Winters' youths attend Salvation Army camp

Seven boys from Winters were selected to attend summer camp at the Salvation Army's Camp Hoblitzelle near Midlothian from Monday, July 13, to Saturday, July 18, according to L. C. Foster and Ted Meyer, The Salvation Army Service Unit Camp co-chairmen for Winters.

Boys chosen to attend the camp this summer are J. Armando Salas, Ben DeLa Cruz Jr., Clint Johnson, Johnny Wilborn, Ronny Wilborn, Bobby DeLa Cruz, and Eric Snuffer.

"This will be an excellent experience for these boys at one of the finest camps around," L. C. Foster said. "At Camp Hoblitzelle they will enjoy boating, hiking, archery, horseback riding, fishing, swimming, handicrafts and baseball as well as worship services and Bible study."

All organized activities are supervised by coaches and counselors. The campers are housed in brick and redwood cabins and receive well-balanced meals in the camp dining hall.

"This camping experience is provided for the boys through the Local Service Unit Committee of The Salvation Army. The Service Unit receives financial support through local citizens' contributions to the Annual Finance Campaign," Ted Meyer said.

Camp Hoblitzelle is built on 360 wooded acres with a 27 acre lake and is fully equipped with modern recreational facilities. The Salvation Army operates Camp Hoblitzelle for deserving children from all areas of the state.

The seven boys from Winters will be joining approximately 4,000 other campers who will enjoy the facilities of Camp Hoblitzelle this year.

Rodeo clown

Ronnie Gayle of San Antonio, rodeo clown and bull fighter, will work the second annual IRA rodeo in Winters Friday and Saturday of next week. He also will make appearances in area towns Wednesday and Thursday to promote the Winters rodeo.

Off to camp

This group of boys left early Monday morning for the Salvation Army summer camp at Midlothian. They will return Saturday, following a week of various outdoor ac-ivities. Ted Meyer, Winters Salvation Army unit service officer, took the boys to the camp. Winters Chief of Police L. C. Foster helped to organize the outing for the boys.

West Texas Rehab meets challenge

Twenty-four hours before the deadline, West Texans exceeded by $473,669 a challenge requirement issued to the West Texas Rehabilitation Center by the J.E. and L.E. Mabee Foundation of Tulsa Oklahoma.

The foundation announced on April 1, 1981 that it would put $500,000 into the West Texas Rehabilitation Center San Angelo building project if the campaign raised $1,049,540 by July 10.

At noon on Thursday, July 9, campaign chairman Lee Pfluger reported to the WTRC board of directors that $1,523,209 had been received in cash and pledges which, combined with the Mabee Foundation grant, not only assures construction of a new rehabilitation but gets WTRC well down the road toward furnishing and equipping the new building.

Said Pfluger, "When we formally launched our campaign on March 10, we were talking about raising $1.5 million - and that was for construction alone; it didn't include equipment, furnishings, or landscaping."

"For me to be able to announce today that we have $2,023,209 including the Mabee Grant, is testimony to West Texan's tradition of 'neighbor helping neighbor' and their acceptance of WTRC's consistency with that tradition," Pfluger said.

Now taking applications for housing

Vera LaFoon, executive secretary for the Housing Authority of the City of Winters, said Tuesday she has begun to take applications for rentals in the new housing unit now under construction in southeast Winters.

LaFoon said that construction on the new project has reached the 64 percent completion point; an October 25 completion date is anticipated.

There are 30 units in the new project, with six one-bedroom units, two of which will be strictly for the handicapped. The other 24 units are two-, three- and four-bedroom units.

Rent will be based on the renter's income, LaFoon said.

Carroll Daily superintendent at Wingate

Carroll Daily, formerly of Center Point, has been named superintendent of Wingate Independent School District.

Daily succeeds Karl Schoenfeld, who has been superintendent at Wingate for the past six years.

The new superintendent of schools will move to Wingate in August, according to a spokesperson of the school district.

Pro-IRA Rodeo here next week

The second annual Winters IRA Rodeo kicks off Friday, July 24 in the Winters Rodeo Arena just north of the city and sponsored by the Winters Rodeo Association.

Livestock for the rodeo will be furnished by the Devil's River Rodeo Company of Sonora. IRA sanctioned events in the rodeo will be bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, steer wrestling, calf roping, bull riding, cowgirl's barrel racing and team roping.

A rodeo parade has been slated for 6 p.m. Friday evening in downtown Winters and will feature the Rodeo Queen contestants, riding clubs from around the area, floats, and other riders.

Well known rodeo clown Ronnie Gayle of San Antonio will provide entertainment at the rodeo and also will be visiting the Winters merchants on both Friday and Saturday.

Advance tickets for the rodeo are being sold by the Queen contestants for $3 for adults and $1 for children six and under, at the gate tickets will sell for $3.50. The rodeo performances will begin at 8 p.m. on both Friday, July 24, and Saturday, July 25.

Books for the rodeo will open Wednesday, July 22, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Western Art Show one highlight of rodeo week

The first exclusively "western" art show and sale in Winters, featuring work by nine well-known western artists, will be one of the highlights of activities here next week, during "Rodeo Week."

The art show is being sponsored by the Winters Country Club, and will be held at the country club five miles south of Winters on US 83.

An "invitation-only" Collector's Preview Party will open the two-day event, with a showing and sale of professional western art, Friday, July 24, from 5 to 7:30 p. m. The show and sale for the general public will continue through Saturday, July 25.

The nine artists exhibiting their works will include: Terrell O'Brien, drawings; Bill Leftwich, paintings; Charles Sawyer, paintings; Herman Walker, paintings and bronze; Sareta Fenton, paintings and bronze; Alan Kinney, paintings; Robert Taylor, bronze; Justin Wells, drawings; and Paul Wylie, paintings and bronze.

Randy Springer, E. J. Bishop and Jerry Sims are in charge of arrangements for the Country Club.

Background on the nine artists who will have work in the show follows:

ALAN KINNEY

Alan Kinney was born in August, 1944, in Coleman, Texas. His family ranched and raised sheep which gave an ideal environment for young Alan to grow up in. After doing undergraduate work at Tarleton State University, he received his B.S. degree in Art Education from Hardin - Simmons University.

One of his favorite pastimes is rodeos, which he actively participated in during his college days.

He presently spends full time in professional art work at the Framemaker's Gallery of Kerrville.

TERRELL O'BRIEN

Terrell O'Brien and his wife Vickie make their home near Lamesa in West Texas. They have two children, Michael, 3 years, and Tammi, 1 year. O'Brien studied commercial art and received his degree from Stephen F. Austin State University in 1971. There he met and studied under Reese Kennedy, Professor of Art and founder of the Southwestern Watercolor Society.

Since receiving his degree, O'Brien has been involved in farming in Dawson County where his family has had farming interests since 1925. O'Brien feels that while his endeavors as an artist and farmer are different, they are also very much the same. Being involved in working with nature and having a love for the land as a farmer are things that are reflected in his drawings and paintings. Weathering old barns, farm houses, windmills, relics of the early farm and ranch days, scenes of the oil industry and the beauty of the Texas landscape are portrayed in his ink drawings and oil paintings. His ink drawings have been reproduced as etchings which are sold throughout the U. S.

PAUL WYLIE

Paul Wylie grew up on a ranch and spent his entire life as a cowboy before turning his skills to western art in late 1970. His interest in art dates back to his childhood, and acceptance of his work made art his fulltime profession in late 1976.

An honest reflection of life as it is lived in the western ranch country, Wylie's art reflects his own times as a cowboy and reaches back into times recalled by fellow rangers.

South Plains College at Levelland gave Wylie his first one man show in September, 1971, after he had completed a beginner oil painting class taught by Don Stroud. Many of his early paintings may still be viewed in the college library; at the South Plains Museum, Levelland; the Llano Estacado Museum, Plainview; and St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, Lubbock. An impressive permanent collection of Wylie's bronzes is displayed at the Levelland State Bank, Levelland.

JUSTIN WELLS

Justin Wells was born in Elk City, Okla., in 1941. He lived in Texas and California before returning to Oklahoma in 1950. He is a graduate of Putnam City High School and has attended Central State University in Edmond, Okla.

Justin Wells of Amarillo likes to do one thing - draw horses. More specifically, he sketches and paints the people, animals and landscapes associated with the horse culture of the American West.

Wells moved to Texas in 1976. The next year he joined the Texas Cowboy Artists Assn. That same year, 1977, he won the Gold Medal for drawing in the TCA Annual Show. He won the Gold again in 1978, and the silver in 1979. In 1979, he served as president of the TCA.

CHARLES SAWYER

A true Texan with multiple talents, Charles Sawyer has combined his experiences in ranch living with his talent for drawing, painting and sculpture. He began drawing at an early age and found subject matter in his surroundings on ranches in Texas and New Mexico.

He has paintings hanging in several well known galleries, including The Windmill, Abilene; The Double T Ranch Gallery, Lubbock; Fun Valley, South Fork, Colo.; Texas Ranger Museum Gallery, Waco; and Hanging Tree Gallery, Midland.

Sawyer was artist of the month at Stamford, and has illustrated Jack North's book, "Pioneers of the Abilene Area." He has paintings in 32 states and three foreign countries, Canada, Mexico and Germany.

Sawyer now lives at Blackwell with his family, Alta Jean, Cody Mitchell and Connie, where he paints full time and ranches on the side.

DR. ROBERT TAYLOR

Robert Taylor is 32 years old, has been sculpting for four years, and has sold out of five different editions of bronze. He was born in Pueblo, Colo., and now lives in Snyder. He has a mixed veterinary practice. He also has his own fine arts foundry named Hidetown Bronze, where he casts his own bronzes.

His works have been shown at Savage Art Galleries, Santa Fe, N. M.; ProRodeo Gallery at the ProRodeo Hall of Champions, Colorado Springs, Colo.; and also at Fenton's, Snyder.

His works are very exquisite in detail and he concentrates on Western, Indian and wildlife themes.

HERMAN WALKER

Herman Walker was born in 1944 and grew up on a ranch covering 125 square miles near Eldorado.

During those years, he spent many hours drawing and painting to pass the time, but never gave much thought to the talent he has. Upon completion of high school, he entered Texas Tech University majoring in animal science. His last semester in college, he enrolled in a sculpture course which would literally alter his life's ambitions.

In 1973, he and his family moved to Kerrville where they owned and operated a gallery and foundry in addition to Herman's studio. In the fall of 1978, he sold his business and returned to the ranch country of West Texas to be near the subject matter he portrays in his work. Making their home in Eldorado, Walker continues to gain the attention of collectors throughout the country. Whether it is a modern-day cowboy, legendary Indian, or some other aspect of the American West, Walker has the ability not only to portray a given event, but also to create the feeling the event holds.

BILL LEFTWICH

Bill Leftwich is a western artist with Chickasaw bloodlines that knows his work. He prefers painting and sculpting Indians, cowboys, Mexicans and military subjects. Bill served in the horse Cavalry at Texas A&M and in Armored Cavalry Recon. in the ETP under General Patton where he was awarded the Silver Star. He has made many tracks from Mexico to Montana - speaks Spanish, some Apache, some Navajo and is at home in Rural Mexico as well as on Apache and Navajo reservations.

Leftwich cowboyyed in Texas and Old Mexico and has worked at many jobs ranging from Big Bend Park Ranger to Utah smelters. His experiences in the military, in Mexico, and working livestock coupled with his knowledge of western history lend authenticity to his work.

He studied at the Dallas Institute of Fine Art under Olin Travis, and at the San Antonio Academy of Art under Hugo D. Pohl before Pearl Harbor; and studied sculpting in England at the end of WWII. He has written and illustrated seven books on the West and many magazine articles since the first one was published in 1951.

He has painted many magazine covers and eight murals. He works pencil, ink, pastel, water color, leather, oil and wax (bronze). He has won many awards and has had one-man-shows in Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma.

He is a member of The Company of Military Historians, Western Writers of America, Texas State Historical Association, Western History Association, Ranching Heritage Association, a director of the Southwest Heritage Magazine, and a member of the Texas Cowboy Artists Assn.

Some of his collectors are Dr. Jack Williams, President of Texas A&M University; General Westmoreland; Dr. Gerald Thomas, President of New Mexico State University; General Wilson, Commandant of the Marine Corps; and Clayton Oil Co., Midland.

He is currently building an adobe home, studio, gallery at Ft. Davis and is author of The Corps At Aggeland (A 100 year history).

 and Voters of School District

The Board of Trustees of the Winters Independent School District would like to express their gratitude to the citizens of the Winters School District for their support in the passage of the school bond proposal.

The efforts on the part of the Citizen's Advisory Committee and other concerned citizens helped to inform the public and make possible the passage of the issue. We would like to especially thank those individuals who made phone calls, commented on the radio and in the newspaper, and those who visited in person or on the phone with their neighbors and friends on behalf of the proposal.

We want to assure you that every effort will be made by the School Board and the Administration to see that the funds you have appropriated by the passage of the bond issue will be dispersed wisely and conservatively; yet every attempt will be made to update our school plant into a first-class learning facility for the children of our school district.

Future water needs receive priority in Special Session

When the Special Session of the Texas Legislature opened this week, one item receiving top priority is legislation that looks to the future water needs of the State.

Speaker Billy Clayton says his water trust plan will provide the citizens of Texas with the opportunity to finance much needed water projects at reasonable rates of interest—even by today's standards.

The legislation, if passed by the legislature and approved by the voters at an election to amend the State Constitution, will establish a fund or funds to finance water projects in aiding water development, water conservation, water quality enhancement, flood control, or any combination of these.

Clayton said the legislation being prepared for the Special Session is the version which was pending before the Senate when the regular session ended in June. Earlier in the regular session the House had approved the concept, but there were a number of changes made when the legislation reached the Senate.

One-half of state revenues which exceed appropriations would be deposited in the fund or funds.

The management and expenditure of the money accumulated will be provided for in enabling legislation which will be offered during the special session. Under the proposed enabling legislation, one dollar of water funds could be used to guarantee up to ten dollars of bonds issued on the local level for water projects.

The other one-half of the surplus tax revenues would be used by the legislature as it sees fit. In fact, if the legislature wishes to use the earmarked for the water funds for purposes other than water projects, it may do so by a simple majority vote of both houses.

The Clayton plan also provides for a bond guaranty program in which a maximum of $500 million of the general credit of the State will be used to guarantee the payment of principal and interest on bond issues of qualified political subdivisions, the funds of which will be used for water projects.

Under the proposed enabling legislation, one dollar of State funds in the Treasury will guarantee two dollars of bonds issued on the local level for water projects. The guarantee will cause political subdivisions to be able to acquire a rating on its bond issue which means a possible savings of one and one-half to two percent on the interest rate of the bond issue.

The bill would also give the legislature the authority to use funds from any source to retire state debt. State debt is all debt issued and guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the State of Texas.

The Clayton plan goes on to provide that the legislature may authorize the transfer of revenue from the general revenue fund to any of the funds created under this constitutional amendment.

This bill would allow the issuance of authorized but unissued bonds guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the State of Texas at a rate of interest not to exceed 12 percent. Currently there is a six percent limit on the amount of interest that may be paid on Texas Water Development Bonds which make these bonds unmarketable. The proceeds from the sale of Texas Water Development Bonds will be used for qualified water projects under Chapters 16 and 17 of the Texas Water Code which provides for the current storage acquisition and loan programs of the Texas Water Development Board.

Clayton said, "This legislation, if approved, would offer opportunities to communities of the State of Texas unlike any programs heretofore provided in this state. The savings provided the citizens of the state through these various programs would be significant. The savings would be evident through a lower tax rate paid on debt issued to finance water projects and it would allow construction to begin on many water projects, thus avoiding the tremendous escalation of construction costs through project delays because of lack of funding that have been experienced over the last decade.

A Cowboy's Wardrobe

An editorial in The Abilene Reporter-News makes the statement that Texas is a big item on the East Coast now. Everyone from cab drivers to high fashion models can be seen wearing cowboy boots and the Lone Star Cafe is definitely the chic place at which to be seen in New York City.

It is time we were doing our homework so that we can give visitors the lowdown on our attractions and tell them about our cowboys.

Shortly after the Civil War an estimated 3 1/2 million cattle and a half million mustang horses roamed within the state of Texas. So, the Texan grabbed a rope and a branding iron. He became a cowboy whether he wanted to or not.

By 1869 the railroad had spanned the continent — Texas had a ready and eager market for their cattle in the north and east. All they had to do was drive them to Kansas to the rail center. Thus began the era of the trail driving cowboy.

The cowboy's dress perhaps more than anything else typified the coming together of many customs and the unification of one distinct breed of men.

The Texan copied the Mexican vaqueros' saddle, bridle, bit and spurs. From the Mexicans he learned to brand and practiced with a long rope they called the lariat.

Those early cowboys wore Stetson hats from Philadelphia, Levis from San Francisco, slickers from Massachusetts, and in their holsters carried Colt .45's from Connecticut.

The Stetson hat was so important to him that a cowboy sometimes spent from two to six months waiting to buy a good one. It gave him both prestige and protection. While others "dressed up," a cowboy "dressed down." He always put his hat on the first thing. The Stetson was the last thing he took off at night before crawling into his bedroll and the first thing he put on when he heard the cook call him for breakfast.

The cowboy depended on his Stetson. It shaded his eyes from the blinding sun. It kept the rain from running down his neck and protected him from being beaten with hailstones. The crown made a fine water bucket; the cowboy drank from it and his horse drank from it. And many times he filled it with water to put out a sudden fire around his camp. A seasoned cowboy could look at a man's hat and tell from what part of the country he came. A rider from the desert or plains wore a hat with a wide brim. It gave him shelter from the sun. Farther west the cowboy wore a higher crown and brim because of the strong winds he faced all day.

The early day cowboy had small feet and he was fiercely proud of them. His boots were very tight and so thin that it looked as though his feet had been melted and poured into them and allowed to harden. He had nothing but contempt for the thick, heavy soled shoes of the easterners. And said that he wanted to put his feet into decent boots and not into entire cowhides.

The cattle herder strapped spurs on the heels of his boots. He used them to goad his horse to greater speed and to listen to them jingle during those long days of loneliness. The cowboy never liked to be caught wearing cheap ones; it was a sign he was down on his luck.

The cowboy generally wore Levis, brown or blue, and a grey shirt. His leather chaps, or leggings, protected him from the sting of brush in summer and from chill winds and rain in the winter — or the burn of a rope. In his vest he carried his matches, tobacco and cigarette papers.

A red, cotton bandana was tied around the cowboy's neck, but it seldom stayed there. He called it "his wife" and used it for most everything. When he washed his face the bandana became his towel. If he was traveling brush country that had no fresh running water, the cowboy would simply strain what stagnant water he could find through his bandana and drink it. He wore it as a mask to keep out the dust when riding drag on the trail. He used it as a deacon string to tie the legs of a calf together during branding and found that a bandana made a sling for a broken arm or bandage for a wound.

A cowboy always took more time to keep his bandana clean than any other part of his clothing. He stopped at every water hole to wash the bandana and spread it over the top of his hat, letting it dry as he rode along. And many a cowboy is buried out on a lonely stretch of prairie wrapped in only a coarse wool saddle blanket with a clean wrinkled bandana spread across his face.

The cow header was rarely without gloves; they were protection against rope burns, blisters and shielded his hands from the reins of a bucking bronc.

Behind his saddle, the cowboy carried his twisted old slicker and very often used it to keep his saddle and horse dry rather than himself. This is not so surprising as his saddle was his workbench, his throne, and his most prized possession. He tied all aspects of life to the symbol of the saddle. It became part of his tradition, part of his flair for speaking. When a man was broke and disgraced with no place to go, he said, "he sold his saddle."

The cowboy was never without his lariat rope. He used it to rope horses, cattle, stake his horse, tow a chuckwagon across streams and drag cattle from quicksand bogs. It was also handy to drag firewood into camp, tie up his bedroll and pack, or to chase wildcats and mountain lions.

The old time cowboy would have been lost without his knife. He used the same blade to castrate calves, chop his beefsteak, and pick his teeth. No wonder he was a tough breed.

Cowboy equipment exhibited during "Western Roundup" day at Z. I. Hale Museum

Several collections of cowboy equipment were displayed at the "Western Roundup" show at the Z. I. Hale Museum open house Sunday.

LaDell Davis showed a saddle, made in the early 1920s, his boots, chaps and branding iron that he had used for 15 years. His brand is the Lazy L. He also distributed some bumper stickers and programs about the second annual IRA Rodeo to be held in Winters July 24-25.

Mrs. Gene Virden brought a saddle made in Denver, Colo., in 1929, that belonged to her late husband, and also a bridle, blanket, lariat, saddle bags, chaps, curry comb and brush. She presented these items to the museum as a permanent gift. His brand was the Bar V.

There were a number of branding irons from the Hale family. Perhaps the oldest was that of Nina Hale's grandfather Griffith, the letter G, that was used since he came to the area in 1875.

The cowboy's first rule was courage. It had to be. It took courage to try to saddle a kicking, bucking, maddened horse, a killer with flaming eyes. It took courage to race madly into the night at the head of his cattle. The darkness hid the dangers of steep cliffs and prairie dog holes.

The cowboy was a horseman, on foot he was lost. If he couldn't ride some place he just didn't go. He lived in the saddle most of his life. It became the only real home he knew. Thus he and his horse became inseparable.

The oldtime cowboy has been gone a long time, but we owe a lot to them. They helped Texas become one of the wealthiest states in the union.

Another saddle was displayed that belonged to the late Wesley Wood, property of Bubba Brown of San Angelo, brought to the show by Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Brown. A cowboy hat worn by Eva Poe Cook in the parade at Stamford in 1936 when Will Rogers was a guest was also on exhibit. Members of the Museum Foundation hosted the open house.

Police activity slow last week in Runnels County

Police activity in Winters over the past week was very slow according to police chief L.C. Foster.

Officers made four arrests and assisted in the investigation of one traffic accident. Of the arrests made, one was for shoplifting at O'Neal's General Store, one for driving while intoxicated, one for disorderly conduct, and one arrest on a capias profane warrant.

Winters police officers assisted sheriff's deputies and highway patrol troopers in the investigation of a one vehicle accident early Saturday south of the lake road.

Officers said that a vehicle driven by Margaret Huffman of Winters ran off the roadway, knocked down a utility pole and a fence and ran into a grain field.

Electric power was interrupted to several residences in the area. The woman driving the car was not injured and was located after the crash walking down the road about two miles from the accident scene.

WTRC challenge—

WTRC Vice-President Richard Salmon echoed Pfluger's gratitude and stated that site clearing in preparation for the new out patient rehabilitation center for the handicapped of the southwest will begin immediately with the project completion scheduled for June, 1982.

The new facility will be located on 3.5 acres of land at the intersection of Jackson Street and University Avenue which the San Angelo Independent School District donated to the WTRC. It will contain approximately 29,000 square feet of treatment space. Currently, WTRC is housed in a 5,000 square foot building at 128 South Magdalen which cannot be expanded.

"In four years, WTRC San Angelo's annual patient admissions have increased from 326 to approximately 1,100 and we anticipate continua-

Junior Culture Club sponsors reading event

The Junior Culture Club encourages all children between the ages of 3 to 8 to attend a Summer Reading Program each Saturday at the Winters Public Library.

The reading hour lasts from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m., and includes reading, work sheets and refreshments.

All children have been invited to attend.

"This trend," WTRC

President Jim Polk of Abilene said.

"For that reason," Polk continued, "we have designed a new facility to meet the rehabilitation service needs of the handicapped, both now and for many years to come. We take credit for the design, but I am most sincere when I say that all the credit for making our design a reality belongs to the very kind and caring people of West Texas who have been so generous in their support of this building campaign."

Highlights of the building campaign include contributions from: The Mabee Foundation of Tulsa, Oklahoma, $500,000; an anonymous ranching couple, $225,000; The Stringer Family Trust, $125,000; an anonymous oil person, $100,000; The Davidson Family Trust, $100,000

"Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers."
 Alfred Tennyson

Jerry Lackey's Country Folk

The other morning on a stock farm near Wingate, I stood in the shade of an old mesquite tree while Bucky Duvall of Coleman shod a horse. We visited while he worked.

Bucky kept looking back over his shoulder as if the horse he was working on might bite or kick. Finally, I walked around to find one of the Bishop Boys' 9-year-old tenants trying to do the same thing to his little Shetland pony that Bucky was doing.

The little Latin boy had the pony's hind leg tied up to the fence. He had the horseshoe pinchers in both hands about to do away with half the hoof.

"Wait a minute, son," yelled Bucky. "You are not only going to get kicked when that tool hits the quick... you are going to cripple your horse."

Duvall, who came back to Texas after a few years in California, gave the young man some lessons. "I hated to see him get hurt and possibly hurt the pony. Yet, after I showed him a few things, it occurred that I might have some competition in this area real soon," laughed Bucky.

Actually, professional horse-shoeing services are hard to come by in most of the ranch country. I was visiting on the campus of Sul Ross University in Alpine a few years back. A degree is offered there in the trade.

Last week I spent the on the ranches of Bill Eiland at Snyder photographing his horses and cattle. He told me they had a hard time getting on the shoeing schedule sometime. "Our ranch hands fall in and shoe Turtle Jack and the remuda, but they don't like it," said Eiland.

Well, still talking horses, Sonny Dillard of Abilene reports the first Rehab Horse Sale at Stamford during the July Fourth Texas Cowboy Reunion activities was a success. The Rehab Center will have its fall horse sale Oct. 3.

"Before that one," comments Jim Alexander, Abilene cattle feeder, "we will kick off the annual Cattlemen's Round-Up for Crippled Children with a cattle sale Sept. 28."

Alexander was rather excited in talking about this year's CRCC program. "You know, construction will start soon on the new Rehab Center in San Angelo," he said. "So, this year, for every livestock donation of $250 or more we are going to place the ranch cattle brand on the wall of the new building."

Let's get all the horses shod and be ready for the roundup come August!

Improvements of Social Security disability program explained

(This is the last of a series of four articles explaining the Social Security Administration Disability program.)

Recent improvements in the law will help many disabled Social Security and Supplemental Security Income (SSI) beneficiaries who wish to go back to work, according to Franklin Upp, Social Security district manager in San Angelo. Under the old law, virtually all of a disabled person's earnings counted in deciding whether he or she was able to perform substantial gainful work. Very few deductions were allowed, Upp said.

Starting in December 1980, certain impairment-related work expenses a disabled person pays can be deducted from earnings before deciding if the earnings show that the person is able to perform substantial gainful work. These expenses include attendant care cost and the cost of medical devices, equipment, and drugs and services necessary to control an impairment. It no longer matters whether such items are also needed off the job for daily living. The Social Security Administration will determine what items can be deducted in individual cases, Upp pointed out.

Under the old law, Upp said, disabled workers received benefits during a trial work period of up to nine months to test their ability to work provided they continued to be disabled. If at the end of this period that person was able to do substantial gainful work — generally indicated by earnings of $300 or more in 1980 — payments topped after an additional three-month adjustment period. If the work attempt later failed, a new application was required before disability benefits could start again.

Under the new law, he said, if a person's impairment makes it necessary to stop work again within a year after Social Security or SSI disability payments stop following a trial work period, benefits can be restarted automatically. A new application is not needed. Also disabled widows and widowers are eligible for a trial work period. These provisions are effective December, 1980, Upp said. Persons applying for Social Security disability benefits under the old law were responsible for charges made by their doctors, clinics, or hospitals for preparing medical reports. Effective December, 1980, the Social Security Administration will pay a reasonable charge for any medical reports it needs and requests from non-federal institutions and physicians. A similar authorization already exists for the SSI program.

More information about changes in the disability law can be obtained at the San Angelo Social Security office. A free leaflet is available which gives more details about the changes. The office is located at 2214 Sherwood Way, and the telephone number is 949-4608.
