

Demonstration Club Reports-

GARDEN IS YIELDING BIG

"I canned 120 pints of English peas from my garden," reports Estelle Park, who is garden demonstrator for the Dumont girls home demonstration club. "Besides the peas we have canned 31 quarts of string beans, 30 quarts peaches and 32 quarts plums."

"We dug three bushels of Irish potatoes after we had been using them for several weeks. We also dug and cured 3 1-2 bushels Bermuda onions."

Estelle planned, with the help of her mother and the home demonstration agent, the garden to meet the needs of her family. The garden was planned to provide vegetables to be used fresh and to can for the non productive months.

"My cucumbers are just beginning to bear but we are watering them and I think we will have plenty. We have several varieties of vegetables in use now and will have more later."

EXPANSION COMMIT. REPORT

The report of the expansion committee of the county council as given in the six months' progress report to the Commissioners' Court shows that 668 families have been aided by Extension Service this year. That is 62 per cent of the total number of farm families in the county. The records show that there are 240 different families enrolled in the women and girls' clubs. The club women reported having helped 255 non-club families and the agent has helped 173.

The recent census gave Dickens County 1065 farm families. The Expansion Committee set as a goal at the beginning of the year to reach at least 85 per cent of the farm families with definite reported assistance.

DUMONT CLUB HAS MEETING

To write a telegram using the letters of one's own name requires some deep thinking the girls of the Dumont Jr. 4-H club decided in their meeting Wednesday morning. Following the recreational period of songs and games Miss Pratt gave recipes for canning carrots, making beet pickles and drying okra. Those are the vegetables each girl is growing in her club garden and each will can 10 jars carrots, 15 jars of beet pickles, and dry two yards of okra.

Those present were Capitola Bohner, Theatus Rogers, Eloise Jones, Agnes Pence, Edna Thomas, and Miss Dale Brewster, sponsor.

An added attractiveness to the Inn parlors was the decorations of cut flowers artistically arranged.

Thomas, Neal Chastain, Fred C. Haille, Buster Parrish, Ermal Scott, and Misses Nig Lisenby and Thelma Campbell.

"STITCH IN TIME" CLUB

The "Stitch in Time" club was recently organized with Mesdames Jim Cloud, J. H. Swan, John Albin, Chas. Powell, Ralph Sherrill, Buford Johnston, Drake, Wadzeck Bob Alexander, S. C. Fallis, and Luther Powell as charter members.

The following officers have been elected: Mrs. Swan, president; Mrs. Alexander, secretary; and Mrs. Powell, reporter.

The second and fourth Thursdays of each month were selected for the date of meeting, and a new receipt or household hint is to be given on roll call.

Mrs. Jim Cloud was the delightful hostess on last Thursday. After an hour of sewing, lovely refreshments of cream and cake were served to Mesdames Drake, Swan, Johnston, Fallis, Albin, Miss Ann Lassetter and the hostess.

The club adjourned to meet on July 25, 1935, in the home of Mrs. Drake.—Reporter.

Mental Efficiency Lowered By Unwise Menus, Says Scientist

If you work in an office or earn your living by any other kinds of mental work, you will do well to guard yourself against becoming a victim of brain anemia. Brain anemia, according to Dr. Donald A.
Laird, Director of the Psychological Laboratory, Colgate University, is a condition which afflicts large numbers of mental workers and one which definitely lowers their mental efficiency.

The condition is one that, without being recognized by name, is familiar to many office executives and workers as the post-luncheon mental sluggishness which results almost universally in low production by office workers during the early afternoon. At the recent convention of the National Office Management Association, Dr. Laird described his just completed research investigation of this condition and possible remedies for it.

The series of experiments directed by Dr. Laird extended over a period of 24 days. Eight young men accustomed to mental work were used as subjects. The subjects ate their noon meals in the laboratory.
On half of the days, scattered irregularly through the 24-day period, they were served a fairly heavy meal. On the other days they were given a light lunch consisting of a ready-to-eat cereal such as corn flakes, with milk, and a light dessert.

Specially devised laboratory equipment was employed to measure the subjects' mental efficiency after the two types of lunches. After the light lunch their minds worked with 6 per cent more speed and 25 per cent more accuracy than after the heavier meals. The difference in the ability of the subjects to keep their attention from fluctuating was even more marked. There were nearly 70 per cent more lapses in attention after the heavier meal than after the light cereal lunch.

"Our experiments showed conclusively," Dr. Laird said, "that the cause of the mental sluggishness which afflicts many office workers in the early afternoon is a condition of brain anemia, due to the fact that the demands placed upon the digestive organs cause them to draw blood away from the brain in order to meet these demands. We have also showed that the adverse effects of this condition are great Above: Dr. Laird (center) recording lapses of attention on the part of a blindfolded subject.

Dr. Laird's assistant operates the audiometer which generates a tone so faint that the subject can just hear it. The faint tone is constant, but any lapse in attention causes it to become inaudible. Left: In an adjoining room, watching the kymograph as it records lapses of attention. The key from which the subject lifts his forefinger when he ceases to hear the tone, is electrically connected with the kymograph.

enough to affect mental efficiency to a marked degree.
"The light meals left the blood supply of the brain relatively un-shifted, allowing it to remain 'in the pink of condition'. The heavier meals resulted in a definitely insufficient supply of blood in the brain.
'In the pink of condition' is a specially apt phrase in this connection, for when the brain is well supplied with blood, and literally 'in the pink of condition', mental efficiency tends to be at its highest level.

When blood is drawn from the brain by the digestive organs, called upon to digest a heavy meal, mental efficiency is lowered."

Thompson Address—

regulation of the State Governments. Thus those things which intimately touch the efforts of the individual in producing his bread and butter are kept in control of those officials close at home and immediately responsive to the will of the people themselves. The administrators over these affairs are close at hand and more clearly understand the problems of the localities, in which they live and the people who elect them to office.

If these servants or administrators do a bad job the electorate will not return them to office. Frequent elections keep them in check and responsive to the will of the government. That is the very essence of free government. The founders knew this. They had experienced too long the heavy hand of administrators far from the fields of their administration.

They knew that man clothed with a little brief authority and safe from the direct vote of the people is apt to be harsh and tyrannical and is liable to mistake his ideas and aims for the wishes of the people and to get the idea that the authority really springs from him or his office instead of from the people themselves.

That is why the Federal Constitution expressly says that all power not directly conferred upon the central government is retained by the States or in the people themselves.

The founders jealously guarded against the encroachment on the States' powers by the central government. They knew from bitter experience what it was to be ruled from afar and how hard it was to get audience and redress.

If you will study the debates on the provisions of the Federal Constitution which took place before it was adopted you will find that the so called commerce clause took up a great deal of the time.

These debates all clearly bring out the fact that what they had in mind was that no State should ever erect barriers at her borders to keep commerce from the other States from flowing freely across her borders.

No State could take toll or levy taxes or put any sort of a burden on the free movement of goods or persons into or out of any State from another State. We were to have free intercourse as between the traders of all the States.

It is under the guise of the commerce clause that The Federal Control proponents would assume charge of oil production within the States of the Union.

However, the United States Supreme Court on May 27, 1935 in the 9 to 0 Decision of the Schechter Case settled that point conclusively in the following language.

"It is not the province of the Court to consider the economic advantages or disadvantages of such a centralized system. It is sufficient to say that the Federal Constitution does not provide for it. Our growth and development have called for wise use of commerce power of the Federal government in its control over the expanded activities of interstate commerce, and in protecting that commerce from burdens, interferences and conspiracies to restrain and monopolize it. But the authority of the Federal government may not be pushed to such an extreme as to destroy the distinction, which the commerce clause itself establishes, between commerce, 'among the several States' and the internal concerns of a State. The same answer must be made to the contention that is based upon the serious economic situation which led to the passage of the Recovery

Act,—the fall in prices, the decline in wages and employment, and the curtailment of the market for commodities." Without in any way disparaging this motive, it is enough to say that the recuperative efforts of the Federal Government must be made in a manner consistent with the authority granted by the Constitution."

Such has been the policy of the Supreme Court since the dawn of our history and as long as it continues to be its policy, this country will survive and continue to grow.

The telephone goal of Europe is JUST A GOOD JOB here

The fast, clear, far-reaching telephone service of America has never been equalled by European nations. Differences in equipment, methods and policies have barred the way to such service among the many countries there.

In America, your telephone service has over-leaped state and regional lines. Here there are no telephone boundaries.

Your telephone is "first cousin" to each of 13 million other Bell telephones here. It is designed and manufactured to meet uniform operating standards.

Every Bell telephone line, local and long distance, is built to conform to uniform tests of clarity and volume in carrying your voice.

Every Bell telephone operator, whether in New York, in San Francisco, or in the thousands of towns and cities between, is trained to use the same methods . . . the same team-work in operating the vast national communications network.

Organization That these things are true is due largely to the Bell System form of organization.

American Telephone and Telegraph Company, the parent company, studies and standardizes better and more economical methods, apparatus and materials for the 24 operating companies of the System. Bell Laboratories carries on the research work. Western Electric manufactures, purchases and distributes.

Without this organization behind them, the Southwestern Bell men and women here who give your telephone service could not do their job so well. For many years it has materially helped us, as one of the group of operating companies, in holding the cost of good telephone service low to the user.
