CAMPAIGN TRAIL—Nelson Wolff of San Antonio, chats with local citizens who attended the Winters Senior Citizens Thanksgiving dinner in the Winters Community Center last Friday night. Wolff is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress, Texas Dist. 21, which will be vacated by Cong. Bob Krueger, who will be a candidate for the U.S. Senate. Wolff had previously been erroneously listed as a candidate for Dist. 17.

Sno-Queen Contest, Christmas Parade Only Week Away

Young ladies who are planning to enter the Sno-Queen contest, and those individuals, businesses and organizations planning to enter floats in the annual Christmas parade Dec. 3, are reminded that entry deadline will be next Wednesday, Nov. 30.

Sno-Queen contestants will be sponsored by merchants, with sponsors responsible for providing cars or some type of vehicle for contestants to ride in the parade, which will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3.

Cash prizes will be offered to organizations and merchants who enter floats in the parade. Awards will be $50, $30 and $20.

In the Kiddie section of the parade, for children 12 and under, cash awards of $15, $10 and $5 will be offered.

Sno-Queen contestants and entries in the parade must register at the office of the Winters Chamber of Commerce no later than Wednesday, Nov. 30.

Winters Lions Club members will direct the parade.

Revival At Pentecostal Church of God

Robert Huggins of San Angelo will preach during a revival at the Winters Pentecostal Church of God, on North Cryer, beginning Friday and continuing through Sunday night.

Special singing and music will be featured.

Winters Gets $4677 From Sales Taxes

The City of Winters has received $4,676.65 from the State Comptroller's office, as a rebate for the one-percent sales taxes collected during the last period.

1977 payments to date to the City amount to $58,379.10, an increase of 26 percent over the same period for 1976, according to the Comptroller.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said last week that Texans may be headed for their biggest Christmas holiday shopping spree ever if retail sales continue at their current brisk pace.

Bullock said that city sales tax collections—a prime indicator of the buying public's mood—are up an impressive 22 percent to date over last year, the biggest increase in recent years.

"This increase in retail sales reflects a growing confidence in the Texas economy which we feel will carry over into the holiday shopping period," Bullock said.

Sales tax rebate payments to various towns in the area for the last period were:

Rex Marks Gets Highest FFA Degree

Rex Marks of Lubbock received the American Farmer Degree at ceremonies held during the 50th National Convention of the Future Farmers of America in Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 10. He was one of 801 FFA members selected to receive the American Farmer Degree, highest degree of membership in the FFA. As a holder of the American Farmer Degree, he joins a select group representing about one percent of all FFA members.

Marks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Q. Marks of Winters. A graduate of Winters High School, he is married and lives in Lubbock.

Local Option Election

Voters of Runnels County Justice Precinct 2—which is approximately the entire north half of the county—will go to the polls for a special local option election Monday, Dec. 5, to decide if the sale of beer for off-premise consumption will be permitted.

Absentee voting began Nov. 15, and will end Dec. 1.

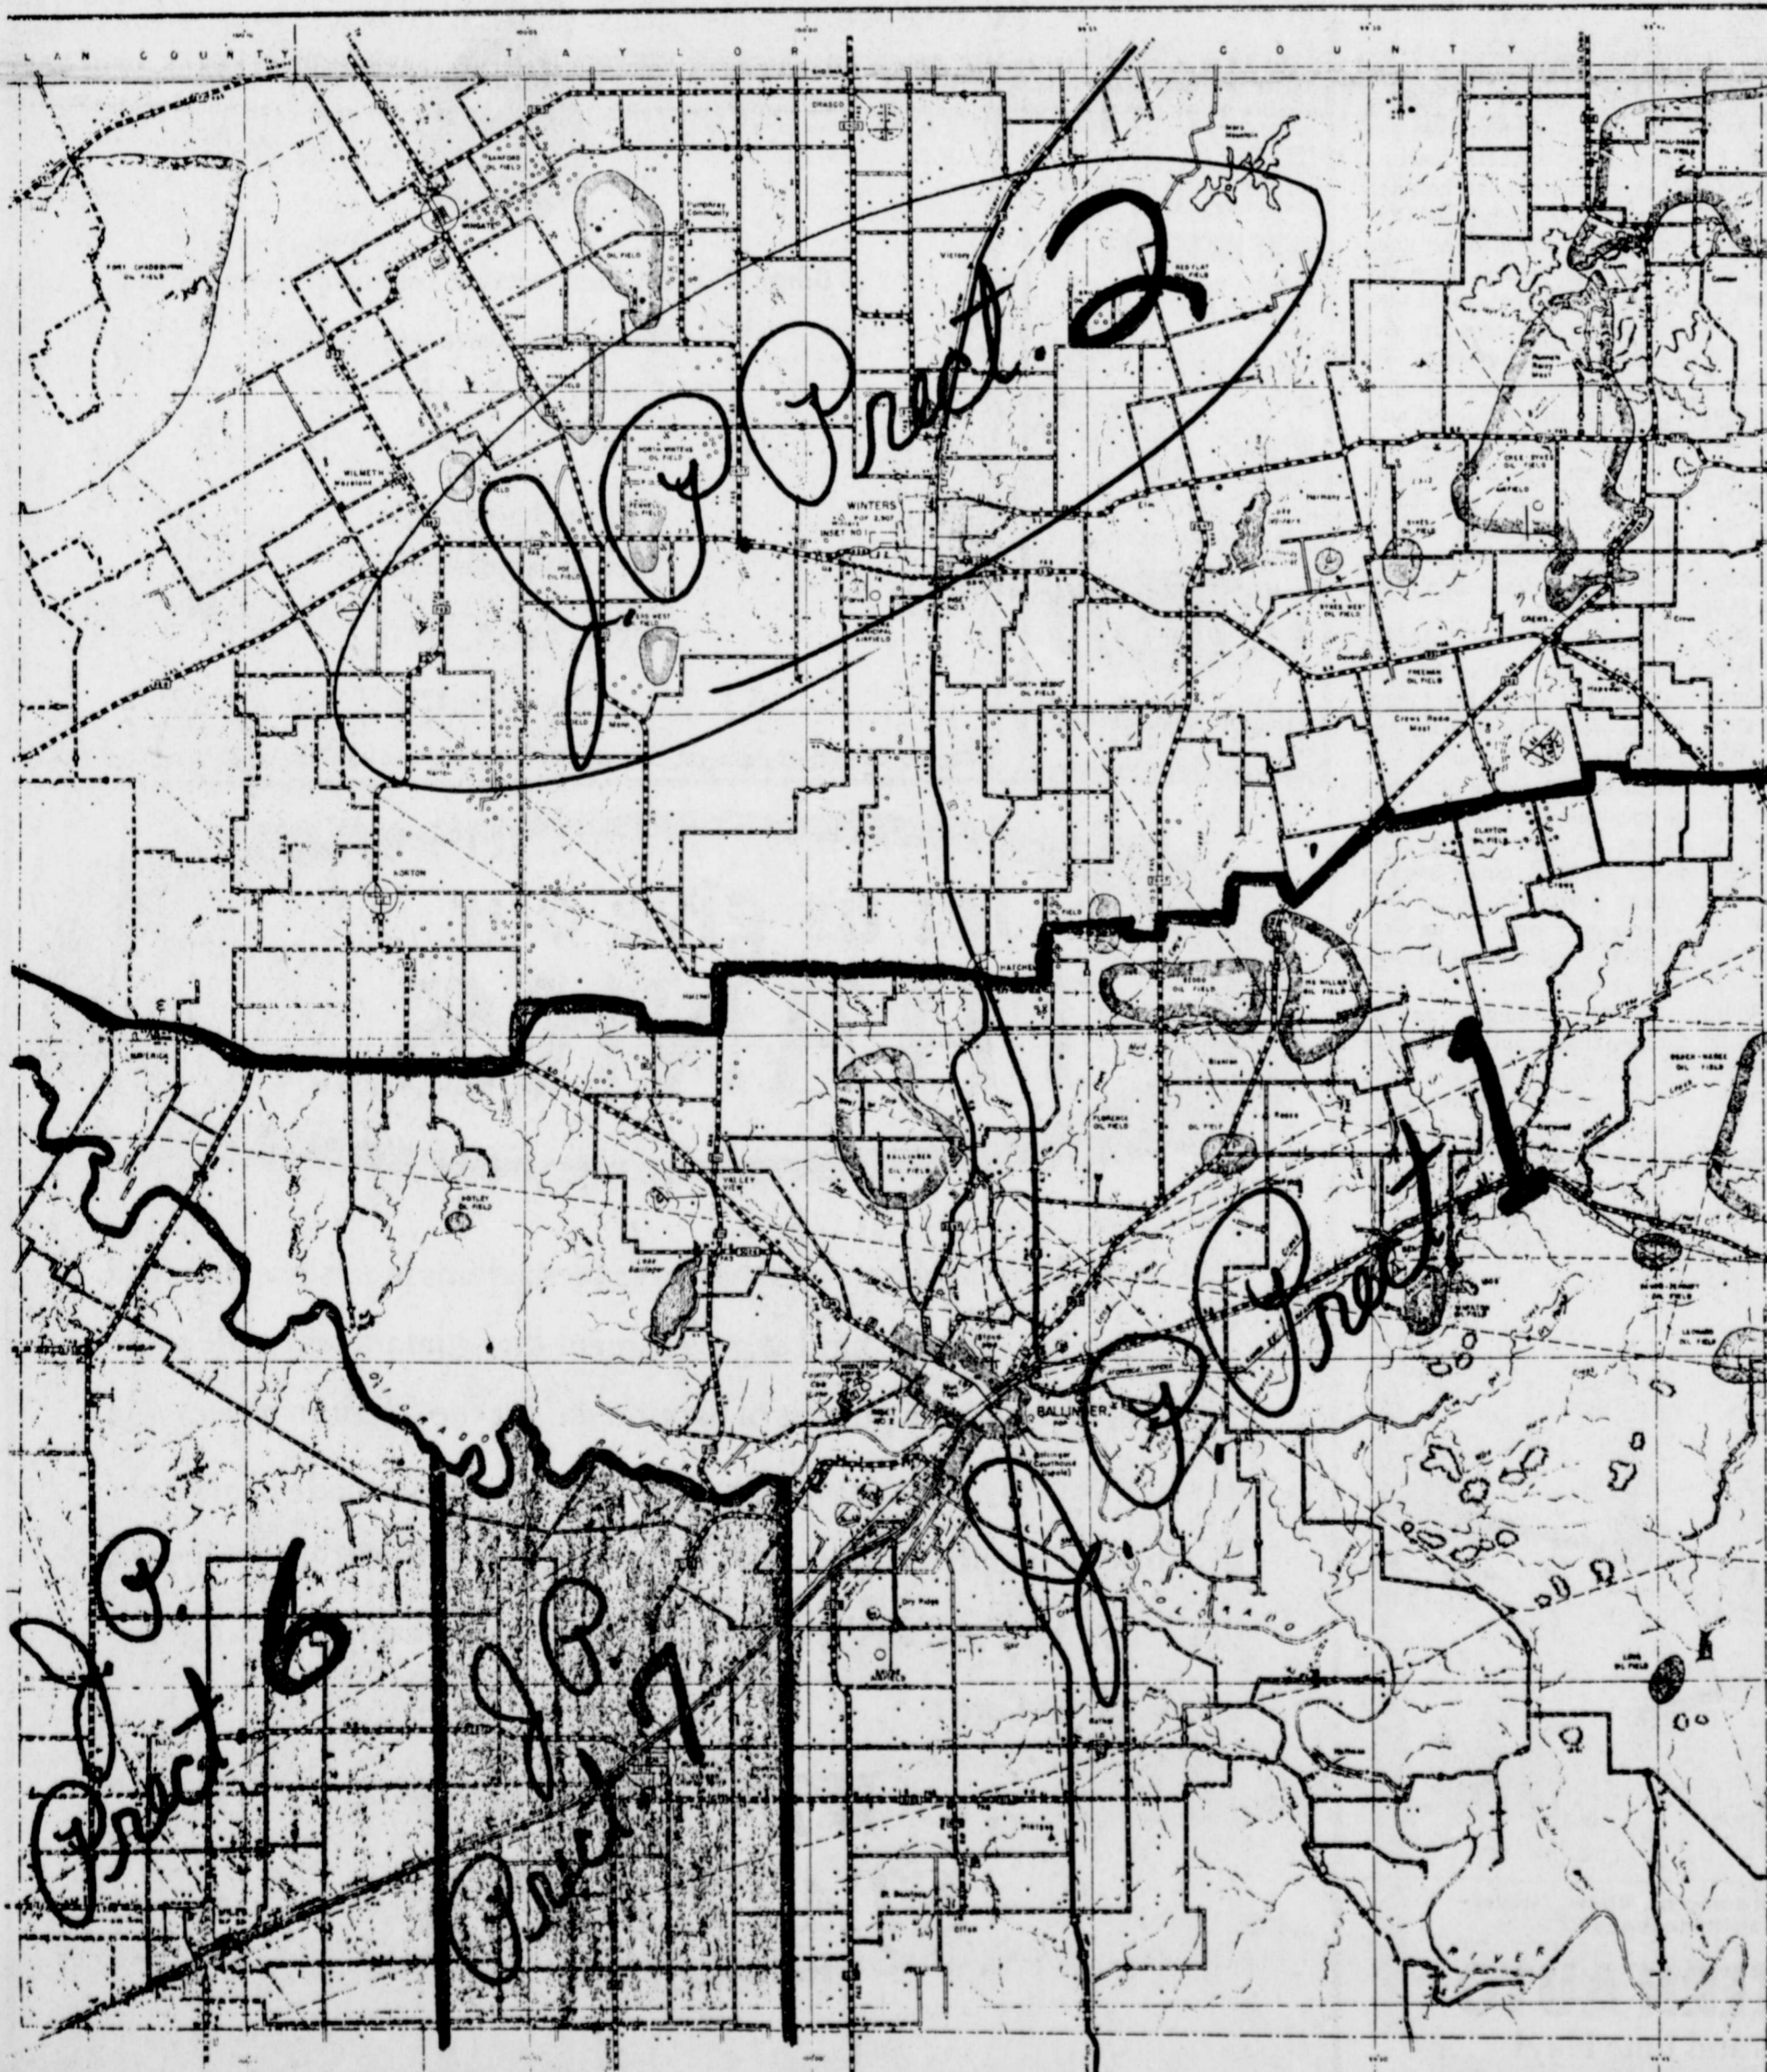

County Commissioners Tuesday of last week ordered the election in response to a petition which had been presented Nov. 11. The petition contained 387 names, of which 83 were disqualified, according to the County Clerk's office, leaving a total of 304 valid signatures, more than enough to qualify for an election call. The required number would be 295, according to the Clerk's office.

Justice Precinct No. 2, in which the election will be held, runs from the north county line to Hatchel, and almost east and west to the east and west county lines. (See accompanying map of the precinct.) Justice Precinct 2 is the largest justice precinct in the county, landwise.

Four voting boxes will be provided for this special local option election: Voter Prec. 3, Winters Community Center; Voter Prec. 4, Winters City Hall; Voter Prec. 5, Wingate School building; and Voter Prec. 6, Norton Community Center.

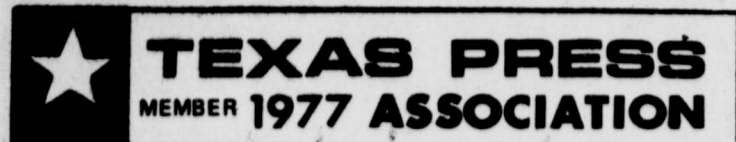

Application for the petition was made Oct. 13, the County Clerk's office said, and returned with signatures Nov. 11.

Ralph Burns, a Private with the Army Engineers stationed in France, said that it was the duty of his unit to build stoves and install them. "They sent me and two more guys to a ward to put up some heaters. We got over there and it was quarantined. We reported back to one Sargeant, but he ordered us to put up the stoves. We found out it was the meningitis ward and we were scared to death. We knew it was the last of us, two or three of the sick men died while we were there, but none of us got sick."

"And another thing, when Armistice was signed we were up at the front where we could hear the booming of the guns, and fixing to go to the top. Believe me, we were glad to get the word."

Rev. Chester Wilkerson, who served as a Corporal with the Coast Artillery, said that he enlisted in August of 1917 and didn't get paid until after Thanksgiving. "We didn't have a lot after we left Galveston on a ship the 19th of Sept. until after Thanksgiving. We stayed in a French billet and had to break the ice on a water trough that was about 30 ft. wide to get water to shave with."

"Going over, an English freighter accidentally ran into us and killed 36 of our men and all were lost on the other ship. We were two days out of France. We had no destroyers with us, and in order to protect us, we were ordered to sit down by a wall of the ship. We sat there from 2 o'clock in the morning until sunrise when we were rescued."

James Corbet Cooper was in Battalion B of the 36th Division and said that his troop was put in old Napoleon barracks for the first two weeks. While there they explored the Hindenburg Castle. The French had torn out all the inside walls and a marble top fireplace looking for secret documents. It had an underground passage that led to a little church about 100 yards from the castle, there was a water well in the passage.

"I was out on the artillery field when the Armistice was signed. When we left France it was on an oil tanker, we got to the Oznes and had to wait two weeks for a fuel tank to bring us oil. The natives would bring fresh bananas out to the boat, but they didn't taste much like bananas."

"We were 21 days coming home, and landed at Newport News, Va."

Cooper and his brother were sent then to Fort Worth to fill in for boys discharged in the 36th Division. They were in General Buckheads division and stayed in France until Oct. 28 of 1919.

Enoch Johnson was in the Meuse-Argonne Theatre of War. "I was in the 343rd Machine Gun Battalion. The old Kaiser was scared of our machine guns and he sent his whole artillery to stop us. He shelled us for seven hours before he made a hit, then he crippled me and killed another guy. So, I was in the hospital when Armistice was signed." Orville Hancock of Wingate was in the Ambulance Co. 142, 36th Division and helped evacuate wounded soldiers back to the field hospital. After they returned from the front they had to sleep in cow barns, way up in the loft. He and his partner were walking along in the loft, the floor gave way and he went through. "My pack caught on a log rafter and my buddy pulled me out, it was 20 ft. down to the concrete floor."

"I was on the front a good while in the Meuse-Argonne and in the Alsace-Lorraine sector, close to the German border, when Armistice was signed. We had gone back for a rest, but were headed back to the front. We didn't get any rest. They kept us at the front two weeks at a time."

The one Navy man, Harry Barker, said that he was in Washington, D.C. in Seaman Gunner School when Armistice was signed Nov. 11, 1918. "I had been through many courses of training, first in Illinois and then sent to Philadelphia to board the battleship, New Jersey, but she was proved unseaworthy. I was then sent to Hampton Roads, Va., to Gunner's Mate School and was fortunate enough to finish 10th highest in a class of 250. So, I had the choice of going to Washington or to Torpedo School in Newport, R.I. I chose Washington, and was there when the war was over."

"They didn't let me out right away, I was transferred to the Naval yard in New York and released March 5, 1920."

Eddie Voelker was a Sargeant with Repair Unit 304, and said that his main duty was overseeing the building and repair of trucks. "I begged the Captain to let me go over seas, but he wouldn't do it, he said I was an instructor and needed where I was."

J. R. Woodfin, a medic, said that he didn't see any active duty. "They quit shooting before we landed and all in the world I did was send gold brickers home. I was evacuating the hospital, attached to the 36th Division, but all medical units were made casual after the shooting, so they could take me out of my company and sent me to Germany. We came back with 150 men sailing in the unit. And all I did was send hospital patients home. I had one old boy stay with me three weeks. He had been hit with 33 caliber machine gun bullets and they didn't kill him."

Horace Abbott said he started out in the infantry and ended up in Air Corps. "The worst thing about the war was the flu and I was right in the middle of it, but I was lucky. Out of 270 of us boys, 67 died right near over night. I never saw so many dead men in my life. They put some of us able bodied boys on guard to keep the civilians out."

"After things settled down, they went to shipping us out, four or five at a time, to one place or another. They sent me over to Kelly Field to the Air Corps. The first thing I did while I was over seas was to deliver mail. I rode an old motorcycle with pockets on the side.

"One day I came in just a snortin', and said to some of the boys I worked with 'I wish I could change jobs.' The mail clerk jumped up and said 'By golly, I'll change with you!'"

"As it happened, the Sargeant of the barracks came over and said, 'Well, I don't see any reason why you can't change if you want to, but you can't do it now. You take his job in the morning when you come to work and he can take yours.'" "From then on I sat at that desk and sorted mail. I was there when Armistice was signed."

For those who were at home, Armistice was the biggest and most thrilling day of their lives.

Fred Young said he would never forget that day. He was in the high school band, which had about 15 or 20 members, and they played every tune they knew three or four times.

Early that morning, King Jordan, who lived where the Baptist Church is now located, stepped out on his porch and fired his six shooter alerting the town. The oil mill blew its whistle at

Krueger's Kolumn

By Cong. Bob Krueger
21st Texas District

The small towns of rural Texas are special places with very specific needs.

Yet the very things that give rural towns their distinctive style are the elements government agencies often overlook when they create public policies and laws.

Based in sprawling metropolitan Washington, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare is guilty of this. With the proposal of recent National Guidelines for Health Planning, HEW has failed to consider the special needs of the small town for quality health care.

The guidelines, not yet approved but printed in the Sept. 23 Federal Register, would result in the phase-out of hospital beds and care units across the nation and throughout Texas, especially in non-urban areas.

McKenna Memorial Hospital in New Braunfels is such a case.

Citizens in New Braunfels have worked for years to develop a care center responsive and sensitive to community needs.

Yet their obstetrics service could be completely cut off within five years under the proposed HEW regulations, leaving expectant mothers forced to travel 30 minutes to the nearest obstetrics unit at Northeast Baptist Hospital in San Antonio.

McKenna Memorial is an example of what could happen to many small town hospitals, should HEW guidelines go into effect. And McKenna is by no means an isolated example.

HEW regulations could seriously affect hospitals in counties throughout the 21st Congressional District, possibly closing obstetrics units in Coke and Concho counties.

In fact, all U.S. cities of under 100,000 stand to lose obstetrics units unless they have 500 deliveries every year. An exception would be made only if a unit served an area where the next nearest care center was more than 45 minutes away.

The proposed HEW regulations are not final. A comment period is in effect until Nov. 22 and already HEW has been flooded with angry mail.

I believe this anger is justified.

Since HEW did not consult with local Health Service Agencies while compiling their rules, the local agencies now have no way of complying with the rules.

A Congressional subcommittee rooted out the facts.

Although specifically required to consult with national councils and state agencies before presenting guidelines, HEW chose not to consult.

Instead, the rules were printed and a 60-day comment period tacked on. Fortunately, the response has been so great HEW officials might now well wonder if they wouldn't have been smarter to do their consulting beforehand.

If HEW has initially failed to recognize small town needs, we must not let them overlook these needs completely. Letters to HEW are important. I have added by voice, writing in protest of these guidelines, to Sec. of HEW Joseph Califano.

Washingtonians, like any big city people, tend to think of mass transportation with metro lines humming, buses roaring and taxicabs only a call away, as a way of life.

Having been brought up in a small town myself, I realize that in rural areas cars are often difficult to come by. Subway stops are not a part of the local landscape. And expectant mothers may have a rough time finding a way to travel 45 minutes one way for pre-natal care even before the baby is born.

We can not and should not take a national average, and like a national shoe, try to force it on every local foot.

Flesh-and-blood people with legitimate needs should always be our foremost concern. The smaller town must be seriously taken into consideration before HEW guidelines go even one step further.

Jack Harrison Died Saturday, Service Monday

Jack Harrison, 68, a long-time Winters businessman, died at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the Ballinger Manor following an illness of several weeks.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Monday in First Baptist Church with the Rev. Fred Thomas, pastor, officiating.

Burial was in Lakeview Cemetery under the direction of Winters Funeral Home.

Mr. Harrison was born near Winters, Feb. 14, 1908. For a number of years he drove a truck for a bakery, and in 1943 he and his nephew, the late P. L.

Harrison, established Harrison's Auto Parts in Winters, which they operated until 1970 when Jack sold his interest to the P. L. Harrison family and retired.

He married Gaylene Sneed, Jan. 19, 1935, in San Angelo.

He was a member of the First Baptist Church and had been a member of the Winters Volunteer Fire Department for more than 25 years.

Survivors are his wife; one sister, Mrs. Jewel Akin of Roswell, N.M.; an aunt, Mrs. C. G. Meeks of Winters; and several nieces and nephews. Pallbearers were J. A.

Mrs. W. F. Zoth Died Saturday In Winters

Mrs. W. F. Zoth, 84, died at 7:35 a.m. Saturday in the Senior Citizens Nursing Home in Winters, following an illness of several months.

Graveside services were held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Anadarko Cemetery, Anadarko, Okla., with Mr. Eddie Beard, minister of the Anadarko Church of Christ, officiating.

Burial was in the Anadarko Cemetery under direction of Winters Funeral Traylor, Gene Virden, Harry London, Bernice Gardner, Ed Roller and Gattis Neely.

Home of Winters.

She was born Jennie Ruth Wright, April 1, 1893, in Coleman County. When she was nine years old, her parents, S. T. and Maggie Wright, moved to Oklahoma where she lived until 1945 when she moved to Littlefield, where she lived for nearly 30 years. She moved to Winters about three years ago.

She married W. F. Zoth in 1912 at Gracemont, Okla. Mr. Zoth died Nov. 23, 1944.

She was a member of the Church of Christ.

Survivors are three sons, Verlon Zoth of Houston, Virgil Zoth of Ovalo, Raymond Zoth of Waynoka, Okla.; one brother, N. V. Wright of Blue Jacket, Okla.; two sisters, Mrs. Velma Roberts of Gridley, Calif., and Mrs. Irene Stevens of Yuba City, Calif.; nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

NASA To Present Aerospace Education Program At School

Winters schools will host the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's lecture-demonstration program, in the school auditorium Wednesday, Nov. 30, at 10 a.m., Tommy Lancaster, principal, has announced.

John R. Donaldson, a faculty member of California State University, representing the Johnson Space Center, Houston, will conduct the lecture-demonstration program. He is serving as an Aerospace Education Specialist for NASA.

Students of Winters High School, and all eighth graders, will see the program, which is a lecture-demonstration program designed to acquaint the educational community and the general public with the role of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the exploration of air and space. The specialists are teachers authoritatively informed on the space sciences and the activities of NASA. They present assembly programs and work in the classrooms with the teachers and students. The programs are presented without charge to the school.

Pecan Growers Invited To Pecan Show

Pecan growers of Runnels County have been invited to take part in the second annual Taylor County Pecan Show, Dec. 1-2, at the Westgate Mall in Abilene, Glenn Bragg, County Extension Agent, has announced.

Runnels County has a large production of pecans, grown both for commercial and landscape purposes, Bragg said, so many people of the county should be interested in learning more about pecans and participation in pecan shows is one method of learning.

Any homeowner or pecan grower is invited to bring 42 pecans to the County Extension office for entry in the pecan show. Growers are limited to one entry of each improved variety and as many different seedlings and natives as desired.

Entries, consisting of 42 nuts, should be placed in a brown paper bag, and the owner's name, address, the variety (if known), and the county should be written on the bag.

Entries must be received in the County Extension office prior to 8:30 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 1.

Library Board Planning Party For Children

The board of directors of Winters Public Library is planning a Christmas party for children Monday, Dec. 19, at 10 a.m., at the library. Christmas stories will be told, and a surprise is in store for the children who will be present, Mrs. Tommy Russell, president of the board, said.

The library board met last Tuesday and accepted the resignation from Billie Farr, who has moved to Muleshoe. Mary Browning was elected secretary to succeed her.

Kathy Bredemeyer, the librarian, gave a report on the summer reading program for next year, which is now being planned.

The library has joined the Double-day Literary Guild, and books on the best-seller list will be available to library members, Mrs. Russell said.

Memorials and donations to the library for the last quarter were acknowledged, including: Dr. and Mrs. Tommy Russell, Mrs. Virginia Schwartz, Mrs. Elo Michaelis, Winters Classroom Teachers, Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Nichols, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Winters Lions Club, Mr. and Mrs. Gattis Neely, Young Homemakers, Mr. and Mrs. Randy Loudermilk, American Legion Auxiliary, Literary and Service Club #90, Diversity Club, #25, and Mrs. Joyce Krause.

Board members present were Mrs. Tommy Russell, president; Mr. and Mrs. Rankin Pace, Mrs. Lillian Lloyd, Mrs. Bob Browning, Mrs. H. M. Nichols and Miss Kathy Bredemeyer.

KRUEGER OF TEXAS

WASHINGTON—In his recent TV talk to the nation, President Carter stated that "energy is everything." I strongly concur with that statement. Energy affects every aspect of our society—our defense, business climate, health services, agriculture—everything. That is why any national leader must have full knowledge of the dramatic impact any national energy program will have on the entire nation. President Carter's goals for a long-term national energy program are, in my estimation, also correct, those being to (1) cut back on our nation's energy consumption, (2) to eventually shift from our total energy dependence on oil and gas, (3) to provide incentive for domestic production, thereby relieving our tremendous reliance on expensive foreign oil.

It is in the approach to achieving one of these goals on which I have mainly differed from the President. I do not believe the solution to solving our energy problem lies in the creation of a $10 billion a year bureaucracy to regulate our energy production. I believe the costs to the taxpayer to fund this regulatory agency, coupled with the inefficiencies inherent in any massive bureaucratic agency, will, in the long haul, prove to be the problem, not the solution. President Carter, as quoted in the Austin American-Statesman on October 29, also stated that his program was "a move toward deregulation." I believe the first step to phasing out price controls should not be to create another Federal bureaucracy to regulate prices, but to simply offer a long-term phaseout program.

This is why I offered legislation in this and the last Congress with the objective of eventually phasing out federal price controls of new natural gas.

Even though this year my five-year phaseout amendment was blocked from being introduced on the floor of the House by the Republicans who would not budge from immediate deregulation and by many northern Democrats who knew my phaseout amendment would pass, the Senate, with the strong leadership of Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen, passed an identical bill, except with a two-year phaseout instead of my five-year one. Both bills also eliminated re-negotiation contracts, which would have allowed prices to escalate to the highest price paid in any given gas field. As I stated in a speech before the Texas Senate in January, the elimination of re-negotiation contracts is extremely important in the overall effort to insure that the Texas consumers will be protected from any sharp rise in utility bills due to the re-negotiation of old gas contracts.

I have also spoken out for a windfall profits tax on oil production, energy tax credits for middle and lower income families, peak load pricing and a rate structure whereby larger users of electricity pay more per kilowatt hour, while consumers are rewarded for their conservation efforts.

So phased-out federal price regulation is not dead yet. The House-Senate conference committee will undoubtedly strongly consider a proposal very close to my five-year phaseout. I continue to have high hopes that the conference committee will meet the challenge and agree to this concept.

If phased-out federal pricing controls are not passed, and if we have one big regulated market, regulated by Federal bureaucrats in Washington, we would also see the extension of Federal allocation authority to Texas. This simply means that the Federal government could arbitrarily allocate away our present gas supplies. This would be doubly unfair because part of the higher prices which Texas consumers have paid for this gas over the past few years has been used to explore for and produce future supplies for the benefit of those same Texas consumers. Federal allocation authority would also mean the strong possibility that Texas jobs would be lost because businesses which have been moving to Texas mainly because of our availability of energy would rapidly become subjected to the same uncertainties that now beset industry served by the out-of-state market.

One final point . . . phased-out Federal price controls are important now in order to provide the proper incentives to produce the needed gas supplies for today, so that we can have the proper time to develop economically and environmentally sound alternative sources of energy such as solar and tidal energy.
