Wait a minute...

By Kerry Craig

We all know that when a highway is rebuilt, they try to make the roadway wider. They are doing that on F.M. 53 from the Runnels County line to a point eight miles west of Coleman.

This is progress. Most of which we needed. With progress, however, some things must go.

Well, a lot of giant, old Oak Trees fell victim to this progress along with a few other things.

Most significant, among those things that are not there anymore, is that neat little roadside park a couple of miles east of the county line.

Just think of all the history that was destroyed when that rest area was bulldozed into a big truck and hauled away.

Think of all the memories. They may build a new park there before the job is done. Of course they would probably install big old bright lights, though.

I got a phone call from Austin Tuesday, Dr. Bernstein, the Commissioner of the Texas Department of Health. And he didn't call to just pass the time of day.

His comments regarding to the inconsistent inspection methods of teams from his department indicated that he did not know how some of those folks act when they perform an inspection.

Before I go any further, let me say that not all of the inspection teams that visit rural hospitals are the same.

There are some teams that are courteous. They consider their mission one of trying to help these hospitals provide better service. They are interested in the hospitals.

I still contend, however, there one group of inspectors that don't have much interest in small, rural hospitals being around much longer. They have shown that attitude in a growing number of smaller hospitals.

The problems in one hospital, in Comanche, has gained attention in distant places—like communist China. The red Chinese are donating a number of air guns (not unlike B-B guns) to the Comanche hospital effort.

Sources in Comanche said Tuesday that help was also coming from Germany, Canada, and maybe even Russia.

Now I don't know whether that is good or bad, but the manner of inspecting the small hospitals and the obvious attempts to put them out of business is getting attention.

Back to Dr. Bernstein. He did not like the questions I asked and said he didn't like my attitude.

He even questioned my motive for asking such questions as why does there seem to be an effort underway to close small, rural hospital.

Before I could respond to that question, he put me on hold, then told me he had an "important call from Washington" on another line and hung up.

Well, let me re-state my motive for asking the question.

Whether it is the hospital in Winters or the one in Big Lake or McCamey, or even in Arkansas, when one of these small hospitals is decertified to receive Medicare payments, it has but one alternative, to close.

In nearly all of the affected communities, the next closest medical facility, hospital, is more than a half-hour away.

In extremely critical illness or injury, time is of utmost importance.

Whether it is the Medicare folks in the federal government, or the Health Department folks in state government that say they are trying to save money, they are missing the boat.

I just don't believe any of those folks are qualified to place a dollar-value on a human life.

Temple Dickson to run for Texas Senate

Sweetwater rancher-lawyer Temple Dickson, 53, announced that he would seek the Democratic nomination for the state senate in the 24th district.

The seat is presently held by Grant Jones, 65, who is an insurance agent and lawyer with an official residence in Temple.

Dickson said, "Jones has lost touch with most people in the district."

"He doesn't represent us anymore. He represents Austin lobbyists—on a full-time basis."

As a former member of the House of Representatives, Dickson said that he had left politics in 1971 to devote full-time to his family, law practice and ranch.

"My children are grown and my wife, Katherine, has encouraged me to re-enter public life."

"The state Senate is where I can have an impact."

Dickson said that as a House member he had supported state funding for education to improve the quality and hold down property taxes.

"In the 1960s we did a good job. The legislature laid out a basic education policy and provided substantial funds to improve schools.

"We did not dictate to local school boards," Dickson said.

"The legislature radically changed that in 1984.

"Much decision-making was taken out of the hands of local school boards. The legislature placed school boards in the position of raising taxes to pay for state-mandated programs."

Dickson also said that he would oppose a state income tax.

"Senator Jones announced that a personal state income tax might not be too far off," Dickson said.

"It might not be if Jones is re-elected.

"But, if I'm in the Senate, I'll help kill it," Dickson emphasized. "Texas does not need a state income tax—now—or 10 years from now."

Dickson said that he would propose an economic development plan which encouraged business growth and job creation.

He said, "There are plenty of people in Texas who want to start or expand businesses. That creates jobs.

"What's needed are markets for what we produce."

Dickson said that the legislature "has not dealt with real economic issues. It should. We should want to help put Texans back to work and create new business opportunities."

Poe's corner

by Charlsie Poe

A Battered King

Cotton harvest is in full swing, but we hardly realize it since there are no cotton gins in Winters and no loads of pickers from the valley and south of the border flooding our town.

With almost every farmer using a harvester and carrying large trailer loads of cotton to Wingate, Norton and Ballinger to be ginned the season will soon be over—that is, if the weather cooperates. Some farmers lost their crops last year because of the constant rain—the first time that situation has ever existed, as far as I know.

Dennis Poe uses a broadcast harvester with burr extractor which removes 30 percent of the burrs and saves from $10 to $15 dollars a bale on ginning. On a good day run he gathers 20 to 25 bales. He is harvesting about four bales an hour at the present and in real good cotton he gets six bales an hour. An automatic dumper drops the cotton in a trailer or module which will hold 12 bales, cutting down trips to the gin.

The price of cotton varies but it is running about 60 cents a pound or $300 a bale. Some cotton was contracted earlier for 65 cents a pound and later 70 cents.

One thing that has helped the price is a world-wide crop shortage and a greater demand for denim, "the comfortable cotton." The United States by competing with world-wide prices, cotton has been shipped to Taiwan, Japan and probably to China this year.

The present farm bill has gotten cotton to moving with more legislation through the National Cotton Council and Cotton Incorporated, that provides research and promotion—$3.00 is taken out of each bale of cotton for this purpose it is usually invested and the interest is used for research, thus the farmer becomes his own salesman and promoter.

Poe bought his harvester in 1982 at a cost of $45,000, and finished paying for it last year when he was able to save his crop by speedy harvesting. His principal expense this year was diesel fuel which cost $30 a day. Frost defoliated the late crop this year avoiding the cost of chemical or acid defoliation. This all sounds good but it costs 60 cents a pound to raise cotton which includes planting, seed, cultivating, harvesting and machinery depreciation. If the price drops, the government steps in and provides a deficiency payment for enough to ensure the farmer of $50 a bale profit.

land cotton farming has proved to be a better crop for this area and the rolling plains. When cotton was picked the Western Proflific variety was a favorite, but since the days of the "stripper"

Western Storm Proof has proven easier to gather.

Although cotton has been kicked and cuffed around for years it still raises its fluffy, white head in kingly dignity.

Gram urges students: "Say No To Drugs"

In a strong anti-drug message to students across Texas, U.S. Senator Phil Gramm said Judge Douglas Ginsburg's loss of his nomination to the Supreme Court underlines the need for youngsters to avoid drugs.

"This is a bad time for Judge Ginsburg and his family, but I believe his tragedy carries with it an important lesson for the young people of America," the senator wrote in an article distributed to high school and junior high school newspapers.

"Judge Ginsburg withdrew from consideration for a seat on the Supreme Court after admitting he had used marijuana. His experience proves once again that drug use carries a high cost, payable both now and in the future."

Gramm noted that Ginsburg "was a role model, whether he wanted to be or not."

The senator told students that they, too, are role models. "If you use drugs, you make society lose a bit of its hope for a better tomorrow. If you say its OK to experiment with drugs, you are telling other students that they can, too."

"You may beat the odds and not become addicted to drugs once you start using them, but your actions may condemn others who follow your example to a life of drug abuse and defeat," he said.

Gramm said America can benefit from Ginsburg's tragedy if young people, who face the lure of drugs every day, learn the lesson that drug use entails a long-term risk of damage to the health, family and future of every student.

Be careful with mandatory retirements

Dear Commissioner Nabers: I have a small company and it is going to be necessary for me to make some unavoidable cut-backs. My question is: Can I implement mandatory retirement for employees who are 60 or older?

COMMISSIONER Mary Scott Nabers

F.S. Baytown, Texas
Dear F.S.: I would not do that if I were you! That is my best advice. Without more information about your company, I cannot know whether you are covered by the Federal Age Discrimination In Employment Act or the state equivalent, Texas Commission on Human Rights Act. You need to contact your nearest Equal Employment Opportunity Commission office (EEOC) for specific information.

Dear Commissioner Nabers: The company I work for pays me an hourly rate plus the use of a company vehicle. I am getting the feeling that my employer may take the vehicle back and make me drive my own vehicle back and forth to work. If this happens I may quit and try to draw unemployment. Would quitting under these circumstances prevent me from drawing unemployment?

Dear G. A.: It certainly might, but it is impossible for me to tell Everything seemed to go our way. The girls trained long and hard. Our work paid off. We played good, hard basketball," said Coach Derington.

The boys also defeated the Winters 7th grade team by a score of 41-12. The boys played good basketball. Vennie Reyes and Tim Sanchez scored in double figures with 12 points each. "We have been working hard all year on our fundamentals. The boys did a good job," quoted Mrs. Derington.

Q. What are the basics for adapting a recipe from conventional directions to microwave directions?
A. Pay attention to the cooking utensil, power level and cooking time. It will help to compare the recipe to a similar recipe from a reliable microwave cooking source. A general rule is that a high power, a microwave recipe will take about 1/4 to 1/3 less time than if cooked conventionally.

Senator
Lloyd Bentsen
Watching
Washington

Senator Lloyd Bentsen, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, released a new projection Saturday indicating that total investment in Japan next year will exceed U.S. investment for the first time in history.

Bentsen warned that as a result the U.S. could find it harder to compete against Japan in world markets.

"The Library of Congress along with Data Resources, Inc., one of the principal economic forecasting firms in the United States, has developed this study. It shows that Japan will be investing—for the first time in history—more than the United States does. We are talking about investing about $800 billion, as compared to $700 billion in this country," Bentsen said.

"That investment is not just in consumer products, but going back and investing in the productivity of the country—building plants, doing things about their transportation. Those are things that increase productivity in a country," Bentsen said.

Grade change helps in selecting meat

Beginning November 23, USDA "Good" graded beef becomes USDA "Select," and for consumers, it's more than just a name change. USDA beef grades indicate juiciness and tenderness, which is produced by flecks of fat or "marbling" within the red meat. On that measure, USDA "Prime," usually sold in restaurants, is the highest grade, "Choice" is the next highest grade and "Good" was the term applied to the leaner cuts. According to Marilyn Haggard, a food marketing expert and nutrition specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, retail grocers typically do not label USDA Good meat as such, because of the lack of consumer appeal for the name. "To market their lower graded beef, grocers use

The Senator said this will happen even though Japan's economy is smaller than the U.S. economy.

"It's interesting to note that they have an economy that is only about 60 percent of ours, and yet they're investing more in their future than we are," Bentsen said.

"That means it's going to be exceedingly tough for us to compete. It is tough already, and this is going to add to the problem," Bentsen said.

Bentsen cited two steps the U.S. should take to turn this situation around.

"We're going to have to have tax laws in this country that encourage investment in the future, in productivity and in the increase of productivity in this country," Bentsen said.

"It also means we need trade laws that open up those markets in Japan and try to restore a level playing field on trade," Bentsen said.

"This isn't the kind of policy we've had in this country, but those are the kinds of things we should be working toward," Senator Bentsen said.

"house-grade names," which are similar to store brands in other types of food products," she explains. "These house brands, however, often include more than USDA Good grade beef, they may also contain even lower grades such as USDA Standard and USDA Commercial." Haggard says the result has been extensive variation of eating quality in the leaner, less expensive cuts of beef offered to consumers. As retail stores begin to market USDA Select, rather than house-grades, consumers will get a more consistent product.

Bullock reports on tax change

State Comptroller Bob Bullock reminded information and credit reporting businesses that they should be collecting the new sales tax on services now.

"Anyone who's not sure if they should be charging the new sales tax ought to give us a call," Bullock said, adding "we've got guidelines about who should be collecting it."

Examples of taxable information services include newsletters and mailing lists; scouting reports and surveys; financial market reports; data retrieval and research (such as stock quotations and court cases); newsclipping services and wire reports; and multiple listing services.

Some services that are not taxable are polygraph testing, account balance information, seminars and information sold to newspapers, radio or television stations.

Any business relaying a credit report by telephone, in writing or by computer should be charging sales tax for that service, Bullock said.

Credit reporting businesses should also know that sales tax applies to some out-of-state customers. If an out-of-state customer who does business in Texas requests a credit report on someone applying for credit in Texas, then tax is due on the service.

These services and others became taxable October 1, when a new law passed by the Legislature went into effect.

Businesses should charge the six percent state tax rate plus any local tax rate.

Tornado victims not to worry about taxes

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said businesses whose records were destroyed in last week's tornadoes will get special tax consideration.

"I know these people have a lot on their minds trying to pick up the pieces and get things back into order," Bullock said, "they shouldn't have to worry about state tax deadlines right now."

Bullock announced that he was authorizing a moratorium on tax filings that will apply to any businesses whose records were destroyed in the storms, particularly those in the 24 Texas counties that were ravaged Sunday and Monday.

Bullock said his office has identified as many as 86 damaged businesses in Palestine alone, and he knows of more in Center and Jacksonville.

Bullock said he will waive any penalty or interest due on a return that cannot be filed on time because business records were destroyed or damaged by the violent weather.

"Help will be available throughout the affected areas," Bullock said. "We will be there to help reconstruct any business records that are in disarray."

Bullock added that these businesses could disregard computer-generated tax delinquency notices until a recovery is made.

The deadline extension applies to corporations required to file franchise tax reports as well as businesses responsible for filing state sales tax returns.

Stenholm reports

Congressman Charles W. Stenholm told a subcommittee panel on Tuesday it's time to bring the Balanced Budget Amendment to the floor of the House of Representatives.

The first of many congressional supporters appearing before a Judiciary subcommittee, Congressman Stenholm opened the hearing with a plea for "full and fair consideration" of H. J. Res. 321, the Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution. The measure, which was introduced by Congressman Stenholm and Congressmen Larry Craig (R-Idaho), Tom Carper (D-Delaware) and Bob Smith (R-Oregon), has 237 co-sponsors. This is the first set of hearings on this issue in five years, even though the measure has the backing of a majority of the House.

"I hope that these hearings indicate that this committee will be reporting a version of this important legislation to the full House," said the Texas democrat. "Federal budget deficits fuel our overall indebtedness to foreign lenders, worsen our balance of trade and diminish our international competitiveness. They kindle inflation and push up interest."

"Our nation's founders never imagined that we would run the kinds of deficits we are running today. If they had, a Balanced Budget Amendment would have been included in the Constitution or the Bill of Rights," Congressman Stenholm said.

In his closing remarks, the fiscal conservation representative asked for fair treatment of his bill. "Give us a chance," he said. "Let the regular democratic committee process work to reflect the will of the majority and give all Members the chance to debate this significant issue. I am not asking for precipitous or hasty action without full deliberation. I am asking, Mr. Chairman, this Balanced Budget Amendment, be sent to the floor and be allowed to receive full and fair consideration."

1988 Cotton supply likely to increase with smaller acreage cut

With a much smaller acreage reduction in store for 1988 cotton, the supply likely will increase according to an Extension cotton marketing economist at Texas A&M University.

The 1988 upland cotton program will include a 12.5 percent acreage reduction, a target price of 77 cents per pound, and a loan level of 51.8 cents per pound for base quality, average location, says Dr. Carl G. Anderson, economist-cotton marketing for the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

"While the target price and loan rates are slightly lower, the acreage reduction program (ARP) is half the 25 percent for the 1987 crop," Anderson says.

If the adjusted world price drops below the loan level, the Plan B marketing loan program will be used, he adds. The world price has been well above the loan level, however, in 1987.

"Should the world price plunge below the loan rate, loan deficiency payments will be made to eligible producers who agree to forego loan eligibility," Anderson says.

Up to 50% of any loan deficiency payment may be made in generic commodity certificates on a bale-by-bale basis. There will be no paid land diversion program nor inventory reduction program, he notes.

"The lower acreage reduction program suggests more acreage and more cotton in 1988, provided yields are average or above. Strong consumption for the 1988 crop is becoming more questionable. A potential economic recession in the second half of 1988 may curtail demand," Anderson says.

The likely result, he adds, is more cotton supplies, less usage, larger ending stocks and weaker market.

Key factors in 1988 price movement are possible changes in estimated ending stocks. A clear signal in the first half of 1988 that U.S. cotton growers are likely to produce enough cotton to exceed market needs may be bearish, Anderson says.

Favorable October weather increased in the U.S. crop forecast to 13.9 million bales and expected 1987 ending stocks to above the 4-million-bale mark. A 1988 crop larger than usage would increase stocks by the end of that season, Anderson says.

"The likely result is lower prices. Growers should have a 1988 marketing plan prepared that takes into account forward pricing alternatives," he recommends.

When cotton stocks are dropping rapidly, as in 1987, the market tends to overreact during price rallies. Estimates of variable, fixed and total production costs per pound from past records are useful in setting pricing guidelines, Anderson says.

Plot future prices, learn what causes price changes, update often, watch technical price indicators, spread out sales, avoid setting "round number" price goals, be careful in pricing near report dates, and avoid fear and wishful thinking," Anderson suggests.

The season's price peak is difficult to recognize," he adds.

From A Goldfish Bowl

By Pastor Steve Byrne

A deer blind would be a terrible place, I imagine, to meet girls. To throw a party. To have a large worship service. But a deer blind is a special place.

It is a cubicle just large enough to hold a chair and a hunter. It may be suspended in the air on a pole or on several poles. Or it may just sit on the ground. Usually it is of a height where you can't stand up. In fact, if you are like me, every time you move your rifle in the blind, some part of it manages to hit the ceiling, producing a racket that seems to reverberate for miles.

The chair in the best blinds are swivel chairs. So you can easily watch from all directions through the four slits in the cubicle at about eye level.

What is it that you are watching for, supposedly, is a deer. This is what the publicized purpose of the deer blind is. And upon spotting the deer, hopefully, you can do all the things that endure that you will have venison for supper. If not that day, then perhaps some day later on.

Supposedly. That's what they tell us.

But my experience is that you spend a small proportion of your time in the blind watching deer. During my highly publicized deer hunting trip recently (Thanks a lot, Kerry!) I spent an average of five hours a day in that blind for four and one-half days. During that time, I saw a total of about seven deer.

The secret is that deer blinds are not primarily for seeing deer. They are for thinking. Being alone with your thoughts. No telephone. No typewriter. No demands on your time.

"Adopt an Angel"

"What can I give them?" Is the question asked many times during the holiday season. For the 900 residents of Abilene State School, Project Love has the answer. JC Penny's and KTAB-TV are sponsoring "Adopt an Angel" through Project Love for their third consecutive year.

On Saturday, November 21, at 10 a.m. the "Angel Tree" will be unveiled at the JC Penny's store in the Mall of Abilene. The community is invited to share its generosity with State School residents by choosing an angel from the tree during the Project Love campaign, November 21 through December 24, and purchasing a gift for a resident.

Chantel Christensen, Miss Teen Abilene, is this year's spokesperson for Project Love.

The 1986 Project Love "Adopt an Angel" program provided over $16,000 worth of gifts for the 900 residents of Abilene State School. KTAB and JC Penny's hope 1987 will promote as much joy and Christmas spirit as in the years past.

AARP hails Senate passage of Catastrophic Care Bill

The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) hails the Senate's overwhelming passage of legislation expanding Medicare to cover many catastrophic health costs as "a real victory for older Americans."

"This means that older Texans will have less to fear about the financial burdens of hospital and doctor bills," says AARP State Director, Alice Korthauer. "These protections are years overdue."

Mrs. Korthauer says several provisions added during Senate debate merit special attention. The Medicare prescription drug benefit would help five million older Americans who incur $600 or more in prescription drug costs annually. This provision also encourages the use of low-cost generic drugs when possible, but allows physicians to decide whether brand-names or generic equivalents are best for their patients. Also, federal retirees would be treated more equitably than under the original bill.

"The spouses of Medicaid-funded nursing home residents would be protected from the tragedy of impoverishment by keeping at least $750 a month for living expenses and at least $12,000 in assets," Mrs. Korthauer adds.

The Senate bill also covers up to 365 days of hospital care, limits beneficiary liability to one hospital deductible (currently $520) each year, and caps at $1,850 the amount that beneficiaries must pay out-of-pocket each year for Medicare Part A and B deductibles and coinsurance.

The AARP State Director commends Senate Financial Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen and leading members of his committee for achieving passage of the bill, and thanks the Administration for working with the Senate leadership on key agreements that assured final passage. Both U.S. Senators Bentsen and Gramm from Texas supported the bill.

"Hopefully, the conferees will take the best of both bills, particularly a shorter phase-in time for the prescription drug benefit, a respite benefit, and low-income protections," Mrs. Korthauer says. She cautions that the catastrophic care bill passed this year by the House and Senate were never intended to include comprehensive long-term care protection.

"Both bills contain excellent first steps toward that goal, including expanded skilled nursing facility and home health benefits and protection against spousal impoverishment," Korthauer says, "but the United States still does not have a comprehensive national policy on long-term care. AARP is strongly committed to helping develop a solid workable program to address this national family crisis."

With more than 27 million members, and 1,450,000 in Texas, AARP is the nation's largest organization of Americans 50 and older. It is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization which offers a wide range of membership benefits, legislative representation at the federal and state levels, and educational and community service programs carried out through a national network of volunteers and local chapters. The Association also offers a variety of educational and advocacy programs for older workers, who make up one-fourth of AARP's membership.

WASA. Soccer activities slated

The Winters Area Soccer Board of Directors met Wednesday, November 18 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Monte Angel. Among items discussed was the forthcoming Winters Christmas Parade. WASA had previously voted to enter a float in the parade. The first work night was selected as Monday, November 30. Anyone (especially soccer parents) is greatly invited to attend this gathering. We will meet at 6 p.m. at the old Calcutt work barn on South Main, just south of the Pride Gas Station. A fund raiser was also discussed with a Bake Sale being the chosen type of activity. Saturday, December 5 was selected as the date for this function. All

Perhaps an update on the status of the Railroad Commission regulation of motor freight would be in order. As many of you have been advised (and subsequently made calls to my office) there was originally, in S.B. 595, an intention to regulate all motor freight with a gross weight over 2,000 pounds. Of course, this would include stock trailers and pick-ups and would subject us the same insurance standards, and several other standards, that would necessarily be met by true commercial haulers.

This proposal caused a significant "hue and cry" in my district and I got a number of phone calls and personal visits from concerned people in my area.

Believe it or not, it appears that, at least in this case, common sense and reason will prevail. The latest information I have had from the Railroad Commission is that agriculture products will be exempt to the first point of sale. Specifically, vehicles operated on behalf of farmers/ranchers in the conduct of their farm/ranch operations would be exempt from the definition of "commercial vehicle." Additionally, the weight ceiling appears to have been raised from 10,000 pounds to 26,000 pounds.

I can't help but be a little bit proud of our Railroad Commissioners because they did take the legislation that passed, recognized the folly of that legislation and adapt the regulations to fit the realities of farm and ranch operations. That happens all too seldom in government, be it state, federal or otherwise, and credit should be given where credit is due.

Bring back the "Good old days" ...with GTE CLASSIC SERVICE.

GTE TURNS BACK THE CLOCK WITH CLASSIC SERVICE.

Remember "the good old days?" Whatever problems you had with your phone service, you'd just call GTE and we'd take care of it. No second thoughts. No repair bill. Your regular phone bill covered everything.

Now, under recent FCC rulings, you're responsible for the cost of repairs to the wiring and jacks inside your home or business. This makes things a little more complicated.

CLASSIC SERVICE HELPS KEEP THINGS MORE LIKE THEY USED TO BE.

We can't bring back "the good old days" entirely but, with new CLASSIC SERVICE, we can make things more like the way they were.

With CLASSIC SERVICE, you pay only $1.25 per month to have GTE repair your telephone wiring and jacks during normal working hours, at no additional charge.

Just $1.25, per telephone number, on your monthly phone bill (about 4¢ a day) covers you, no matter how many jacks you have. And if you sign up before JANUARY 1, 1988, you can avoid the one-time sign-up charge.

Here's how you'll save with CLASSIC SERVICE ...

NO SERVICE CALL CHARGES

Without CLASSIC SERVICE, if you have a problem with your phone service, and a GTE service call is needed to locate the trouble, you will be charged for the visit if the problem turns out to be in your wiring, jacks, or telephone instrument.

With CLASSIC SERVICE, there is no service call charge during normal working hours.

GTE
CLASSIC SERVICE

NO REPAIR COSTS

With CLASSIC SERVICE there is no additional charge for repair or replacement of inside wiring and jacks*. If you elect not to subscribe to CLASSIC SERVICE and need inside wiring or jack repairs, you have three options:

• As a full-service telephone company, GTE will be happy to make the repairs. But under the new FCC ruling, if you have not subscribed to CLASSIC SERVICE, you will be charged.

• Or, you contract with a third party for repairs, but rates and qualifications vary widely.

• Or, you can make the repairs yourself, but you'll have to supply your own materials. With CLASSIC SERVICE, there is no service call charge. No repair charge. No worry. That's why we call it "CLASSIC."

HERE'S WHAT CLASSIC SERVICE COVERS ...

- Service call charges
- Identification of the problem.
- Repair or replacement of inside wiring and jacks.

Like anything else, your telephone wiring can deteriorate with age and exposure to air and humidity. CLASSIC SERVICE covers this damage, as well as damage caused by natural disasters such as floods or lightning.

*Coverage does not include ...

- Willful damage
- Damage due to negligence
- Telephone instrument repair

AND NOW, NO SIGN-UP CHARGE UNTIL JANUARY 1, 1988.

Whatever problems you may encounter with your phone service, we urge you to call GTE first, even if you don't have CLASSIC SERVICE, because in many cases we can correct the problem from "our end." But if the problem does turn out to be inside your premises, won't it be nice to have CLASSIC SERVICE protection?

Sign up for CLASSIC SERVICE before JANUARY 1, 1988 and avoid a sign-up charge.

Winters' newest

Official ribbon-cutting ceremonies were held Monday for Winters' newest oil-related business, Oil Belt Supply.

On hand for the official opening were (l to r) Joyce Bahlman, Bonnie Lee, Mayor Randy Springer, Michael O'Dell, Oil Belt Supply owner Dorman Graves, and Bob Jones, manager of the Winters store.

In business in Coleman for many years, Oil Belt Supply has expanded to Winters.

Hance appointed to Interstate Mining Compact Commission,

Kent Hance, Texas Railroad Commissioner, has been appointed Texas' representative to the Interstate Mining Compact Commission by Governor William P. Clements. Hance will also chair the Texas Mining Council.

Noting that coal plays a significant role in the state's energy resource base, Hance said the Council and compact Commission will perform key roles in effectively developing the resource.

"Not many people realize that Texas is the nation's sixth largest coal producing state," he said. "We expect to produce more than 50,000 tons this year and our output is increasing every year. Coal is an important part of our energy resource base."

The IMCC, created in 1971, has 17 member states and serves as an advisory body on mining operations and their efforts on air, land, and water. The Commission also studies development of mining resources and the protection of other natural resources from pollution caused by mining.

As the governor's representative to the IMCC, Hance will also chair the Texas Mining Council which advises the governor on mining and reclamation activities in the state.

"Our coal resources are so vast, they have the potential for supplying our energy needs well into the next century," Hance said. "Our challenge is to be good stewards of those resources, encouraging their development while ensuring that our air and water remain clean and our land is restored to other productive uses."

Representative Jim Parker appointed to Joint Select Committee on the Judiciary

Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, has appointed State Representative Jim Parker to the Joint Select Committee on the Judiciary.

The committee was established with the passage of House Concurrent Resolution 20 during the second called session of the 70th Legislature. It will study needed or desirable changes affecting the state's judiciary and judicial branch operations.

In light of recent questions regarding judicial conduct and the increasing impact of partisan politics on the quality of the state justice system, the panel will examine current and potential methods of selecting our state judges. The committee will prepare a complete report, including findings and recommendations to the 71st Legislature.

Parker, a Democrat from Comanche, is serving his third term as a lawmaker. He is vice chairman of the House Criminal Jurisprudence committee, as well as a member of the House Judicial Affairs and General Investigating committees.

Lewis said in announcing the appointment, "Providing our citizens with a justice system that is not influenced by political forces is essential if we expect to maintain public confidence in our state courts. This study provides us with an excellent opportunity to review our current selection process and assess its effectiveness in encouraging im-achievement, business advancement, cultural accomplishments, and civic and political participation. Achievements in these areas are the result of dedication, responsibility, and drive for excellence—qualities which deserve to be recognized and remembered.

The men listed along with fellow Outstanding Young Men throughout North America, were selected after 150,000 nominations were received from political leaders, University and College officials, clergymen, business leaders, as well as from various civic groups and community organizations. Each young man will be represented by his biographical entry in this prestigious annual awards publication.

Our Board of Advisors and Editors salute all those honored as Outstanding Young Men of America. We take great pride in bringing their accomplishments to the attention of the American public.

Winners

The flag of the University of Texas will fly from the mast at Alderman-Cave Milling & Grain for one week honoring one team from the Winters Lions Club. The flag will also be displayed at each of the banks in Winters for one week.

The team, made up of Winters Lions Club members, raising the most money, having the highest attendance at meetings, and having the most fun is recognized by having the flag of its choice displayed.

Last year the Aggie flag was flown. Maybe next it will be the Sooners or the Razorbacks.
