The many friends of the family will regret to learn of the serious illness of Mrs. T. H. Marsden at her home in the western portion of the city. Mrs. Marsden is numbered among the oldest residents of the county, having resided in Brady many years. On account of her age, little hopes are held out by attending physicians for her recovery, and her children living at different points in the State have been notified. Will Marsden who is attending the summer school at State University, came in Tuesday and others are expected today and tomorrow.

Mrs. Danielson Improving.

A letter received yesterday morning from Scott & White sanitarium in Temple, stated that Mrs. C. J. Danielson of Melvin had undergone an operation for goitre at that place and was making a splendid recovery. While the operation is considered a very delicate one, it was pronounced highly successful, and the many Brady and McCulloch county friends of the family will be pleased to learn that Mrs. Danielson's complete recovery is a matter of only a few weeks.

CONSIDERABLE PROPERTY DAMAGE WROUGHT.

Buildings Unroofed Telephone and Electric Wires Blown Down and Crops Damaged.

A severe wind storm which struck Brady Wednesday night shortly after 1:00 o'clock occasioned considerable damage to property in the city and immediate vicinity, the loss to crops and buildings being estimated at several thousand dollars.

The most serious property damage was done in the oil mill and compress district in the eastern portion of the city. About forty squares of roof were of the large smokestacks was blown almost down, but the guy wires proved strong enough to hold it up and thus prevented possible damage to the roof of the building by the falling stack. The total damage sustained by the mill is estimated at between $700 and $800, and is covered by insurance.

In the up-town business district some minor damage was sustained in demolished awnings and broken windows and signs. The north half of the sheet iron awning on the west side of the Commercial National bank building was blown off, falling out in the public square and bringing down the electric light cable and telephone wires strung along the north side of the square. blown off the plant of the Brady Compress Co., while the Farmers Union Warehouse Co., a short distance east of the compress, lost about one-third of the roof of their big warehouse. A large portion of the roof of the big seed house of the Brady Cotton Oil Co. was blown off and the engine room was unroofed. One tion of the awning in front of the W. R. Rice building on the northwest corner of the square was wrenched out of place by the force of the wind but was held intact by the strong fastenings. A number of signs were blown down around the square, while several limbs from trees in the court house yard were blown off.

The Methodist church on South Blackburn street was probably damaged more than any other building outside the oil mill district. It was lifted off the blocks and moved six or eight feet to the south, and the walls badly warped out of line. On account of the age of the structure, the damage will be expensive to repair.

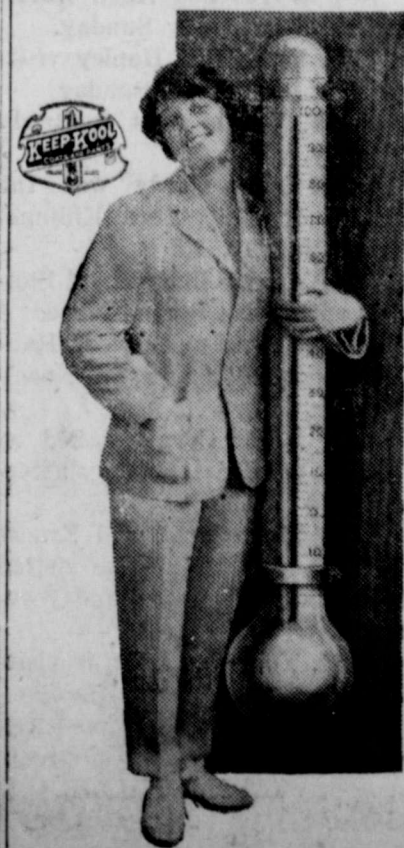

In the vicinity of the union depot only slight damage was sustained, the heaviest losers being Mann Bros. Ice Co. whose big water tank was blown off the derrick into Brady creek and badly mashed up. A large door on the south side of the union passenger depot waiting room which had been left open for the night was blown to with such force as to break it squarely in twain lengthwise. Chimneys and flues in all portions of the city were demolished and numerous window lights were blown out by the wind.

In the East Sweden settlement six miles northeast of the city much damage is reported. The East Sweden Presbyterian church was demolished, the building and all furnishings being a total loss, while a short distance away, a rent house on C. J. Hendrickson's farm was lifted into the air and carried several feet before being broken up. Seven people are reported to have been in the building at the time, but all escaped with minor bruises and scratches. It was in this vicinity that the loss of crops will be heaviest, the young cotton being stripped of every leaf by the terrific force of the wind, leaving nothing but the stubs of the stalks standing.

Last Wednesday while Stella, the eight year old daughter of Mr. S. C. Squires, was walking in the rear of the binder in the harvest field, she had the misfortune to be bitten by a large rattlesnake. Dr. Locker came from Mercury as quick as possible, and, though the little girl suffered intensely for more than twenty-four hours, she is now out of danger. The snake had just bitten one of the horses twice. This fact probably saved the child's life, as its poison was to some extent exhausted before it bit her.

(Too late for last week.)
Editor Brady Standard:

"What is so rare as a norther in June, when overcoats and fires are in tune?" However it is a relief from those very hot winds we were having, and rain is needed badly.

Wonderful Prosperity in Texas.

The people of Texas have never seen such wonderful prosperity as they are enjoying at present.

Farmers have a ready sale at high prices for everything they can grow. Stockmen can not supply the increasing demand for all kinds of live stock.

In addition to this, Texas has been blessed with fine weather and plenty of rain. For several years we have enjoyed most favorable seasons for farms and grass lands.

This is the time to improve the comforts of your home, enlarge your barn, arrange for permanent and convenient water about your premises.

As the amount of land never changes and the population increases rapidly, land will never be any cheaper. This is the time to buy a tract adjoining you so as to give you more land to cultivate, or more grass and water so you can grow more live stock.

If you have land to offer as security you can get money on easy terms and at low interest from Brown Bros., Austin, Texas.

Applications for loans may be made through S. W. Hughes & Co. of Brady. Abstracts of title to your land may be submitted to Brown Bros. along with your application for loan, which will insure prompt service.

Bowel Complaints in India.

In a lecture at one of the Des Moines, Iowa, churches a missionary from India told of going into the interior of India, where he was taken sick, that he had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy with him and believed that it saved his life. This remedy is used successfully in India both as a preventive and cure for cholera. You may know from this that it can be depended upon for the milder forms of bowel complaint that occur in this country. Obtainable everywhere.

SHE'S THERE BECAUSE SHE PERFORMS— THE 3400 r. p. m. CHALMERS

Most cars start alike. But very few finish alike. Therein comes a mighty difference.

Step on the little button 10 months after date and you'll readily note the inequality.

One is sluggish, "dead", without emotion, and responds to the touch with the speed of old-time oxen responding to the lash.

The other is alive, alert, ready; radiates desire to plunge ahead.

This is the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers kind. The other kind is the species known to the trade as "one-year" cars.

Chalmers makes a five-year car. There's many an old 1909 Chalmers 30 Blue Bird giving a good account of itself today. You'll find the everlasting pep there five years from the day you take your first turn at the wheel.

Largely because of the 3400 r. p. m. engine. Which delivers mighty power with easy effort.

It's mostly in the design. The pistons are aluminum, about two pounds lighter per piston; the reciprocating parts lighter, which eases up the thrust on the bearings.

Then the crank-shaft, which is very heavy, and balanced to the weight of a hair in a special Chalmers device, spins at the rate of 3400 revolutions per minute.

It means excellent reserve power. For at 10 miles an hour the engine is turning up only 500 r. p. m. while at 20 she is doing about 1000 r. p. m. So that at excessive road speed she has the punch to deliver when called upon.

16% of her power is used at 10 miles an hour. So that she has 60% to 84%—when a twisting, hilly road looms ahead, when a sharp corner with a rugged grade hoves in sight; when the man ahead is showing you too much dust.

You'll like the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers for one single little reason. She sure can perform.

Ask your dealer about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

BADLY BURNED.

Former McCulloch County Citizen Injured in Fire.

The following account of the burning of the Baptist parsonage and church at Blanket Monday, in which Rev. J. T. Hamilton, a former well known McCulloch county citizen, sustained painful burns appeared in Tuesday's Brownwood Bulletin, and will be of interest to the many friends of the family in McCulloch county:

Rev. J. T. Hamilton, pastor of the Baptist Church at Blanket, was painfully burned late yesterday when his residence and the church property adjoining were destroyed by fire. Mr. Hamilton was burned about the face and head, and while his injuries are not serious they are causing much pain today.

The fire that destroyed about five thousand dollars worth of property originated in the parsonage, occupied by Rev. J. T. Hamilton and family. Miss Ada Hamilton, daughter of the minister, had lighted an oil stove, and placed an iron over the fire. She then went into an adjoining room to wait for the iron to heat, and after a few minutes, returned to the kitchen to find the room in flames. Blanket has no fire fighting equipment, but the entire community answered the alarm and with buckets of water, wet blankets and other fighting apparatus labored faithfully to extinguish the blaze. The Baptist church was destroyed along with the parsonage, and but for the heroic work of the people of the entire town, the residence of Clifford Street, across the street from the Hamilton home, would have been burned.

The furnishings of three rooms of the parsonage were removed, and the furniture of the church was also removed, though considerably damaged. The furnishings of all the homes in the vicinity of the fire were also hastily removed, the people fearing that the fire might spread to other homes in the same block.

The Baptist people carried about $2000 insurance on the buildings burned, and the loss will reach about $5000.

Forethought.

People are learning that a little forethought often saves them a big expense. Here is an instance: E. W. Archer, Caldwell, Ohio, writes: "I do not believe that our family has been without Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy since we commenced keeping house years ago. When we go on an extended visit we take it with us." Obtainable everywhere.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Annual Convention Held in El Paso One of the Most Interesting on Record---400 News- paper Men Shown Time of Their Lives.

Can you imagine a family of some three or four hundred members out on a lark?

If so, you have a faint idea of what the annual convention of The Texas Press Association is like. For the "Press Gang" is just one big family of boys and girls (some of them quite well along on the shadowy side of life, but whose hearts are still as young as those of the youngest members) and along with the serious consideration of business matters pertaining to the craft, they, each of them, partake of the full quota of pleasure incident to the occasion.

The past week's convention at El Paso was of more than ordinary interest, and is generally pronounced one of the greatest conventions ever held. Nothing was left undone for the pleasure or entertainment of the craft.
Not one single item was overlooked.
Concentration of some 320 newspaper folks was had in Fort Worth early Monday morning. The visitors were taken in hand by the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce and breakfasted and entertained until the time of departure. And thereby Fort Worth won a warm place in hearts of the craft, and when that city shied her hat in the ring as a candidate for next year's convention, she was accorded enthusiastic support.

Had a vote been taken, undoubtedly Geo. D. Hunter, general passenger agent for The Texas & Pacific Railway company, would have been acclaimed the most popular individual upon the trip, for Mr. Hunter placed at the disposal of the delegates
one of the finest and most completely equipped trains that could be gotten together. Seven Standard Pullmans, an observation coach, diner, baggage coach and the biggest and best locomotive the T. & P. possessed composed the "Special" that carried the members of the "Fourth Estate" from Fort Worth to El Paso, and the Special was given right-of-way over everything on the T. & P.—even the crack "Sunshine Special" for once taking second rank. Not content with making every arrangement for the comfort and convenience of his guests, Mr.
Hunter still further placed the craft under obligations to himself and to the T. & P. Ry. by distributing souvenirs—fans for the ladies and watch fobs for the men. Unless you have taken just such a trip,
you cannot imagine the pleasure and comfort of the journey. It can only be described as making yourself comfortable in a luxurious home, and having cities, plains, deserts, fertile valleys and wonderful mountain scenery pass in kaleidoscopic procession before your view. The observatory on the T. & P. is provided with the latest magazines to interest the passengers when the wonderful outdoor sights begin to pall.
Still further entertain-

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's.

Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.

ment was accorded by the Victoria thoughtfully provided by Sanger Bros. of Dallas. The baggage car "ahead" was loaded with those premier "Made-in-Texas" drinks, Dr. Pepper and Cicle A Ginger Ale furnished by the Artesian Bottling Manufacturing Co. of Waco; also that most refreshing and appetizing drink, Welch's Grape Juice; and the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Dallas sent along as a treat 500 bottles of that nationally famous and popular beverage. Then the Brown Cracker & Candy Co. of Dallas made themselves "solid"
with the newspaper folks by distributing among the ladies and young folks boxes of chocolate candy and those dainty and appetizing little cakes so popular in every home.

Stops of one hour each were made at Abilene and Sweetwater.
At the former place the delegates were given a ride over the city under the auspices of the Business League, and the enterprise and business activities of that city were firmly impressed upon each visitor. At Sweetwater the newspaper folks were treated to a remarkable spread—a "Made in Nolan County" banquet. Needless to say, the banquet was one for which there could be naught but praise—and the banqueters showed their appreciation by overstaying the schedule by 15 minutes, while the T. & P. "Sunshine Special" took the side-track and patiently awaited the pleasure of the "Special's" guests.

It was indeed a pleasure to meet up with former Brady folks at Sweetwater, Mrs. T. D.
Watkins, T. G. Simmons and C.
W. Clark being among the number,
and to learn that all were prospering and enthusiastic boosters for their new home, even though ever retaining a heart's interest in the home left behind.

It is difficult to describe the wonderful country through which the T. & P. Ry. has laid its shining ribbons. When you see vast stretches of desert land whose monotony is varied only by stunted brush, cactus and grease-wood, you wonder at the vast enterprise that prompted the connecting of such an unlikely spot with civilization by means of the iron horse. It is not until an attractive little village, surrounded by fertile fields and gardens and prosperous-looking farms, springs into view, much like an oasis that you realize just how this wonder has been wrought.
For the vast stretches of desert land are as fertile as the proverbial Valley of the Nile—
only water having been denied to complete the garden of Eden.
This failure of nature has been overcome by man, and the big irrigation ditches accomplish the transformation from deserts to oases. So, while the fact remains that the annual rainfall throughout this section amounts to only 8 to 12 inches, and the most of that falling in torrents which occur once or twice a year, nevertheless human ingenuity has overcome the difficulty and reclaimed what was apparently waste land.

The towns and villages enroute, quite naturally, vary in size, pretension and appearance.
Some are composed entirely of squallid adobe huts, occupied by Mexicans and their more or less numerous family members. The towns look as though they had

ABOUT SEVENTY-FIVE PER CENT OF ALL THE DISC PLOWS SOLD IN TEXAS ARE THE EMERSON STANDARD.

We think there is a reason, and it must be a good one.

One would be that they are perhaps cheap. Not that. They are no cheaper than most of other disc plows. Their price though is in line. More merchants selling the Standard than. No, not that, but a merchant handling the Standard usually sells more plows than all his competitors. The answer is they are THE BEST ALL AROUND DISC PLOW ON THE MARKET. They are longer lived, they do the work better and they pull lighter. Ask the man that owns one then come in and if you are still unconvinced, let us demonstrate one to you.

been weather-beaten and sun-baked for ages—and doubtless they have. Then there are neat-appearing towns, the adobe houses in which are carefully plastered and maintained, and in which splendid brick buildings give a substantial and prosperous air. And, without question, the prosperity is real, for as we have before stated, the soil will grow almost anything if water is provided.

The wonder city, though, is El Paso—the gateway to the Southwest. Pen nor tongue can describe the attractiveness of this place. With a population of 71,000 inhabitants; with 40 miles of paved streets; with a $2,000,000 high school building in course of erection; with an achievement upon achievement brought to the attention of the visitors, one could scarce be anything but an enthusiastic admirer of El Paso and her citizens.

In order, in a measure, to more fully describe points of interest in the visit to El Paso, the editor will treat of this subject in a separate article next week. Incidentally mention will be made of scenes in Juarez, the Carranza soldiers, the mission built early in 100 and which still stands. Also the wonders of Clouderoft, N. M., located among the clouds 9,000 feet above sea level, will be made.

Ring 163 If You Have Items for These Columns-

Miles-Collins.

The following item from last week's issue of the Premont Enterprise regarding the marriage of Miss Elma Collins and Mr. Hoyt B. Miles, will be of interest to the many Brady friends of the bride. Mrs. Miles has visited here on a number of occasions and was the recipient of numerous social honors:

A beautiful and impressive ceremony uniting Miss Elma Collins and Mr. Hoyt B. Miles in marriage was solemnized Sunday evening June 4th, at 8:30 at the residence of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Collins, Rev. Sessions of Beeville, officiating.

The ceremony was performed in a lattice altar, covered with foliage, pink and white flowers and lighted by small electric lights, which was improvised on the lawn.

An artistic musical program was rendered on the porch of the residence. Miss Sarah Collins sang "My Dear," Mrs. Colter played Elsa's Bridal Procession, from Lohengrin and Mr. Colson sang "At Dawning" and "Beloved it is Morn."

The brides parents proceeded the ring bearer, Edward Collins Jr., carrying the ring in a silver tray amid real orange blossoms. He was followed by the flower girl, Dorothy O'Neil, strewing roses along the way before the bride and groom who entered together to the strains of Chant du Soldat. They formed a semi-circle at the altar where Rev. Sessions read the ring ceremony, during which Barcorolle, from Tales of Hoffman, was softly rendered. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played as a recessional.

After the ceremony was performed a reception was held. The home was profusely decorated in cut flowers and plants, pink and white predominating.

The table was covered with a Cecilian cloth, in the center of which was a large cut glass vase filled with Brides and Killarney roses. Streamers of pink tulle extended from the vase to the candle sticks, knotted with pink rose buds. Mrs. T. L. Alden served the cakes and Mrs. Dr. J. M. Knowlton served the individual creams, moulded in hearts and cupids. Mints and almonds were also served. During the evening, punch was served on the porch, the punch bowl being a large block of ice in which roses and ferns were frozen and which presented a beautiful appearance.

The bride was gowned in the brocaded crepe de chine, over white taffeta, trimmed in Duchesse lace. She carried a shower bouquet of jasmine, lillies of the valley and brides roses.

Mrs. Collins wore silver crepe de chine trimmed in silver lace. Miss Sarah Collins wore white organdy with lace jacket. Dorothy O'Neil wore white organdy and carried a french basket tied with tulle bows.

The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and costly presents in cut glass, silver and china and also a Baby Grand Steinway piano, which was the groom's present to her.

The bride is one of our most charming and talented young ladies. She, with her parents, came here about five years ago from Columbia, Tennessee, where she was a student at the Columbia Institute. Shortly after coming here, she entered the San Antonio Female College where she graduated in music two years ago. She has hosts of friends who wish her a long, prosperous and happy wedded life.

Mr. Miles is the cashier of the Premont State Bank and is one of our most enterprising and esteemed young men. He is a graduate of the Missouri University of Columbia, Mo., from which place he came to Premont as Secretary for the E. L. Reel Company, about six years ago.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Miles left in an automobile for a trip along the coast resorts.

A pleasing feature of the affair was the simultaneous celebration of the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Collins. They were showered with congratulations and felicitations and were the recipients of many beautiful pieces of silver.

Among the out of town guests present were the following: Mr. and Mrs. McCord Harrison, San Antonio; Dr. and Mrs. Atkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Davis of Alice.

With Mrs. Mann.

Mrs. J. T. Mann was hostess to the members of the Philathea and Baracca classes of the Methodist church at a most delightful party on last Thursday evening, the guests including some thirty-five members of the two organizations.

The evening was pleasantly spent in progressive games, contests of various kinds, vocal and instrumental selections. Adding to the attractiveness of the Mann home were decorations of pot plants and ferns in great profusion.

Before departure of her guests Mrs. Mann served a delicious salad course and iced tea.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Alice Sloan of Dallas; Misses Alma and Blanche Granger and Rose Wilson of Comanche, Lucile Bengel of Millersview.

All members of the class are urged to be present, and a cordial invitation is extended those interested in a systematic study of the Bible to become members of the class.

Mayo, A. B. Campbell, H. R. Hodges, J. F. Schaeg, D. D. Camp, C. P. Gray, Ben Anderson, Mesdames C. C. House, W. H. Ballou, W. P. Yeary and Miss Ona Reagan of Big Springs were guests of the club.

MATIE'S CLAIM

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

The two cars turned simultaneously into the hilly street leading to the little railroad station.

Parker laughed back over his shoulder at the other driver and called something that was answered by a shout.

"Do you know any of them?" asked Mattie.

"Rather. It's old Doc Warren, grand old Doc Warren, great old Doc! So long, Doc!"

The other car was gaining, though Warren, at the wheel, slipped into high speed and took the hill dizzily. As they flashed by, Mattie caught her first glimpse of him, sitting far down in his seat, his cap pulled low over his keen, dark eyes, just the hint of a dark mustache and a boyish smile of impish joy at hearing Parker.

At the station, while she and Mildred went inside out of the cold, Parker snook hands with the victor.

"I'd have let her go, too, if it hadn't been for the precious load aboard."

"Who is she?" asked Warren, with a far-away look in his eyes.

"Not for you, boy," laughed Parker. "Grand old Doc, she's of rarest clay—Mattie Burroughs. Father produces millions from patent food products for dyspeptics, but he hasn't invented anything for the trail of victims Mattie leaves after her. She's been visiting Louise up at Craggmore Lodge."

"Let twenty dollars I marry her," said Warren. "I always believed I'd know the right girl when I first looked at her, and I do, too. It's 35 miles to the Shore line. Parkie, before we hit the Grand Central I'm going to make her understand how I feel about it."

Parker hesitated.

"Aren't you going to introduce me?" Warren smiled at him with beatific enjoyment of the situation and, as the New York express pulled in, somehow Louise had managed the introduction in her quick way, and Warren sat beside Mattie Burroughs in the general pairing off of the two parties. Mrs. Parker and Warren's Aunt Paula were far too occupied with their own reunion to bother over the duties of chaperonage, and Warren set himself to beat Time and Fate inside of three hours.

Mattie, in dark green and white fox fur, took the onslaught demurely. In fact, she was rather accustomed to just such situations. Easily she parried his opening points. Yes, she had heard of him from Dave Morton, her cousin out at the School of Mines. Warren had been there, too, she believed. She was interested in mines herself? She smiled doubtfully. After one has been brought up on mines, so to speak, they lose their glamour. For the moment, Warren forgot his bet.

"Do you know anything about the Diamond Eye?" he asked eagerly.

She glanced at him curiously.

"At Crooked Creek? I've heard of it. Why?"

"My aunt, Mrs. Edwards, is interested in it. You see, years ago she befriended a chap who was pretty well down and out. She's always helping somebody, bless her, and this fellow believed he could locate an old mining claim somebody had told him about. You read about such cases, and it seems like a joke, but this came true. He found the claim, staked it. Then he took in a partner, and they worked it together. Well, he died, and left half to Aunt Paula in return for what she had done for him. She didn't need it, and handed it over to me. It's somewhere in Nevada—did you say Capoked Creek?"

She was interested enough now. Her eyes opened wide as she leaned toward him. She was all sparkle and suppressed excitement.

"What was the dead partner's name?"

"They called him Andy Bird. Somehow, when Parker told me you were Mattie Burroughs, I knew you came from Nevada, and I wanted to know you."

"I'm afraid you'll know me better before we're through with this," she said teasingly. "Dad gave me the half share in the 'Diamond Eye' for my eighteenth birthday a year ago."

"Gave you—"

She nodded her head quickly.

"You know, he started in just as a prospector, and he met this old Andy Bird—oh, I've heard him tell it so often—dad became his partner and helped him a little, but the claim never seemed to give back all they had expected from it. They call it Mattie's Claim' out there. My own name is Elizabeth, but dad always calls me just Mattie. You'll have to come out now and develop it and make it a winner."

"Do you ask me to go?"

"If we're partners, I suppose I must—"

"Are you going back, too?"

"Yes, my home is there, you know. If you write to dad at once and tell him who you are, he'll want to see you."

"Getting into New Haven," Parker called genially from the aisle, his hand on Warren's shoulder. "Half-way along, Doc."

"I've got a through ticket," answered Warren peacefully, with a meaning only Parker could descry. (Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

RED ALWAYS DANGER SIGNAL

Excellent Reasons Why That Color Should Have Been Selected for the Purpose.

Everywhere you turn, red is used to signify danger.

As tail-lamps to motors and trains, at turn-up streets, red lights universally announce "Danger!"

Why is red used in preference to any other color? There is a very good and sufficient reason for this. Red, no matter how distant, never ceases to appear red. It retains its color better than any other, and plays no illusionary tricks with your eyesight.

Enjoying normal weather conditions, the ranges of colored lights in use on the railways are recognized as follows:

Red, 3 1/2 miles; green, 2 1/2 to 3 miles; lunar white, 2 to 2 1/2 miles. It will be seen that red is far ahead of its fellows. Green, its nearest rival, is, of course, the color of which nature makes such extensive use. Consequently, green is much more liable to become absorbed in any background than red.

That is why red takes pride of place.—Answers.

Able to Defy Burglars.

The story of the strong room is nothing more than one long fight between the safemaker and the burglar. But at last the vault maker would appear to have won, and it is the boast of experts that many of the strong rooms found in the more up-to-date safe deposits, banks and other institutions are not only burglar-proof, but proof against attack by armed mobs and also from earthquake shocks. Their great steel walls are absolutely undrillable on account of the hardness of the metal employed, while by welding the plates together it is virtually impossible to burn through them.

Then, by means of time and combination locks, it is impossible to open the doors without a key and a knowledge of the combination, once they are closed. As a further precaution, many of these strong rooms are so designed that an electrical alarm is sounded should attack be made upon them, or the basement in which they are situated is flooded with water the moment their mechanism is tampered with.

Composers of Hymn Tunes.

Frequent study has been made of the writers of famous hymns, but less heed has been given to the makers of the tunes which have often been the means of carrying the words into universal use. A tune is easier to learn by ear than words are, and thus a singer may have recourse to a book for words without heeding the score for the melody. But after all, our associations with hymns are quite as apt to be with the music as with the words; and the writers of our best hymn tunes are often eminent composers.

Among the obscure composers of hymn tunes that have lasted long the Christian Work mentions Isaac Baker Woodbury of Beverly, Mass., who began his career as a blacksmith's apprentice. His interest in churchgoing brought him at last to an interest in music, and he even studied in Europe and was an associate of the better known musicians of the day. His tune called "Siloam," sung to Heber's "By Cool Siloam's Shady Rill," is known to most churchgoers.

Drs. Guyton & Stone Erecting 30-Room Sanitarium.

A contract was awarded W. P. Gray of this city Wednesday for the erection of a two-story and basement, 30-room sanitarium for Drs. Guyton & Stone, and construction work was begun yesterday afternoon.

The sanitarium will be located in the southern portion of the city in the Jones addition, the site being one of the most desirable to be had anywhere around Brady. The new building is to be constructed of brick, and is designed along the most approved lines. It will be two stories in height, with basement, and will contain a total of thirty rooms. According to the present plans of Drs. Guyton & Stone, only twenty of the rooms will be finished up at this time, it being thought this will be ample for present needs of the institution.

The building will be modern throughout and constructed in such shape that an addition can be made which will double the capacity should this be found necessary.

The contract calls for completion of the building in sixty days.

What Would We Do Without Sugar?

We are so used to sugar that we are likely to forget to give it its property important place. Right now if somebody asked you what sugar was good for you'd probably say—"Oh! to put in coffee and tea and for making candies and desserts." That's it—we all think of sugar as a sweetener and overlook its value as a food.

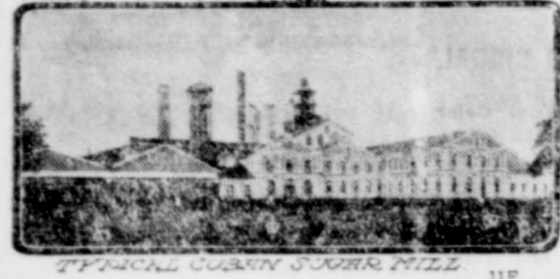

The chemists classify sugar as a hydrocarbon—that name may or may not be interesting to us, but what is interesting is their statement that it has, as a hydrocarbon, equal food value with the starchy foods and by digestion largely adds to the fatty tissues of the body.

Why do we eat sugar anyway? Your first answer might be: "Because it is sweet and tastes good." Of itself the answer would be correct, but the more important fact is that the body craves sugar because it needs it. And when the body craves something it gives us an appetite for it. So primarily that's why we like sugar and things made with sugar and not just because they are sweet.

In view of the fact that sugar has gone up so tremendously of late these facts are interesting because we find that instead of the luxury sugar having gone up it is the FOOD sugar that has raised its price. Yet—even though the price is up we have to have our sweet food just the same.

Certainly the makers of that delicious beverage Coca-Cola must have discovered that sugar is up, because one of the principal ingredients in making Coca-Cola syrup is fine cane sugar. Think of it—they use an average of 80 tons of sugar a day—about 4 carloads. But unlike many manufacturers that company has itself borne the raise and so you and I pay just the same today for our bottle or glass of Coca-Cola that we've always paid. Incidentally, this phase of the situation is a good reminder of the benefits one gets from drinking a beverage as pure and good as Coca-Cola. Not only do we please our palates and derive wholesome refreshment from the drink but we also give our systems that bit of sugar sweetness that they crave and which is necessary to health and tissues. Is it any wonder then that Coca-Cola is so popular and so universally drunk that it has been called "the drink the nation drinks"?

DOMESTIC LIFE IN AFRICA

No More Than in Christian Lands Can the Little Ones Escape the Evening Ablutions.

I went with my lantern into Ze's little hut; I sat down by the fire, and there was the family too, writes Jean Kenyon Mackenzie, in the Atlantic. Mendom was heating some water in a big black kettle. The youngest Mpioca, still without teeth, was howling in the arms of little brother. Presently to the light of my lantern Mendom brings her three-year-old; she empties her hot water into a wooden bowl; with a sponge of crushed leaves she washes first one little foot and then the other. Kid howls. His feet are sore, poor little duffer—he holds out his hand for his father to hold. Mother is relentless until both feet are soaked; then she opens a little leaf packet; there is salve made of the bark of the redwood tree; she adds a little palm oil to this, and very carefully she anoints the little feet. The sobs subside and the child walks off on his heels. Now the mother pours more water into the bowl, takes the fretful baby out of the hands of little brother, stands the weeny thing in her belt of beads on the clay floor and swabs her down with water. There is the familiar initial gasp. With her maternal hands she cleanses that little person all glittering with wet, and she says, looking at me and smiling, "God has sent me much trouble." And the father says, apropos of nothing, "All these have been baptized." I sit on my stool by the fire and feel steeped in the most human domesticity. Everywhere in the world at this hour little children are whimpering over their evening ablutions. It is a mistake to think that any child of a good mother escapes. So much for the illusions of little boys who would like to be heathen.

PLANT BURIES ITS OFFSPRING

Peanut Has a Most Effective Method of Protecting Them From Their Enemies.

Here's a plant mother that buries her children to protect them. While the children of other plants are being kidnaped by animals and birds, these youngsters are carefully hidden away beneath the ground so they can grow in safety. But man won't permit the mother to keep her children long. He digs them up—and eats them. The plant is the peanut.

Its leaves look like a four-leaved clover. Its blossoms are a dainty yellow, shaped like those of the sweet pea. When they wither and fall off the mother plant begins to worry about her seed children, for if the birds and animals kidnap them before they ripen they won't have a chance to grow and produce more plants next year.

So she bends her stalks downward and each head where the flowers have fallen off she pokes into the ground. There the little seeds develop inside of wrinkly, papery pods. Sometimes the little tunneling moles find them and eat them, or maybe hogs will come and root them out. Usually, however, they're safe from all marauders.

America gave the world the peanut. It was found first in Brazil. Since its commercial value was discovered it has been planted all over the world. Since 1866 it has been a staple product of southern United States.

Saying Attributed to Many.

The authorship of the saying, "I expect to pass through this world but once; if, therefore, there be any kindness I can show, or any good thing I can do my fellow beings, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again," the precise wording of which changes with almost every quotation, has never been settled. It has been attributed to Stephen Grellet (1773-1855), an American Quaker of French birth; to Emerson, Sir Rowland Hill (1744-1833), Marcus Aurelius, Addison, Carlyle and others. On page 448 of W. Gurney Benham's "A Book of Quotations" (Lippincott, 1907) it may be found in clearer form, together with a short history of the effort to trace it. According to a footnote in Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" (1914) "I shall not pass this way again" was a saying of William Penn's.

Composers of Noted Hymns.

Silas Jones Vail, for a time a hatter in New York, composed the music for Faber's beautiful hymn, "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy," and he also set "We Shall Meet Beyond the River," by the Rev. John Atkinson of New Jersey. Ithamar Conkey of Shutesbury, Mass., composed "Rathburn" in 1847. He was tenor soloist in a New York church. George N. Allen, composer of the tune "Maitland," was a Massachusetts man who went to Ohio and composed a good many sacred songs and tunes. "Maitland" is sung to Thomas Scott's "Must Jesus Bear the Cross Alone?"

Turn to Painted Glass.

The draftsmanship of the stained-glass window must always remain conventional, and bound by its own peculiar limitations; but the designer was seeking for a more plastic medium in which to express himself; and this he found in the invention of glass painting, or rather, transparent enamelling, which gave his pencil greater freedom, even though it could not hope to equal the masterpieces of color of the older style. And so stained glass proper yields place more and more to painted glass.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated and believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start your liver and clean your bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

No Haste.

There are many stories of the old time negro parsons in the remote South. This was given currency by a speaker from Georgia:

The parson was denouncing theft to his congregation, when he said: "If there is any member of this congregation who is guilty of theft he had better repent at once and be saved."

On his way home he was stopped by old Rastus, who had listened. "Don't yo' think, pahson, that nex' Sunday will do jes as well as toadnight to repent?" asked Rastus.

"But, Rastus, why not repent tonight and be saved, man?" "Well, pahson, it's dis way," explained Rastus. "I want jes one mo' chicken fo' tomorrow's dinner, an' I know wha I kin git dat chicken without being caught tonight."

"Well," said the parson, hesitating, "I reckon I better take dinner with you tomorrow and we'll talk the matter over."—The Continent.

PARADISE VILLA

By FRANCES ELIZABETH LANYON.

"There is the dollar you asked for," said David Moore very soberly, "and it's the last."

"What do you mean by last?" demanded his half-brother, Bruce.

"That the exchequer is exhausted, no more coming in and hereafter you will have to depend on your own exertions, or someone else, for money when you need it."

Bruce Moore looked blank, but he accepted the extended bank note.

"We might just as well face the issue here and now," resumed David. "Ever since father died, four years ago, I have stood in the breach, have done pretty near all the work, and every extra dollar I have earned from copying nights for the law offices in town you and your brother Earle and your two sisters have used up."

"Yes, you've been a good old scout," acknowledged Bruce, "but see here, David, I've got prospects. You hit me on the poverty plea at a bad time. You know I am paying attention to Miss Ryther. She is an old maid, it is true, and not very handsome or over agreeable as to temper, but she owns three farms and well, if you could finance me to make a respectable showing till I clinch the bargain, we'll all be out of the middle."

High-minded David was disgusted. He proceeded to inform Bruce that he could look for nothing more from him.

"I've done my duty and I'm through," he said definitely. "You people have now got to take hold and earn your own living. Industrious worked, the little patch here will bring in a sure living. You have the free use of it for life and ought to get along. I am going away. It's a shame the way you boys have neglected things. There's that poor girl, Nell Drury. You took her in two years ago, an orphan, promising to give her a home. You have made a slave of her and if it wasn't for the little I have been able to spare her she'd be in rags."

There Were Wry and Sullen Faces.

Bruce Moore turned on his heel, sour and wrathful. David was about to proceed on his way when his ear caught a sob in the bushes directly behind him.

"Why, Nell!" he exclaimed, parting the shrubbery and disclosing the household drudge he had just so feelingly alluded to. Nell was standing with her hands covering her face, the tears trickling through her fingers.

"I did not mean to hear," she said brokenly. "I was just passing by. Oh, Mr. Moore! surely you are not going away?"

"Yes, Nell," replied David seriously. "I must. I hope they will treat you more humanely. If they do not, find some better place. You are bright, industrious, and, like myself, one of the world's cross-bearing children," and he smiled sadly. "Be cheerful and patient and that always wins in the end."

"Oh, Mr. Moore," pleaded Nell impetuously, "please, please let me go with you! I will work for you, slave for you!"

A quiver of deep emotion swept the face of David.

"That would be impossible, my dear child," he said, speaking calmly with an effort. "Why, I have no home. I do not know even where to look for the work I must find in order to live."

"But you will soon have!" cried Nell confidently. "You are so smart, so good to everybody! And when you do, oh! may I come to you?"

"We shall see, Nell," said David, and his heart fluttered as he read the unutterable devotion expressed in that sweet face.

There were wry and sullen faces among the four step-children who had fattened on the unselfish bounty of David for so long a time. Bruce, however, before David went away managed to borrow his best suit and spoil it in a disgraceful village debauch, and when David came to pack up his few belongings he found shirts, collars and ties few in number, having been appropriated by Earle.

David went on his way. He resolved to strike out down Buda valley, where settlements were sparse, where there were many small fruit farms and presumably a lack of neighborhood workers. It was a peaceful enjoyable tramp for four days in the midst of a beautiful country and free from cares that had hitherto weighted down his spirit. Only memory was sentient, and he could not forget the fair confiding face of Nell.

He had lain down in the sweet crisp grass one evening, removed hat, shoes and outer garments and indulged in a rest in the open air that bound him in invigorating slumber till daylight. When he awoke it was to find his shoes and outer garments gone. He was dismayed for a moment, surmising that some thieving tramp was the culprit.

"Well," soliloquized David resignedly, and with a tinge of humor, "my step-brothers confiscated most of my outfit and a stranger now finishes up the job! I fear circumstance is gradually restoring me to the normal condition of aboriginal man, out here in the primeval wilderness!"

There was no chance of meeting anyone, so David proceeded down the road, or rather trail. A wagon came into view. David stepped aside, but the driver halted his horses, stared and then began laughing immoderately.

"Why the bathing costume?" he challenged, and David told his story. The man looked him over kindly. He got to questioning him.

"You come with me and I'll see to better duds," he said finally, "and I'll give you a grand good job."

He did. The man had a small apricot orchard. He took David in as an employee, then as a partner. Never was there a more industrious companionable fellow.

And then a remarkable fortune came David's way. A large estate was left to his employer. The latter out of sheer liking for his partner turned the farm entirely over to David.

One morning as David was starting from the little vine-embowered house to the orchard, he started, stared and then a wondering and as well glad expression came into his face. Approach- ing was Nell with a carpet sack on her arm, flushed, embarrassed, eager.

"Oh Mr. Moore!" she cried, "I heard where you were at last and I've come to be your housekeeper."

"My dear child!" remonstrated David, "and why have you left the old home?"

"Why, Bruce married that maiden lady and she's a tartar! She makes them all work and scrimp and is a regular tyrant. Oh, this wonderful place! I can stay, can't I?"

He could not resist those innocent, pleading eyes. He could not still a new tumult in his heart.

"Nell," he said soberly, but tenderly, "I am going to take you over to the home of my next neighbor, the minister's wife. I shall arrange to have you stay there for a week. In that time I want you to decide a question."

"And what is that, Mr. Moore?" queried Nell anxiously.

"Will you become my wife?"

"Oh, but I can answer that right now!" cried Nell, and then hung her head and blushed.

"I want you to be sure you love me," said David.

"I always did that!" murmured Nell, and she told David how well a week later, when she became the proud, happy mistress of Paradise villa.

The Stegosaurus.

A fresh study of this extinct armored Dinosaur (a reptile from Jurassic strata was made by C. W. Gilmore of the United States National museum. The weight of the living monster has been estimated at between seven and eight tons; its length at about twenty feet; its height at about twelve feet. The exceedingly small and feeble teeth would appear to indicate that the Stegosaurus fed upon succulent plants. It probably frequented low, swampy regions. As Dollo first suggested, the type may have evolved from a bipedal ancestor. But "increasing bulk and development of the armor caused them to lose celerity of movement and they became sluggish, slow-moving creatures of low mentality, only sufficient perhaps to direct the mere mechanical functions of life." In proportion to the size of the body, the brain cavity was more diminutive than in any other land vertebrate. The armor of the neck, back and tail was formed by two rows of erect plates, the elements of one row alternating with those of another. The tail was a heavy, stiff appendage incapable of more than cumbersome lateral movements, and wholly unsuited for use as a weapon against an active enemy.

Prolongation of Life.

Everyone recognizes that there is great division of labor among the cells in the body of a higher animal. Many of them are very highly specialized, and it has often been suggested that it is this differentiation that makes death inevitable. The body is correlated, and its interdependence is such that a breakdown on the part of a few highly specialized nerve cells, for instance, may be fatal to the life of the whole. Recent experiments on the life of cells and tissues removed from the body and kept in foreign or artificial environment, suggest that the tenacity of life on the part of the highly specialized cells is greater than has been thought. Ganglion cells in a higher animal do not increase in number after birth, and those of an adult cannot as yet be cultivated in artificial media; but it is premature to say that their complexity and sensitiveness necessarily involve death. Leo Loeb has indeed recently suggested that the prolongation of life may, to a great extent, depend on forestalling the attacks of those injurious influences which are at present allowed to disturb the function of the nerve cells.—Knowledge.

TINY VILLAGES IN ENGLAND

Two Hamlets in Which There is Only One Inhabitant, and Many With But a Few.

It takes two to make a quarrel, but it only takes one to make a village. For an example of the truth of this latter statement you need only take a trip to Skiddaw, in Cumberland, England. This hill-pit village contains only one villager, who complains bitterly because he cannot vote. The reason that he cannot vote is that there is no overseer to prepare a voter's list and no public building to publish one, as the law demands.

Yet one-man villages sometimes have their benefits. In a Northumberland hamlet the single inhabitant refuses to contribute money to maintain the roads, declaring that the one he has is quite good enough for his use. Twelve inhabitants of a tiny village in the Isle of Ely are similarly blessed. They have no rates, no roads, no public institutions of any kind.

Buckland-in-the-Moor is another curiosity. Public houses, policemen, doctors and paupers are unknown there, though the population is nearly a hundred. All the "oldest inhabitants" are pensioned by the owner of the estate, who himself recently celebrated his golden wedding.

ONE GOOD QUALITY HE HAD

Truthful Man Could Not Go Far in Eulogy of Dead Man, But He Did His Best.

There was an old farmer who was widely known as the crossset, closest, and most generally nonlikable citizen in the whole state. Like other mean men he lived to a ripe old age, but eventually he died and his friends went ahead with plans for the funeral.

Now, it is customary, in the case of rural funerals, for those who attend, as they stand by the coffin, to murmur some eulogy of the dead. A number of farmers came in and said things which didn't square at all with the old man's life.

Finally, an aged man, who had known the deceased all his life, hobbled in and stood by the coffin. The aged man was known as the most truthful man in the county. Hence, the other people present waited with interest to hear what he would say.

The old man gazed down silently for a while. He paused. Finally he spoke.

"Wal," he said earnestly, "nobody kin deny that he was a great hand for closin' his stable door o' nights."

Mr. Gladstone and Mortgages.

The late Lieutenant Gladstone expressed in his will "the solemn hope and expectation" that his uncle will, from time to time, reduce any mortgage on the Hawarden estates. In so doing Lieutenant Gladstone was loyal to the Gladstone tradition. The great statesman had a horror of mortgages, the "mischievous consequences" of which had, as he said, been "terribly felt (the word is strong, but hardly too strong) in the case of Hawarden." Writing to Lieutenant Gladstone's father, the late Mr. W. H. Gladstone, in 1885, Mr. Gladstone said: "To mortgages I am greatly opposed. Whether they ought or ought not to be restrained by law, I do not now inquire. But I am confident that few rare causes only will warrant them, and that as a general rule they are mischievous, and in many cases, as to their consequences, antisocial and immoral. Wherever they exist, they ought to be looked upon as evils, which are to be warped upon and got rid of."—Westminster Gazette.

Stevenson as a German Spy.

It is interesting, says the London Chronicle, to recall that Stevenson has recorded his imprisonment in France as a German spy, so foreign looking was he in appearance. Andrew Lang found his appearance at twenty-eight was anything but that of a Scotsman, and the same difficulty pursued the novelist through life, more especially on the continent.

"It is a great thing, believe me," he wrote in the Inland Voyage, "to present a good normal type of the nation you belong to," and, as he says in the same chapter, "I might come from any part of the globe, it seems, except from where I do."

New Sect.

At a North Shore golf club a man, who had been playing with a clergyman was quite sure that he heard the holy man swear two or three times under his breath. Suspecting the lapse, he could not be sure of it, until one monosyllable came out with unmistakable clearness. After he had finished the match, a friend of his said: "I saw you playing just now with Rev. Dr. Smith. Of what demonization is he?"

"Some people say he is a Unitarian," said his late opponent, "but I should call him a Profanitarian."

Salt Water Improves Coal.

In recovering cargoes of coal from sunken vessels it has been discovered that the combustion of coal is improved by submergence in salt water. Coal subjected to the action of seawater for a number of years will burn almost entirely away, leaving only a small amount of ash and no clinkers. Crates of coal, each holding approximately two tons, were submerged by the British admiralty in 1903, and at different times since certain of them have been raised and experiments conducted. The tests all have been in favor of the salt-water treatment.

SAVES DAUGHTER

Advice of Mother no Doubt Prevents Daughter's Untimely End.

Ready, Ky.—"I was not able to do anything for nearly six months," writes Mrs. Laura Bratcher, of this place, "and was down in bed for three months."

I cannot tell you how I suffered with my head, and with nervousness and womanly troubles.

Our family doctor told my husband he could not do me any good, and he had to give it up. We tried another doctor, but he did not help me.

At last, my mother advised me to take Cardui, the woman's tonic. I thought it was no use for I was nearly dead and nothing seemed to do me any good. But I took eleven bottles, and now I am able to do all of my work and my own washing.

I think Cardui is the best medicine in the world. My weight has increased, and I look the picture of health.

If you suffer from any of the ailments peculiar to women, get a bottle of Cardui today. Delay is dangerous. We know it will help you, for it has helped so many thousands of other weak women in the past 50 years.

Brady Wins from Fife.

In one of the best games ever seen on the local diamond Brady Wednesday afternoon defeated the Fife base ball team by a score of 3 to 2.

The game was hotly contested from beginning to end, and it was anybody's game up to the last. Baldrige pitching for Fife was in excellent form and demonstrated his ability as a slab artist by making fifteen of the local batsmen lay down the wicket. He was a trifle wild, however, the winning run coming on a wild pitch in the last half of the ninth, after two of the Brady batters had been retired.

Aside from this bobble, Baldrige pitched ball of a class that should have won the game for him. Moore pitched the two first innings for Brady, but was relieved by Morris in the third when he sustained a dislocated thumb of the right hand. Morris pitched a good game, having a total of eight strikeouts to his credit, and being exceedingly stingy with hits.

The Fife team has some exceptionally strong individual players, and with a little team practice could put up a mighty stiff game of base ball. They have had no practice this season, only having organized a week or ten days ago, and the game Wednesday was the second they have engaged in this year.

Manager Moore announces three games for next week when San Saba will be here Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. They have a strong team this year, and with the locals going at their present clip the series should prove a good one.

The game will be called at 4:00 o'clock each afternoon, and an admission fee of 25 cents will be charged.

Infant Dies.

The many Brady and McCulloch county friends will sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. W. DuBois of Whiteland in the loss of their infant son, Frederick Irving, who died last week at Temple, following an illness of two months. The body was taken to Bellville, the home of Mrs. DuBois' parents, where interment was made.

The following item concerning the funeral is reprinted from the Bellville Times:

Frederick Irving, the little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. DuBois of Whiteland, and grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Max Roensch of Bellville, died at Temple at five o'clock this morning, and interment was made at Oak Knoll cemetery here at half past five o'clock this (Thursday) afternoon, Rev. G. Z. Sadler of the Methodist church officiating.

Death came to the child, who was only six and a half months old, after an illness of about eight weeks. Two older children remain to the grief-stricken parents. Bringing the little body down from Temple were Mr. and Mrs. DuBois, the parents, Mrs. DuBois of Valera, mother of Mr. DuBois, and Miss Charlotte Roensch of Dallas.
