Hospital Head Has Resigned

James Shook, R. N., who has been administrator of North Runnels Hospital since 1973, Monday night submitted his resignation to the board of directors of North Runnels County Hospital District, during the regular meeting of the board.

A spokesman for the board Tuesday said no replacement for Shook had been named, and that applications for the position may be submitted to the hospital business office.

Shook's resignation will be effective June 11, at the end of his present contract, it was said. He has been administrator of North Runnels Hospital since June, 1973, when the hospital was located on East Truitt. The new hospital was completed and occupied in October, 1973.

Clifford Poe Ordained To Ministry

REV. AND MRS. POE

Dennis Clifford Poe, Jr., known here as Cliff, was ordained to the ministry in a service at the First Baptist Church in Sweetwater Sunday evening.

The sermon of ordination was by Dr. Lindell Harris of Hardin-Simmons University. Rev. J. S. Tierce served as leader and Rev. Dwayne Martin, pastor, gave the introduction and invocation. He also presented Cliff a Bible as a gift from the church and a reception followed the service. Special music was by Jeani, Mrs. Cliff Poe.

Poe is completing his twentieth month of service as minister to youth in the Sweetwater Church. Prior he served in the same capacity in the Eastern Hills Baptist Church in Albuquerque, N.M. and also in the First Baptist Church in Los Alamos, N.M.

The Rev. and Mrs. Clifford Poe will be moving to San Francisco where he will attend Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary. He has accepted a call as associate pastor to the Stewardship Baptist Church in Hayward, Calif. Mrs. Poe is the former Jeani Schofield of Glendale, Calif.

Cliff, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Poe, also received his bachelor of arts degree from Hardin-Simmons University Sunday afternoon in commencement exercises held in Behrens Chapel.

While in H-S-U, Poe served as president of the freshman class and is a member of Tau Alpha Phi.

Following his senior year in Winters High School and upon his decision to enter the ministry, Poe was licensed to preach by his home church, the First Baptist Church of Winters. Here he served as church pianist and was president of the Runnels Baptist Youth Association.

Documentary Film At St. John's

"To Escape, To Return," a documentary color motion picture will be shown Sunday, May 16, at 8 p. m. in St. John's Lutheran Church.

In the film, leaders of Lutheran World Action explain the difference between "development" and "emergency relief," the Rev. Mel Swoyer, pastor of the church, said. Food for a starving child has quick appeal, he said, but a ploughing ox or irrigation well can be even more important to a famine-threatened family.

The public is invited to see this film on development in Tanzania and Bangladesh.

Elm Creek Meeting

A report of the planning status of the Elm Creek Watershed project will be made next Tuesday night at a meeting of the Elm Creek Water Control District board in the Winters Housing Authority Building, and other interested groups, it was announced this week.

David Ledbetter, president of the board of the district, said that Beade Northcutt, of Waco, leader of the planning party for the Soil Conservation Service, will be present to discuss the status of the project. It was understood that the work plan for the project is 62 percent completed, and expectations are that it will be completed sometime next fall.

Also to attend the meeting and hear the status report will be representatives of the project's sponsoring organizations, in addition to the district board, including directors of Runnels Soil Conservation District, Middle Clear Fork Soil Conservation District, Commissioners' Courts of Runnels and Taylor counties, officials from the cities of Winters and Ballinger, and the Runnels County Water Authority. These were the original sponsors of the proposed project.

It was understood that Northcutt will also discuss alternative locations of proposed water retarding structures on the Elm Creek watershed, and the possible inclusion within the project of a municipal water supply reservoir.

Pre-Nuptial Luncheon On Wednesday

A pre-nuptial luncheon honoring Miss Denise Williams was given Wednesday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Rives.

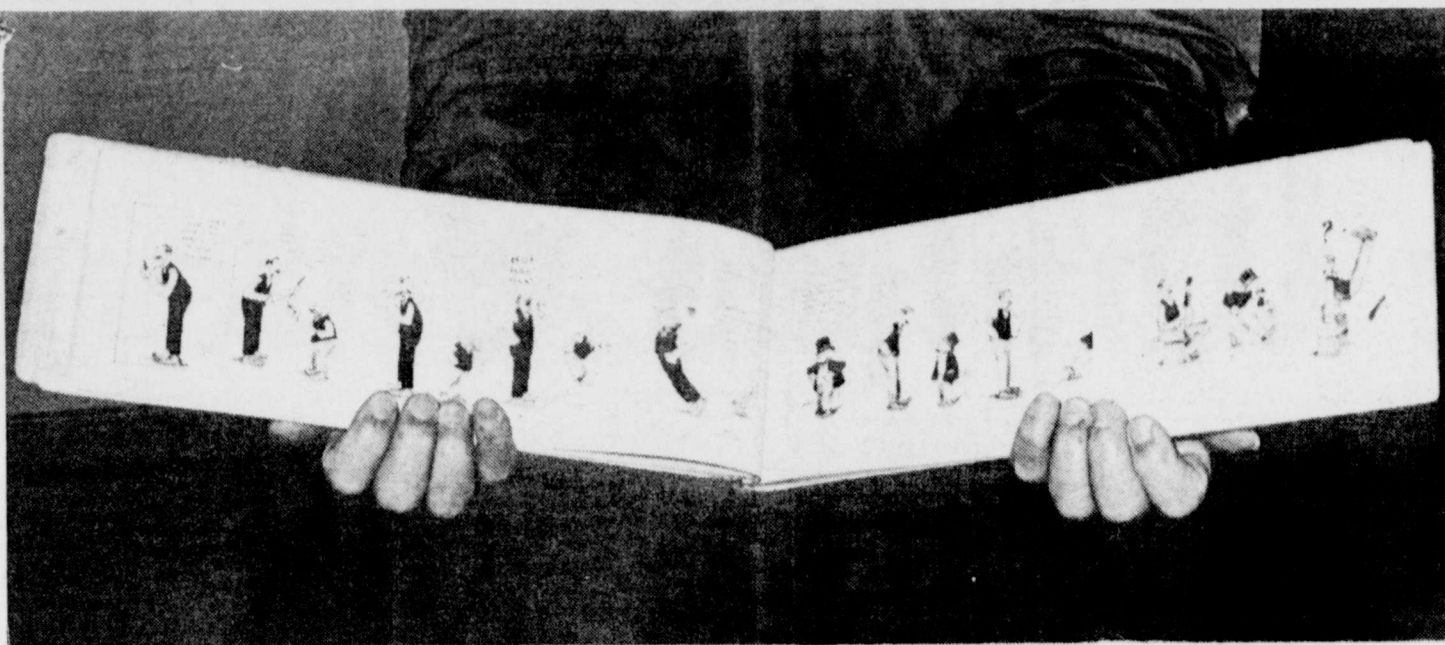

Miss Williams is the bride-elect of Steve Adams, formerly of Beaumont. The wedding will take place in Pakistan in June.

The dining table was laid with Maderia linen cloth and centered with an Italian ceramic lion filled with shasta daisies. Individual card tables were covered with Swiss embroidered cloths. Champaigne glasses filled with pastel colored mints held place cards for each guest.

The honoree was presented a gift of lingerie from the hostess.

Present were Mesdames James F. Williams, mother of the honoree; the honoree's grandmother, Mrs. O. C. Ferguson of New Braunfels, and Mesdames Lee Blackwell of Abilene, Lanny Bahlman, Grif Brown, W. F. Lowe, J. W. Bahlman, W. L. Bean, Charlotte Davis, Pyburn Brown, J. T. Medford and the hostess, Mrs. Rives.

COMIC BOOK—In the beginning, "comic books" apparently were just that—comics, instead of the illustrated stories which pass for comic books these days. The refreshing difference is graphically illustrated in an old comic book which came to light recently.

In going through the effects of the late C. C. Smith, his uncle, M. L. Dobbins came across this old "Mutt and Jeff" comic book. The original "Mutt and Jeff" comic strip, which for many decades was a daily feature in newspapers throughout the country, was by Bud Fisher, and the comic book uncovered by Dobbins was published by the Ball Publishing Co., and Copyrighted in 1914. The strip also was Copyrighted by Bud Fisher in 1908, and by Star Publishing Co. in 1912.

The 61-year-old book found by Dobbins is a long narrow, hard-bound book, the length of the comic strips which appeared in the daily newspapers. This particular edition of the "Mutt and Jeff" comic book was the third edition, as indicated by a foreword by Bud Fisher. Book One was published two years prior to the one shown by Dobbins.

In his foreword, Fisher, apparently with tongue in cheek, pointed out that ". . . my publisher and I . . . decided that we should be a couple of prize boobs if we failed to try and hook you, gentle reader, once more. . . and we herewith produce Book Three, hoping that you and the rest of the public come across as generously as in the past two years . . . we hope you will enjoy this book your fifty cents worth, but let us declare ourselves right here, that whether you (do or do not) your fifty cents will not be refunded."

KRUEGER'S COLUMN

Reflections on Tradition and the American Family

The occasion of Mother's Day prompts reflection on what has happened to the American family in recent years.

The world around us testifies to remarkable change in the past quarter century. Ease of transportation and the breakdown of cultural and class barriers has meant that our citizens have a mobility, both physical and social, beyond that known by earlier generations. There are fewer obstacles to prevent one from achieving his fullest potential than ever before, since education and opportunity surround us.

Nonetheless, as people have found movement easier, and as the ties that many families had previously felt to the land, the neighborhood, and the community in which they live have declined, we have found that the family itself, perhaps more strongly needed than ever, has lost much of its cohesion. The divorce rate has risen, separations have increased, and, often, a kind of war between the generations seems to have taken place, particularly during the late 1960's, but felt still today.

There are no government programs to prevent such changes. Government programs can assist in making education more accessible, and income maintenance more possible. Yet, it will require a recognition of the binding qualities of human affection both for our own families and for those beyond our kin to bring back the family to its full and strong central role as the binding force in our society.

Government can assist some of these things indirectly. For example, last week the House of Representatives passed the Land and Water Conservation Act to assist states in developing outdoor recreation lands, on offering support to the national park system, and in providing funds for the preservation of our historic buildings. In our own Congressional district, the Old Lone Star Brewery in San Antonio, the town of Gruene in Comal County, Ft. Concho in Tom Green County, and the old Charles Schreiner home in Kerr County were among the projects to receive federal funds, after being designated by the Texas Historical Commission. Preserving historic buildings and preserving the land so that it may be enjoyed by all our citizens can help us in sustaining the ties that bind us with our national heritage and with one another. All these will be meaningless, however, if the family, which is the hub of the wheel in our human community, is not sustained and nourished from within.

POE'S CORNER
BY CHARLSIE POE

Mrs. Rankin Pace and Lucy Kittrell can call up a wealth of family stories about Picketville.

Runnels County was uninhabited until Dec. 1862, when a settlement was formed on Elm Creek, near present Ballinger. It was called Picketville because houses were built by setting posts on the ground on end by the four families who lived there for four years, before scattering as others began moving into the county.

Picket pens had also been built at the spot and Mrs. Pace and Miss Lucy say that early trail drivers were always happy when they reached the shelter of this spot in Runnels County.

Their grandfather, Joseph Henderson, a captain in the Civil War, and his brother, John, a captain of the Texas Rangers, helped drive the first herd of steers that went up the Pecos in 1865. Joseph died in 1895, but John lived at Gorman for many years.

The two Hendersons served as scouts and rode ahead to look for Indians, says Mrs. Pace. The drives always followed the course of water and the cattle had to be guarded day and night. The men were invariably glad when they reached Picketville, at the juncture of Elm Creek and the Colorado River, where the cattle were penned and they could rest for the night.

These picket pens had surrounded the dugout homes of the early settlers in protection from the Indians and had remained after the settlers had moved to other locations.

Mrs. Pace has an account of an especially hazardous cattle drive to Montana which took place in 1869 and is related by W. C. Cochran, an old time cowboy. Capt. John Henderson was in charge of a herd of 1500 cattle that left a ranch near Strawn in October.

The Indians were unusually troublesome that year from Texas to the Colorado line. Each man with the herd had three horses and was armed with two six-shooters, most of them had a shotgun and some old Enfield rifles. Captain Henderson was armed with two six-shooters and a shotgun and carried two Hogleg pistols on the horn of his saddle. His chuckwagon was pulled with three yoke of oxen. There was no cook so the boys who drove the wagon took time about with the cooking.

As the herd was driven by Fort Phantom Hill buffalo began to appear and were hardly ever out of sight from there to the head of the Concho. The trail led through Buffalo Gap and Runnels County to San Angelo and Fort Concho where food was bought to last to the Hondo.

The men had been killing deer, turkey and buffalo all the way but at Fort Concho Capt. Henderson gave orders for no more shooting so that if any was heard they would know it was Indians.

A company of 20 Negro soldiers, stationed at Fort Concho, went about half way across the plains with the herd to help guard them. The trip took three days and nights. At Castle Gap, the most dreaded place on the road, moccasin tracks were found where Indians had camped for the night, but they went on down the Pecos and gave no trouble.

When the herd was safely through the gap, Capt. Henderson left about 150 drags and three men with the chuckwagon. Cochran said this could have been a serious mistake. If the Indians had captured the chuckwagon they would have been a hundred miles from the nearest food supply. Cochran thought that Capt. Henderson was too game a man to have charge of an outfit because he couldn't see the danger that might be awaiting him. He rode about five miles in advance of the herd, on a mule most of the time, scouting out the way, knowing that if the Indians found him he had no chance to get away on a mule.

After crossing the plains one of the oxen was lost but he made his way home and was there when the men returned the next year. Capt. Henderson had driven a herd of beef steers to New Orleans for the soldiers during the war and lost this same old steer, but he made his way back to Palo Pinto County.

While the men were eating dinner at the Pecos River they saw dust boiling and thought it was Indians. Capt. Henderson changed his mount and they went to the herd, the Indians turned out to be about 50 mustang ponies coming to water.

However, the banks of the river were still wet at Loving Crossing on the Pecos, where the Indians had just crossed with about 200 horses. They had left a fine span of mules which the men took to Colorado and sold for $300.00. From Loving Crossing the trail led to Good Bend, this side of the river at Roswell, and the cattle were put in winter camp, staying from February to April before going on to Deer Trail, Colo.

Deer Trail was the terminus of the KP railroad and the trading point for all the herds. The cattle were sold here to a man who had been in Palo Pinto County trying to buy cattle when the drive started.

The steers brought $15 a head and the cows $10, but in the trade the cattle were to be delivered to Fort Laramie, Wyo. When they arrived, Patterson's outfit hadn't come so Capt. Henderson made another trade to drive the cattle to meet the man's drovers. They met near the line of Montana.

Pay for the cattle was $20,000 in green backs and Captain Henderson had a belt made to hold the money. It was placed on the youngest member of the group, hoping it would be overlooked if the train were robbed on which the men were returning home. This was in the James and Younger days. All but six of the horses were sold with the cattle and they were sent home with a wagon train.

When the men arrived home safely after nine months and 20 days, they went after their horses only to find they had been stampeded and stolen by the Indians, leaving only two mules for the wagon train. The men had walked to Fort Concho where they bought horses to bring them home.

The greatest outbreak of tornadoes on record was associated with Hurricane Beulah in September, 1967. When this giant hurricane blew through the Texas Coastal area it spawned 115 tornadoes during a five-day period. Sixty-seven of these tornadoes occurred on September 20, a record number for a single day.

In terms of intensity and area covered, the most violent Texas tornado on record swept White Deer, Glazier and Higgins in Texas and Woodward in Oklahoma on April 9, 1947. The huge vortex of this tornado was one and a half miles wide and 221 miles long. The smallest Texas tornado on record was no more than six to eight feet in diameter and occurred in Austin on May 17, 1965.

D.P. Wallace To Get Degree At Texas CU

David P. Wallace of Winters is among some 825 Texas Christian University students who expect to complete degree requirements and receive their diplomas during spring commencement on May 22.

Spring baccalaureate and commencement services, combined into one event for the fifth consecutive year, will be held in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum beginning at 7:30 p. m.

National Weather Service statistics indicate that 95 percent of tornado-related fatalities are caused by only two percent of all tornadoes. These killer tornadoes, called "maxi-tornadoes," are large, fast-moving funnel clouds which hug the ground with unusual persistence.

GRAPEFRUIT BLENDS NICELY INTO SUMMER MENUS

Let's face it. Grapefruit is a winter fruit, with supplies heaviest from January to May.

Of course, today's miraculous food production and marketing system makes fresh grapefruit available all year around. And it's tantalizingly good. This year, we may have fresh fruits available in large volume even longer than usual because about 30 percent of the U.S. grapefruit crop remained for harvest on April 1. That's 2.6 million boxes more than on the same date a year ago, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Market news offices of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service report a steady flow of fresh grapefruit from this season's huge crop, estimated at a record 69.8 million boxes. That's 14 percent more than a year earlier and 6 percent more than the previous record set in 1973-74. Substantial increases are noted especially in Texas and Florida, the two leading grapefruit states.

USDA economists have traced striking changes in consumer grapefruit preferences and taste. Although total sales for fresh fruit went up about 15 percent in the last 20 years, the amount of grapefruit sold fresh, in relation to all other grapefruit products, declined from 53 to 43 percent.

So now, nearly 60 percent of the grapefruit sold are processed into frozen, chilled and canned juice, and chilled sections and salad—about 10 percent more than in the late 1950's.

Consumption of fresh grapefruit decreased from 10.1 pounds per person in 1956-58 to 8.4 pounds in 1973-75. At the same time, fruit consumed in the processed forms increased from 7.8 to 12.3 pounds per person.

Many homemakers say you can't beat a fresh, zingy grapefruit half for breakfast. But many, as well, put a premium on the time saving convenience of ready-to-serve grapefruit juices and other processed items.

As we look ahead to the summer, we can count on an abundance of canned and frozen grapefruit juice to add zest to summer menus long after the present huge supplies of fresh fruit become less plentiful.

And it's not necessary to confine our use of grapefruit juice to a glassful for breakfast. You may want to think in terms of marinating chicken in grapefruit juice, for example. Here's an idea that sounds good. Take:

6 tablespoons grapefruit juice

1 envelope Italian salad dressing mix
1/2 cup salad oil
2 to 3 pounds chicken, cut in serving pieces

Combine grapefruit juice and salad dressing mix in a cruet or jar with a tight-fitting lid. Cover and shake well. Add oil and shake again. Place chicken in a large bowl. Pour oil mixture over chicken pieces, cover and let stand in the refrigerator at least 6 hours, or overnight. Place chicken on rack under preheated broiler. Broil about 15 minutes on each side, or until done. Baste occasionally. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Sheer Beauty Makes Fashion News

Feminine, lightweight, fragile—all describe one of the major fashion moods for spring and summer '76, Mrs. O'Connor, county extension agent, says.

Sheer fabrics, from voiles and crinkly gauzes to chiffons, are an important trend-setting look for designer, ready-to-wear and home sewn fashions, she added.

For added versatility, sheers are often combined with a companion fabric in the same or contrasting color and pattern. Light-to-medium-light wovens, knits or quilted fabrics are ideal for pants, tailored skirts or detail areas, while the companion sheer highlights blouses, jackets, scarves, shawls or full skirts. Popular sheer designs often also feature smocking for yokes, cuffs or waistlines.

She also noted that delicate florals, stripes and solids are sheer fabric fashion leaders, especially when colored as neutrals or pastels.

Many sheer fabrics are comfortable, easy-care cottons and cotton blends. Silk and silk-like sheers have returned strongly for evening and dressier looks, she said.

Will Collect Funds For Mental Health

For many years, May has been set aside as Mental Health Month in the nation. Next week, May 16-22, has been proclaimed Mental Health Week in Winters, and during this period local volunteers will make a house-to-house canvass to collect funds for the Texas Association of Mental Health.

The Rev. Mel Swoyer, chairman of the MH campaign in Winters, said that, "In supporting the Texas Association for Mental Health, you are helping over one million Texans who will experience a mental health problem in their lifetime."

The Rev. Swoyer said the local volunteers can be identified by the official Mental Health volunteer badge with the blue liberty bell symbol they will be wearing.

The chairman said that many myths and prejudices still surround mental illness. For example, he said, one common myth is that "mental illness can be inherited." This is not entirely true, he said. "Certain physical factors which tend to make persons more likely to become mentally ill may be inherited, but the illness itself is not passed from generation to generation."

One highlight which may be of interest as a prelude to Mental Health Week, the Rev. Swoyer said, is a 90-minute film, "Return To Earth," the story of astronaut Buzz Aldrin's bout with mental depression, may be seen on television Friday, May 14, at 8:30 p. m.
