Public Asked To Voluntarily Ration Water

WINNERS—Laurie Cole of Ballinger, was named "Ideal Miss of 1978" in the "Our Little Miss Pageant" held in Ballinger Saturday. Karen Carter, right, of Winters, was named "Our Little Miss" in the 7-12 age bracket. Amy Elizabeth Gibbs, also of Winters, was named "La Petit" in the 3-6 division. The three top winners will go to the state pageant to be held in Arlington in July. Miss Carter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carter of Winters; Miss Gibbs is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Gibbs of Winters.

In an effort to postpone—at least temporarily—enactment and implementation of an effective water conservation ordinance, Winters City Council this week asked for public support of a voluntary rationing program designed to conserve the dwindling supply of water in the Winters Lake.

Winters' water consumers—as well as the customers on the rural lines fed by the Winters water system—are asked to voluntarily stop watering lawns and gardens, including trees and shrubbery, and to cut back on household water consumption. Voluntary restrictions on lawn and garden watering, coupled with household conservation practices, perhaps will eliminate the need for passage of strict control measures, the council indicated.

Some type of conservation measures—voluntary or by ordinance—is necessary to stretch the water remaining in the Winters Lake, the council said. The lake has caught no appreciable amount of water in the past several months, and hope that the lake will be filled within the next few weeks is dim, because the summer months in this area usually are rainless to a big extent, council said.

Without voluntary cooperation on the part of consumers, the council pointed out, strict and enforceable measures must be enacted. This they hesitate to do, they said, but if water consumption continues at the present rate, and no water is caught in the lake, this step must be taken.

The council, meanwhile, is preparing ordinances which would place tight controls on the use of water, and would provide stiff penalties for violators.

Regular reading of water meters will be done within the next two weeks, it was understood, and if the readings indicate that consumption of water is not lowered to an acceptable level in order to conserve the water supply, the council will be forced to take drastic action, they said. In the meantime, it was explained, before the meter readings are compiled, if water consumption has not been reduced, a special session of the council will be called to enact an ordinance for water rationing.

Council members expressed confidence that the public would cooperate in this time of emergency, and that strong action will not become necessary.

Engineers Given Nod To 'Go Ahead' For New Dam

Winters City Council Monday night approved a work order authorizing an engineering company to make preliminary surveys of the site for the proposed dam and reservoir for additional water for the City of Winters, and to make preparations for applying for amendments to the city's present water permits.

The proposed site, as selected by the council recently, is below the present Lake Winters dam, and north of FM 53.

The council also approved signing of a contract with a law firm to represent the city in all legal matters concerning the water permit applications and appearances before state agencies in that connection.

Cost of the surveys, including core-boring, and legal counsel, could run as high as $40,000, it was said.

Meanwhile, the city is exploring the possibility of tapping known wells on the outskirts of the city to mix with and supplement the lake water supply. One well, it was said, had been found, and it was estimated that it would produce 60 gallons a minute. A thorough production test is being planned, and the water has been tested for purity. Complete purity tests have not been made, it was pointed out, but preliminary tests indicate that the nitrate and salt content of the water, when mixed with lake water, would be below the acceptable and safe level.

MISS CONGENIALITY—Katherine Bredemeyer of Winters was named "Miss Congeniality of 1978" in the "Our Little Miss Pageant" sponsored by the Ballinger Chamber of Commerce Saturday. Miss Bredemeyer, a Winters High School student, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bredemeyer.

All lady golfers have been invited to participate in this Saturday tournament.

"Ignoring Threat Of Rabies Could Be Costly"

If residents of the community continue to ignore the threat and danger of rabies in the community, until the situation becomes really bad within the city, "it will be too late," Dr. Jimmy Smith, Winters veterinarian told the Winters City Council Monday night.

A human life "is worth much more" than the cost of a program of a domestic animal control program, Dr. Smith said, but even if the cost is high, "the taxpayers should be willing to pay for protection."

Reports continue to be received of wild animals—especially skunks—which are suspected of being rabid, being sighted in the community under unusual circumstances. Skunks are normally nocturnal animals, it was pointed out, and continued and increasing daytime sightings are an indication that something is wrong in the skunk population. For instance, Dr. Smith said, 14 skunks were sighted and destroyed within a 13-day period, just north of town.

If these animals should come into direct contact with some of the many roaming dogs or cats in the neighborhood, the situation could get out of hand, Dr. Smith said. It is estimated that there are hundreds of "unowned" dogs in the immediate neighborhood, in addition to the many pets which are allowed to roam at will, but have not received rabies immunization shots. These animals present a real and dangerous problem, if the situation is allowed to continue as it is, the council was told.

Several alternatives were discussed by the council, including organization of an animal control department, registration of all pet animals, and ordinances to require that all dogs are kept penned at all times and vaccinated. Cost of any of the proposals suggested was not known, and the council will make inquiries of other cities and will study types of action which can be taken. Alderman Randy Springer was appointed to work with Dr. Smith to make a detailed study of the situation and to recommend solutions, including regulatory ordinances if needed.

Public Library Will Have Summer Reading Program

Since summer provides a time for recreational reading and for pursuing special interests, it is usually the busiest time of the year in children's departments in public libraries.

Activities in Winters Public Library will be no exception this summer, as the local library participates in the Summer Reading Club sponsored by the Texas State Library and local public libraries. Young readers taking advantage of the Winters library facilities will be among 140,000 young Texans taking part in the summer program.

Library hours for Winters Public Library are from 4 to 6 p. m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday, Katherine Bredemeyer, librarian, said.

Participants in the Summer Reading Club for 1978 will be invited to "Come to Himeral!" Their trip will take them to a fantasy land where any dream can come true. To mark their journey, they will receive a reading log that shows mountains, swamps, and castles inhabited by fantastic creatures. Special activities also will be planned for the summer.

Poe's Corner

BY CHARLISE POE

Rev. Martha Woelke, who was honored by the Winters Ministerial Alliance with a farewell reception at the Senior Citizens Nursing Home Saturday, has made a real contribution to the life of our town and she will be missed. We wish her and husband, Alfred, bon voyage as they travel to Hawaii, the island paradise.

The Woelkes will live in the town of Honakaa on the main island of Hawaii, where she will pastor a Pentecostal mission. Her son, Hugo Michling, has lived there for eleven years. He is employed with the National Cash Register Co., where he repairs and takes care of computers. He is also in REACT and a reserve coast guard.

Rev. Woelke came to Winters Sept. 18, 1974, as a minister of the Pentecostal church when it was located in the old Presbyterian building. It was later moved to 608 N. Cryer. She has also been employed at the nursing home. Since her resignation, W. L. Lorton has been called as pastor. He is technician at the North Rannels Hospital.

Beginning at her birth, Martha Woelke has had a very unusual life. She was reared by her grandparents, believing they were her parents, not knowing that her father had been killed in World War I seven months before she was born and the shock caused her mother to lose her memory.

No one explained the situation to the child. She had seen her mother but thought she was only a relative. When she was nine years old her mother's memory returned and she looked at her and said "You are my daughter."

This was a great shock to Martha. She cried and said "No, I don't want to be your child." She never accepted the situation and remained with her grandparents. Mrs. Woelke believes from her experience that children should always be informed and they will understand.

During her growing up years, Mrs. Woelke says that she was a real tomboy. She wore Stetson hats, cowboy boots and pants and could outtrope, outride and outfight anybody. She married young and had four children, two girls and two boys. After becoming a Christian at the age of 27, she changed her way of life and gives God the credit for making a lady out of her.

From the time she was 28 until the age of 35, Mrs. Woelke was seriously ill with leukemia, heart trouble and asthma. The doctor said she could not possibly live, but through faith and prayer her health was restored. She continued teaching a Sunday School class of 17 year-old boys. They came to her bedside for their lesson before going to church. She is proud that two of them became preachers.

Mrs. Woelke lost her first husband in 1958 when her youngest child, John, was only a year old. He was too young to remember his father but when he grew older he wanted a daddy so much that he began to try to help the situation along. When he found a man he liked he would introduce him to his mother and say "Don't you think he would make a good daddy?"

When she began dating Mr. Woelke, John was carried with them, but with strict instructions from his mother to "keep quiet." He obeyed for several days, but finally blurted out "When are you and mother going to get married?" The couple was married at Cuero in 1967.

Mrs. Woelke felt called to preach when she was 46 years old, but resisted the call for six years. Due to the strict upbringing of her grandmother, who was 3/4 Cherokee Indian and her Irish grandfather, straight from Ireland, she was taught to believe that women should be seen and not heard, especially in church.

While employed in a nursing home at Cuero, Martha Woelke began doing some preaching out of necessity. They had a list of preachers who were supposed to alternate in conducting the religious services at the home or send a substitute. Many times the preachers failed to show up or to send anyone. After trying to locate someone by telephone and many times failing, she began making talks after she and the manager and her daughter provided a song service.

After two years of study, Rev. Woelke was licensed to preach in 1972 at Temple. She received her ordination at the Convention in Austin on June 12, 1976. The general superintendent comes from Joplin, Missouri for the ceremony.

When John was sixteen years old he became very ill and his mother gave him a kidney in an effort to save his life. He recovered nicely, but later received a brain concussion in an accident and died in July of 1973.

Following John's death, her children paid the Woelke's way to Hawaii for a vacation, and they loved every minute of it. Hugo is married to a lovely Hawaiian girl and she is counting on having some help in becoming acquainted with the island.

With the advent of her daughter-in-law into the family, Mrs. Woelke says that she now has a United Nations family. Her children's father was German; daughter, Cherry, is married to a Dutch boy named Bruyssaard and they live in Houston. The other daughter, Linda Reeves has an Irish mate and they live at Helotes.

Before leaving for Hawaii, on June 13, the Woelkes will visit her mother who is now past 80 years old. Martha says they have had a good relationship since she grew up. They will also attend the Pentecostal Convention in Austin.

ROBINSON CHEVROLET

RESTRICTING OSHA NECESSARY—U.S. Rep. Bob Krueger talks with businessmen about the U.S. Supreme Court's decision that requires inspectors for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) to obtain search warrants to make unexpected safety checks. Krueger, who supports the decision, is the co-sponsor of federal legislation which would further aid small businesses overburdened with detailed federal requirements. The bill, which is awaiting Congressional action, would limit OSHA to giving only warnings to businesses with 25 or less employees instead of costly fines for first-time safety violations.

Krueger's Kolumn

By Cong. Bob Krueger
3rd Texas District

The U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision that federal inspectors from Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) must have search warrants before they can make unannounced safety checks is welcome news—particularly to small businessmen already overburdened by bureaucratic red tape.

Government bureaucracies in general, and OSHA in particular, have already intruded too much in our public and private lives and I am pleased that in this instance, the Supreme Court has reasserted the right of the individual.

The Fourth Amendment to the Constitution plainly prohibits unreasonable searches and seizures and requires warrants. Police agencies have lived by those rules since 1789; OSHA should be no exception.

But requiring a search warrant alone isn't the final solution to problems small businessmen have encountered in dealing with OSHA and its requirements.

We also need legislation which will change the current policy which allows OSHA to fine businessmen the very first time inspectors spot a safety violation.

For small businessmen in particular, with often limited resources, this policy is unfair. I am co-sponsoring legislation which would require OSHA to issue warnings rather than citations to businesses with 25 or fewer employees the first time a violation is recorded.

I have no quarrel with OSHA's goals—that of making sure employees have safe working conditions and preventing serious occupational diseases. Safeguards must be built in to guarantee that businesses fulfill these very basic responsibilities to their employees.

But a fine line exists between the definition of "precautionary" or "preventive" measures and nitpicking regulations. Measures intended as safeguards can turn into liabilities if they create more problems than they solve.

OSHA tends to be guilty of the latter. Since it was put into effect in 1970, it has created numerous problems for both large and small businesses. According to the hundreds of letters about OSHA I began receiving as soon as I arrived in Washington three years ago, small businessmen in particular have found it difficult to make a living and meet the often overly-detailed OSHA safety requirements.

I hoped they would receive some relief when earlier this year OSHA announced it would end the enforcement of some 1,100 especially useless regulations. But the implementation of that new policy has already extended beyond the initially stated five-month period, and whether it will provide as much relief as hoped for has yet to be seen.

The situation is indeed ironic: It takes more than five months to undo regulations which apparently weren't necessary to begin with.

The situation will not be resolved by the Supreme Court's decision concerning inspection searches. Some people, in fact, think that the warrants will become a mere formality.

But the decision does bind one particular arm of bureaucratic power in favor of the individual's rights—and that is definitely a step in the right direction.

Cong. Bob Krueger Urges Meat Import Limitations

Cong. Bob Krueger of Texas has testified before the House Ways and Means Committee urging immediate Congressional action to limit meat imports.

"Swift enactment of limits on meat imports is sorely needed by the Krueger is the author of legislation requiring that foreign slaughter-houses be subject to the same standards as American slaughterhouses, and which would require that all meat entering the United States be labeled as imported with the country of origin.

consumers ought to have access to labeling which allows them to choose the food they wish to eat," said Krueger.

Krueger's bill would also close the loopholes in the annual beef import quota which exempt prepared and preserved meat from inclusion in calculations of allowable meat imports.

This provision, according to Krueger, would help ease the burden of domestic meat producers who face severe economic difficulty aggravated by a glut of imported meat into the United States.

During testimony, Krueger also praised the counter-cyclical approach of Senator Benton's Beef Import Act of 1978 and said the Act would, "help moderate the devastating swings in meat prices to the benefit of both producers and consumers."

Benton's bill, already passed by the Senate, would change the present formula in which imports increase as domestic production increases and imports decline as domestic production declines. Instead, increased imports would be permitted only when domestic production was low and could not meet consumer demand.

The proposed work would widen the pavement from 22 feet to 24 feet with 8-foot paved shoulders. The road base also would be strengthened to bring the facility up to modern standards.

Gerald G. Lackey of San Angelo is the department's engineer in charge of the project, working under the direction of District Engineer D. R. Watson.
