Johnson's One Miss Earns First Place In Week Ten

misses in Week 10 were in high school games as Olton and Lazbuddie both lost.

Most everyone seemed to favor the New York Jets too but Denver held on to win.

The tie-breaker was another puny Cowboy showing, Dallas 13, Eagles 16.

Two contestants picked 13 out of 14 correct. Doug Johnson missed the Olton-Morton game and Eufemia Torres of Muleshoe missed the Detroit-Miami game.

Using the tie-breaker, Doug Johnson grabbed the first place cash of $20 with his guess of Dallas 13, Eagles 23, only 7 points off. Torres won second place of $10.

Seven contestants picked third place playoff. Both Roy

The last few contests have been pretty easy for serious Parson were 12 points off the contestants. Most of the tie-breaker and we have awarded each of them $5.

> Others at 12 correct and their points off the tie-breaker were: Jerry Roach (15); Frances Johnson (16); Liz Torres (16); Kay Venable (18); Jessica Stowers (21).

There is now a two-way tie for the point total grand prize of $150 with three contests to go. Aubrey Parson and Eufemia Torres share the lead at 99 points. Francisco Torres is two back at 97.

The standings are elsewhere in today's paper. Anything can happen the rest of the way, especially as contestants try to find underdog winners to improve their positions.

Thanks for playing the 12 of 14 and tied for the contest. Good luck and good pickin'.

YE EDITOR AND wife (the Bull Good Old Girl) have been Town political "junkies" most of our married lives. In our business, you have to have a little more than a passing interest in But what happened Tuesday almost defies belief. The liberal national media likes to tell their audience how to vote.

This is no big secret if you are as much as a semi-regular viewer of the evening news.

According to the "Big Three" TV networks prior to Tuesday, you might as well have stayed home on election day if you had in mind voting for the George W. Bush-Dick Cheney

Only as it neared election day did the commentators admit that Bush-Cheney MIGHT win a few states. Tom Brokaw even stated that Bush might have had a one per cent overall lead. Usually on election night, I have my yellow pad, my TV remote control, and I'm in a "do not disturb" mode. I have to admit that in a lot of elections, whichever candidate I was supporting may have already admitted defeat prior to the 10

Tuesday's election, however, was more than a little bit different. True to form, the networks got involved in the decisionmaking, "calling" the state of Florida very early for Al Gore. Meantime, Bush-Cheney had large leads in both Ohio and Wisconsin, but these vital states were not "called" for the GOP candidates for another couple of hours. That was another momentum-breaker. Carol and I were watching Fox News, which sometimes is not quite as biased. But even Fox went along with the Florida decision. What we couldn't understand was that when the networks showed the "raw" votes for Florida, Gore was firmly in second place, and didn't make it real tight until late. By now, you know the rest: After pressure from the Bush campaign, the networks took Florida out of the Gore column, and back in the "undecided" column. By then, with the polls being open on the West Coast for two hours after the networks' first proclamation, I understand that those making calls to get out the vote for Bush threw in the towels and went home early. Later of course, the TV guys gave Florida to Bush, and even proclaimed that he was the president-elect. . . . for an hour or so. Gore conceded to Bush, then later un-conceded. Luckily, Ye Ed had gone to bed by then, or my fluctuating blood pressure couldn't have stood it. Methinks millions of people across the USA are distracted and stressed out--in addition to the candidates, their families and staffs--and it won't end until the outcome is finalized. This is worse than a Super Bowl in overtime, with teams only able to play a set of downs every few hours, stretching into 3-4

This "playing God" by the networks may have cost Bush the election, if in fact it has not. I get so fed-up with the TV news commentators. I wish they had to run for their jobs, so we could vote them out. What ever happened to "equal time???"

We have known for some time that in order for the Republican candidates to win a national election, they have to run against the media in addition to their opponents on the ballot. Yet we condemn Russia's state-controlled TV!

County Voters Favor Christmas Bazaar Set Bush/Cheney By 82.8%

Parmer County voters went along with the trend of regional and state voters on Tuesday. Actually, the George W. Bush/Dick Cheney ticket was favored in Parmer County by 82.8 per cent of the voters.

Across the region, Bush received 75 per cent of the votes, while his margin statewide was just below 60%.

Friona's biggest voting box, Precinct 101, gave Bush-Cheney 83.2 per cent of its votes, 431-84. Precinct 202, Friona Community Center, went even higher, with 91.2 per cent, 124-11.

In Bovina, where Demos have always come forth, Bush-Cheney's margin was "only" 67.4 per cent, 211 votes to 98.

County totals showed the Bush-Cheny ticket winning, 2272 votes to 447, or 82.8 per cent. Ralph Nader of the "Green party," managed 15

The Bovina ISD Board of Trustees will hold their regular monthly meeting on Monday, November 13, at 7 p.m. in the School Administration Building.

Bovina High School and Bovina Elementary School received Recognized ratings from TEA earlier this year. Bovina ISD and Bovina Middle School each received Acceptable ratings.

Information about the ratings and the AEIS system will be presented and discussed at the meeting.

"Oh No, I Meant To Poke Gore!"

Don't you imagine that is what both Algore and Dubya said when they realized the deadlock? Nothing like a good damn to vent some anger.

A lot of small town news-aper columnists like me and Bill had to scramble for a topic for this week's column. Damn! I was all set to write about the next president no matter who it was, but there wasn't one by the time we went to press.

Even if they name Dubya as the winner, that great American, Algore, and his band of merry lawyers will protest so we won't know the identity of the next President for a long time.

How could that happen?
Only in America. Carol Ellis says if Gore wins, Texas should secede from the United States. I nominate Willie Nelson to lead us.

What a great time for

What a great time for column writers and high school civics teachers. Presenting: "The Constitution Live and in Color." Millions of people are yelling to do away with the Electoral College. Most of them do not even know how the number of electoral votes are computed, much less the real purpose of electoral votes as defined in the Constitution (remember that document?)

I've discovered that the louder people yell about specific issues, the less they tend to know about the issue itself. It is a theory I have proven more than once.

What a great time in Queen Hill Rod was elected to the United States Senate representing New York. No big surprise. What happened to the aggressive "New York media" that was going to really rip Hill Rod during the campaign?

'Course Hill Rod won her first elective office. If Dubya becomes President, Hill Rod will good will good to be a support of the support of the will run for President in 2004 in spite of the fact she promised New Yorkers she would serve the entire six years. If Algore wins, she will run in 2008.

She is the first presiden-tial spouse elected to Congress. Senate Republicans are saying they will treat her really cold and mean and not give her any committee watching but I expect the Republicans to "weenee out" in their treatment of Hill Rod.

Elsewhere, Senator Chuck Robb of Virginia was defeated after 12 years in the Senate by Republican George Allen. Chuck is Lyndon Johnson's son-in-law and Allen is the son of former Redskins coach George Allen.

Senator William Roth of Delaware was defeated. If you have a Roth IRA then you know him. It is named

Senator Roth was trying for his sixth term in the Senate but his age, 79, became a factor they say. He stumbled twice in public. Heck, I stumble twice between my recliner and the

Because they thought he was an old nincompoop, they voted him out. Strom Thurmond will soon be 98 years-old. He is still a Senator. Roth should file an age discrimination suit against the Delaware voters.

A dead man in Missouri was voted in for Senator. His widow assured Missourans she could do the job just as well so they voted in the dead guy. Pity poor Republican Senator John Ashcroft who was running against the dead

He couldn't say that the widow was not qualified. That would be mean. He couldn't say, "my opponent's dead, vote for me." That would be mean too. One national news report said it is against the Federal election law for a dead person to be Under impeached president Billy Jeff Clinton and his administration, rules of law and the Constitution don't matter much anyhow. You are about to find that out in Florida.

Vice President Algore addressed the media yester-day about his precarious position. He said that for more than 200 years the nation had survived because it is a nation that has followed the rule of law.

He didn't mention "no controlling legal authority", fundraising from foreigners, and lying under oath. The rule of law is good when it suits the Democrats' selfish purposes. And so the next four years of U.S. history is in the hands of some little old transplanted New York geezers who took their meager income and bought condos in Palm Beach, Florida. Palm Beach county is not exactly a pocket of poverty. Rush Limbaugh lives in Palm Beach county.

But the little old condo commandoes got confused and as one lady put it, "I poked Buchanan and I meant to poke Gore." They said this, of course, after Bush was declared winner at 2:30 a.m.

But do not worry. The Reverend Jesse Jackson is on the scene. America's number doubt fight to the death to prevent Dubya from appoin-ting any Supreme Court justices, therefore protecting us all from further repression.

He disparages Justices Clarence Thomas and Atonin Scalia as racist judges in spite of the fact that both of them were approved by the Democrats. Scalia was approved 98-0 by the Senate.

Maybe by next week a president will be declared but I wouldn't count on it. Ain't politics great?

Have your people get in touch with my people and we'll do lunch. Go Big Red!

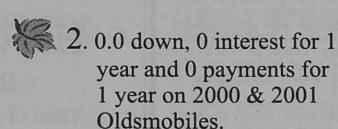

COTTON FARMERS were making progress as fields began to dry from recent rains. Then 4-5 inches of snow Tuesday halted the cotton harvest and added to concerns of area farmers.
