eloquent than phrases and poetry. And, as she came into his outstretched arms as straight and direct as a homing pigeon, they closed about her in a convulsive grip that held her straining to him, almost crushing her in the tempest of his emotion.

For a time there was no speech, but to each of them it seemed that their tumultuous heartbeating must sound above the night music, and the telegraphy of heartbeats tells enough. Later they would talk, but now, with a gloriously wild sense of being together, with a mutual intoxication of joy because all that they had dreamed was true, and all that they had feared was untrue, they stood there under the skies clasping each other—with the rifles between their breasts. Then as he held her close, he wondered that a shadow of doubt could ever have existed. He wondered if, except in some nightmare of hallucination, it had ever existed.

The flutter of her heart was like that of a rapturous bird, and the play of her breath on his face like the fragrance of the elder blossoms.

These were their stars twinkling overhead. These were their hills, and their moon was smiling on their trust. He had gone and seen the world that lured him; he had met its difficulties and faced its puzzles. He had even felt his feet wandering at the last from the path that led back to her, and now, with her lithe figure close held in his embrace, and her red-brown hair brushing his temples, he marveled how such an instant of doubt could have existed. He knew only that the silver of the moon and the kiss of the breeze and the clasp of her soft arms about his neck were all parts of one great miracle. And she, who had waited and almost despaired, not taking count of what she had suffered, felt her knees grow weak, and her head grow dizzy with sheer happiness, and wondered if it were not too marvelous to be true. And, looking very steadfastly into his eyes, she saw there the gleam that once had frightened her; the gleam that spoke of something stronger and more compelling than his love. It no longer frightened her, but made her soul sing, though it was more intense than it had ever been before, for now she knew that it was she herself who brought it to his pupils—and that nothing would ever be stronger.

But they had much to say to each other, and finally, Samson broke the silence:

"Did ye think I wasn't a-comin' back, Sally?" he questioned, softly. At that moment he had no realization that his tongue had ever fashioned smoother phrases. And she, too, who had been making war on crude idioms, forgot, as she answered:

"Ye done said ye was comin'." Then she added a happy lie. "I knowed plumb shore ye'd do it."

After a while she drew away and said, slowly:

"Samson, I've done kept the old rifle-gun ready for ye. Ye said ye'd need it bad when ye come back, an' I've took care of it."

She stood there holding it, and her voice dropped almost to a whisper as she added:

"It's been a lot of comfort to me sometimes, because it was your'n. I knew if ye stopped keerin' fer me ye wouldn't let me keep it—an' as long as I had it I—" She broke off, and the fingers of one hand touched the weapon caressingly.

The man knew many things now that he had not known when he said good-by. He recognized in the very gesture with which she stroked the old walnut stock the pathetic heart-ache of a nature which had been denied the fulfillment of its strength, and which had been bestowing on an inanimate object something that might almost have been the stirring of the mother instinct for a child. Now, thank God, her life should never lack anything that a flood-tide of love could bring to it. He bent his head in a mute sort of reverence.

After a long while they found time for the less wonderful things.

"I got your letter," he said, seriously, "and I came at once." As he began to speak of concrete facts he dropped again into ordinary English and did not know that he had changed his manner of speech.

For an instant Sally looked up into his face, then with a sudden laugh, she informed him:

"I can say 'isn't' instead of 'hain't', too. How did you like my writing?"

He held her off at arm's length and looked at her proudly, but under his gaze her eyes fell and her face flushed with a sudden diffidence and a new shyness of realization. She wore a calico dress, but at her throat was a soft little bow of ribbon. She was no longer the totally unself-conscious wood nymph, though as natural and instinctive as in other days. Suddenly she drew away from him a little, and her hands went slowly to her breast and crested there. She was fronting a great crisis, but, in the first flush of joy she had forgotten it. She had spent lonely nights struggling for rudiments; she had sought and fought to refashion herself, so that, if he came, he need not be ashamed of her. And now he had come and, with a terrible clarity and distinctness, she realized how pitifully little she had been able to accomplish. Would she pass muster? She stood there before him.

Reside busy on duty as an officer irritated, self-conscious and palpitating, then her voice came in a whisper:

"Samson, dear, I'm not holdin' you to any promise. Those things we said were a long time back. Maybe we'd better forget 'em now and begin all over again."

But again he crushed her in his arms and his voice rose triumphantly: "Sally, I have no promises to take back, and you have made none that I'm ever going to let you take back—not while life lasts!"

Her laugh was the delicious music of happiness.

"I don't want to take them back," she said. Then, suddenly, she added, importantly: "I wear shoes and stockings now, and I've been to school a little. I'm awfully—awfully ignorant, Samson, but I've started, and I reckon you can teach me."

His voice choked. Then, her hands strayed up, and clasped themselves about his head.

"Oh, Samson," she cried, as though someone had struck her, "you've cut yore hair."

"It will grow again," he laughed. But he wished that he had not had to make that excuse. Then, being honest, he told her all about Adrienne Lescott—even about how, after he believed that he had been cut off by his uncle and himself, he had had his moments of doubt. Now that it was all so clear, now that there could never be doubt, he wanted the woman who had been so true a friend to know the girl whom he loved. He loved them both, but was in love with only one. He wanted to present to Sally the friend who had made him, and to the friend who had made him the Sally of whom he was proud. He wanted to tell Adrienne that now he could answer her question—that each of them meant to the other exactly the same thing; they were friends of the rarer sort, who had for a little time been in danger of mistaking their comradeship for passion.

As they talked, sitting on the stile, Sally held the rifle across her knees. Except for their own voices and the soft chorus of night sounds, the hills were wrapped in silence—a silence as soft as velvet. Suddenly, in a pause, there came to the girl's ears the crackling of a twig in the woods. With the old, instinctive training of the mountains she leaped noiselessly down, and for an instant stood listening with intent ears. Then, in a low, tense whisper, as she thrust the gun into the man's hands, she cautioned:

"Git out of sight. Maybe they've done found out ye've come back—maybe they're trailin' ye!"

With an instant shock she remembered what mission had brought him back, and what was his peril; and he, too, for whom the happiness of the moment had swallowed up other things, came back to a recognition of facts. Dropping into the old wood-craft, he melted out of sight into the shadow, thrusting the girl behind him, and crouched against the fence, throwing the rifle forward, and peering into the shadows. As he stood there, balancing the gun once more in his hands, old instincts began to stir, old battle hunger to rise, and old realizations of primitive things to assault him. Then, when they had waited with bated breath until they were both reassured, he rose and swung the stock to his shoulder several times. With something like a sigh of contentment, he said, half to himself:

"Hit feels mighty natural ter throw this old rifle-gun up. I reckon maybe I kin still shoot hit."

"I learned some things down there at school, Samson," said the girl, slowly, "and I wish—I wish you didn't have to use this."

"Jim Asberry is dead," said the man gravely.

"Yes," she echoed. "Jim Asberry's dead." She stopped there. Yet her sign completed the sentence as though she had added, "but he was only one of several. Your own went farther."

After a moment's pause, Samson added:

"Jesse Purvy's dead."

The girl drew back, with a frightened gasp. She knew what this meant, or thought she did.

"Jesse Purvy!" she repeated. "Oh, Samson, did ye—?" She broke off, and covered her face with her hands.

"No, Sally," he told her. "I didn't have to." He recited the day's occurrences, and they sat together on the stile, until the moon had sunk to the ridge top.

Capt. Sidney Callomb, who had been dispatched in command of a militia company to quell the trouble in the mountains, should have been a soldier by profession. All his enthusiasms were martial. His precision was military. His cool eye had a note of command which made itself obeyed. He had a rare gift of handling men, which made them ready to execute the impossible. But the elder Callomb had trained his son to succeed him at the head of a railroad system, and the young man had philosophically undertaken to satisfy his military ambitions with State Guard shoulder straps.

The deepest sorrow and mortification he had ever known was that which came to him when Tamarack Spicer, his prisoner of war and a man who had been surrendered on the strength of his personal guaranty, had been assassinated before his eyes. In some fashion, he must make amends. He realized, too, and it rankled deeply, that his men were not being genuinely used to serve the state, but as instruments of the Hollmans, and he had seen enough to distrust the Hollmans. Here, in Hixon, he was seeing things from only one angle. He meant to learn something more impartial.

SHARP, STABBING PAINS.

Often Tell of Weak Kidneys—The Following Statement Shows You
What to Do.

The sharp twinge of pain in the small of the back that strikes you after any sudden twist or awkward motion, may tell of weak kidneys.
And there are often disturbances of the urine—too frequent urination, scalding or burning pain during passage, discolored urine and sediment.

Doan's Kidney Pills are prepared especially for weakened kidneys, kidney backache and urinary disorders—have proven their merit in thousands of cases. Can Brady readers demand more convincing proof than the following:

W. L. McAllister, 722 E. Baker St., Brownwood, Texas, says: "I was seized with a sharp pain across my back and twinges across my loins when I stooped. Nothing gave me relief and seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I got a supply. After taking one box, I felt great relief.
I used a further supply and since then I have had no trouble."
