Why Buick Cushions "Ride Easy"

Buick cushions are comfortable on all roads because of their "double-deck" springs and resilient hair pads. The upper springs, which are light and easy-acting, yield to the slightest road irregularity. The lower springs are larger and stiffer. They come into play on rough country roads, carrying the passenger in comfort over bumps which cause the ordinary seat to "strike bottom."

Between the springs and the French-plaited leather upholstery are two thick, yielding pads of interlaced hair which positively prevent "lumping."

In Buick seat cushions, as in every other part of the car, is built the quality which has made Buick cars the standard of comparison.

MOTHER BROWN BAT.

"Ah, children," said Mother Brown Bat, "it will soon be time to go to And we shall sleep well, for bed. bats are good sleepers. We shall sleep especially well if it is to be a cold winter.

"Then we will not appear until the spring comes.

"You have been good children," said Mother Brown Bat, after a moment when she had looked again at her two bables. What darling little yellow bats you were when first you were born. You are becoming greenish brown in color now which is like my coat.

"It is well for you to dress as I do, but it is also nice for you to wear yellow at first.

"Bables shouldn't dress as grownups! Not even bat bables.

"Yes," she went on, "you were quiet in the daytime and never disturbed me, but slept in my wing beds. "I am so glad that my children aren't the kind who would disturb me in the daytime when I sleep.

"There are some creatures who don't want to be disturbed at night, and they don't care how much noise their children make in the daytime.

"But Mother Brown Bat is different. And so are the other mothers in the Brown Bat family. I don't care about being kept awake at night, for night is the time I want to be awake.

"But I wouldn't want to be kept swake in the daytime, as the daytime is the time in which I like to sleep.

"You were so good, my beautiful Bat babies, and you understood. You were so quiet and so happy. You never complained You never said you wanted a nest or a home of that sort. "You were perfectly satisfied with Mother Brown Bat's wings, as all senslble Bat Babies should be.

A BUSINESS COUPE OF STEEL

Dodge Brothers offer to the business public of America an entirely new principle in Coupe body construction.

From framework to window mouldings the body is built of steel. It is the first all-steel closed car ever marketed. This design anticipates every possible requirement of commercial travel. It insures unusual quietnessunusual grace-unusual stamina. It has made it possible to give the Coupe that same lustrous baked-on enamel finish for which Dodge Brothers open cars have long been famous.

The upholstery is of genuine leather - leather that will wash and wear. The seat is wide and comfortable, Carrying compartments are accessible and spacious. The car is equipped with a heater, dome light, window levers, windshield cleaner, cord tires, Yale door locks, and every other appointment necessary to the owner's comfort and protection.

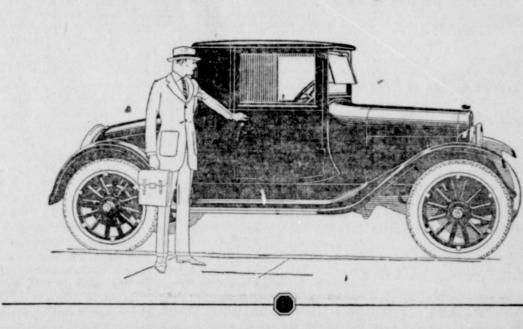

Built inside and out to withstand the wear and tear of everyday use, it retains the same lightness and beauty of line which you are accustomed to look for in Dodge Brothers cars.

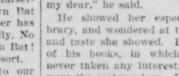

It is the Business Coupe which business people the world over have been expecting-from Dodge Brothers.

said Henry Goudie, cashier of the Bank of Liverpool, to one of his associates. "I'm just going across the street to get a bite of lunch."

An hour later the officials of the bank began to wonder where Goudie was, but the fact that his hat still remained upon its accustomed peg indicated that the cashier wasn't far away, and that he would soon return. But at the closing hour that afternoon Goudie was still missing-and when an auditor went over his books it was discovered that a hundred and seventy-five thousand pounds (some $850,000) had also disappeared!

Inquiry at the house where Goudie had lodged failed to bring to light any trace of the missing cashier, who had left home that morning as usual, apparently without any intention of being away over night. His clothes were in their accustomed position, and even his tollet articles were untouched. In fact, if it hadn't been for the disappearance of the money from the bank, the police would have searched the hospitals, on the theory that Goudie had met with an accident,

But, as Frank Freost, superintendent of Scotland Yard, pointed out, it was hardly likely that a bank official and $850,000 would vanish at one and the same time without some connection between the two events.

By means of this clue and a detailed report on Goudie's appearance. Freost soon had every man connected with Scotland Yard searching for the absconding cashier. But it was several weeks before he was located and captured in a lodging house in the north of England.

However, the arrest of the man who looted the Bank of Liverpool did not by any means close the case.

The Tale of a Carnival Joke That Led to Grim Realities The Mardi Gras Mystery

By H. BEDFORD-JONES

The setting of this charming story is not the New Orleans which General Jack-son defended, neither is it the New Orleans of George W. Cable; but the modern commercial metropolis made rich by shipping, in-dustrialism and the development of oil, sulphur and other nearby resources.

However, the author does throw in some of the atmos-phere that still clings to the historic place in the un-diminished gayeties of Mardi Gras and Mi-Careme and in glimpses of "Caju-nism" and the surviving pride and hospitality of Creole aristocracy.

It is an engaging narrative in every respect with a delightful love interest, two heroes of most contrasting types and a mystery that will capture you and keep you guessing until the end

It Will Appear Serially in The Brady Standard

Freost had found out that Goudle had been in the habit of playing the races -patronzing a clique of "hand-book men," who had played upon his cupidity in such a manner that they, and not he, had secured the benefits of his dishonesty. In order to recover the money, Freost therefore had to round up the members of this gambling ring and force them to disgorge.

It developed that the leader of the organization, sensing a way in which to make a lot of money, without running any risk, had approached Goudie with an account of a "fixed race" which was to be run at Epsom Downs, and that the cashier, believing that he could clean up a fortune in a single day, had taken twenty-five thousand pounds from the bank, falsifying the accounts to conceal the shortage. The man's credulity is evident from the fact that he placed the money at odds of 20 to 1, which meant that he stood to win half a million pounds, or $2.-500,000 if his horse came in first. Of course, no bookmaker could afford to pay a bet of this size-but Goudie overlooked this fact and cheerfully wagered his "borrowed" capital. The horse naturally failed to win, and, in an effort to recoup his losses, the cashier commenced systematically to loot the bank's funds.

One of the odd features of the case which Freost discovered, by blind luck. Goudie one day placed a b'g bet on a horse that won. When he went to collect his bet, with the firm intention of squaring his accounts with the bank, he was casually informed that the wager had not been placed in time, and he was advised to put it on another "sure tip," which lost. When his defalcations reached a point when it was hopeless to attempt further concealment from the bank authorities, Gouldie "went out to lunch."

It didn't take Freost long to discover that, in planning a round-up of the gambling gang he was tackling one of the most difficult jobs of his career.

One by one Freost picked up the various threads of the tangled case. One by one he followed the various ciues, at least one of which led to the suicide of a member of the bookmakers' clique. But, in addition to seeing that Gouldle was sent to prison for ten years, Freost secured evidence which forced the return of all but a small amount of money which had been taken from the Bank of Liverpool and placed upon horses, which, save in a single instance, had

If there came a sudden stab at Lillah's heart when she heard a vague report of Henry's intention of selling out and leaving the village, she never betrayed the wound. And so time wore on toward the date of Beatrice's departure.

Beatrice kissed Lillah effusively. "I've had a lovely time here," she said, "and Klanz thinks he will be able to give me a part in his new show, Broadway at last for mine, Lillah, and your little sister's fortune's made!"

Lillah smiled wearily. "I hope so, dear," she answered. "I'm glad you've had a nice rest here."

WO elements distinguish this story: The gaiety that makes New Orleans stand out among American cities, and the dark struggle and intrigue that have come with the development of oil lands in the surrounding region.

The carnival period is enlivened by the sensational yet mysterious performances of a man masked in aviator's garb. It is a rich young man's Mardi Gras prank, but it leads him into the midst of a most amazing conspiracy. It leads him also to a meeting with an unusual girl; and the story that evolves is an enthralling blend of mystery, adventure and love.
