Winters Youths spend week in 'space'

Wait a minute...

By Kerry Craig

Some folks, it seems, have a short memory. Maybe they just don't think, or they are thinking—about other things.

At any rate, there is a big problem. It is a problem that is seen on our streets and highways.

Lawmakers have enacted laws governing traffic in and around school zones. The laws are very specific about school buses which are stopped to let school kids on or off.

Just about any day of the week, during school, you can drive down the road and find a school bus. Follow that bus for a while and watch the drivers that just don't pay any attention to the yellow and red flashing lights on the school buses.

Even if these folks know that those lights mean stop and stay stopped until the lights stop flashing, they have about as much regard for them as they do the speed limit.

When kids are getting on a school bus, they are thinking about school and activities and playing with their friends. Getting off the bus, the last thing these kids think about is having to watch out for drivers with their cars and trucks. These youngsters have been in the classroom all day and are intent on releasing pent up energy.

The same is true in the school zones and school crossings. Kids are more interested in learning, growing, and playing.

It is our responsibility to see to it that these kids grow into adults and to learn.

They are not expendable objects in some aggressive driving game.

Before you start thinking I am talking about you—wait a minute...I am talking to you.

If the shoe fits, wear it.

We must commend our city police officers for their efforts in the school zones.

The same for officers outside the city for enforcing these laws having to do with school buses. These cops have a tough job to do.

There are more kids, buses, miles of roads, and drivers with their heads some place other than between their shoulders than there are cops to file charges on these drivers.

Regardless of where these kids live, or who their parents are, they are OUR kids. We are all responsible for them.

Remember that the next time you see a school bus or a school zone.

Now, while I have have the soap box out, there is another little matter that needs some discussion.

For the past few weeks a family member has had to be in San Angelo two times a week to visit a specialist who has offices right downtown in the Concho City.

We must remember that San Angelo is a highly progressive city with a scenic beauty all its own as well as a history that helped the development of this area.

While the city moms and dads there were concerned with the lack of traffic in the old, downtown business section and an increase in the shopping centers and malls, they spent untold hours debating advertising billboards and restricting them.

They also decided to try to live without the revenue generated by parking meters.

Having lived in the news media there, I got to know a few of the honchos there. And they will probably take offense at my comparison of their downtown parking with something some department in the federal government.

I hope that City Judge Allen Gilbert, City Manager Stephen Brown, and others will give this some thought—

If the parking meters are not used, there will be a revenue deficit—or will there?

Lets pull up all the meters and sell them. Then let the meter maids seek employment elsewhere. The same for the additional court clerks and computers used to collect parking fines. (There is another thought here, not be selective as to which vehicles exceed the free-parking time limit and give them all tickets.)

If the restrictions on street parking were all relaxed, the business folks that rent parking spaces might scream a little. One thing for sure, though, they haven't checked to see how many of their rental spaces are filled with paying customers.

You're right. I got a parking ticket, $3.00 worth, and mine was the only one on three blocks—I checked. There were no parking spaces either and the cars parked on either side of me were there when I got there and were there when I left—without parking tickets or even the chalk mark on the tire.

The folks in the small communities, like ours, and those in the malls and shopping centers are interested in their customers and strive to provide them with a place to park.

Winters Youth on top at N.A.S.A.'s Space Academy

Two Winters students earned spaced flight wings at N.A.S.A.'s Space Academy in Huntsville, Alabama. Aaron Bradley and Kristin Deike attended the 3rd session of this years Space Academy program, experiencing over 75 hours of intense instruction and training for the 5-day program. This space odyssey began with familiarization of the shuttle cockpit and ground control simulators developed exclusively for the Space Academy program. The full scale spacelab module is derived from the actual payload crew training model where spacelab and astro, starlab, ESA crews train. Mission control center in Houston is reproduced to track the simulate flights. The shuttle cockpit is accurate, including its ability to pitch and yaw during launch and return to Earth. After being divided into teams, trainees narrow their choices and begin training for mission assignments. Aaron, highest scoring individual on the space pre-test, was assigned the position of Commander for flight #1 and chose the position of payload investigator for their second flight. Kristin, who had the second highest score on the pre-test, by-passed being pilot and chose payload specialist no. 1 for the first flight and communications officer, public affairs for the second flight. Other team members on the Bradley-Deike shuttle were from Georgia, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, California, Texas and other states as well as Canada.

Mission experiments intensifies their instructions, covering satellite deployment and operation of the large remote manipulator arm which will relate to flight missions later in the week. Training for mission experiments prepares them for actual, real-time experiments scheduled onboard. They handle experimental equipment to understand the objectives and mechanics of the scientific investigations, as well as how to evaluate the results. Additionally, they construct a large space structure under water in simulated weightlessness. Each flight team begins the series of Spacelab flights that occur over a two-day period. On Mission-Day-One the dramatic countdown and launch is monitored by the ground control team on a multi-screen system. A computer-generated image of the shuttle orbit tracks the path and pilot and commander operates the control system of the simulator to achieve proper orbit. The payload specialist conducts the Space Station, while the mission specialists conduct any extra-vehicle activity needed. After completion of the experiments and docking with space station, the shuttle crew returns to Earth. The shuttle crew of Bradley and Deike had one of the few successful flight missions at this Academy session.

Team members assume their second position for the second day of the missions to increase their exposure to both onboard activities and ground support roles.

Bradley and Deike lived in a space station environment when they were not involved in mission assignments. The new $4 million dollar space habitat included unique individual compartments for six persons with built-in sleep stations, computer work area, and storage compartments. It had hatches for doors, ports instead of windows, and benches instead of chairs (which would float in space).

Space Camp and Space Academy are very unique, educational, exciting and rewarding opportunities for the young people who are eager to get involved in today's advanced technologies. The team leaders are highly motivated and well trained young adults who have or are seeking degrees in engineering, science or education. Space trainees are from all over the United States and foreign countries; and most of these young people adapt well to the team effort that it takes to be successful at the Space programs at both Huntsville, Alabama and Florida.

Jamie Sims spends week in Space Habitat at Alabama

Jamie Sims, age 11, daughter of Jerry and Jan Sims, attended Space Camp for one week at Huntsville, Alabama.

While she was there she stayed in the Space Station Habitat. During her week stay she was put on the Mercury Team with 11 other trainees. Jamie was made Flight Director of her team. She was in charge of Mission Control which involved checkout, countdown, launch, orbit and return to earth of the Orbiter.

Each trainee had to build their own model rocket and then later in the week they launched their rockets and were graded on how well the rockets per-

It should be well noted that two young people from the Winters community competed and did extremely well at a nationally acclaimed educational program directly supported by N.A.S.A., the Space Camp-Academy. Let's all support our educational opportunities for our youth, they are our future.

Centennial Committee to have Kick-Off

Winters will celebrate its 100th Anniversary in 1990. Mayor Randy Springer appointed a Steering Committee to coordinate all Centennial activities and to promote Winters during the celebration.

This committee began work about a month ago—gathering information and looking at suggestions for Centennial activities—and they need ideas and input from all community leaders.

Fifth Annual Runnels County Agriculture Day

The 1989 Runnels County Agriculture Day will begin at 1 p.m. Tuesday, March 21, 1989, at the Ballinger High School. Agriculture Day has something to offer both rural and city residents, with its special programs for producers, ladies and teens. There will be over 40 exhibits, with representatives from major seed, chemical and agribusinesses to display their products and answer questions.

Mr. John Block, former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture and currently president of the National American Wholesale Grocers' Association will be the keynote speaker for the evening

A catered supper will be served at 6 p.m.

The evening program will begin with a Natural Fibers Fashion Extravaganza, featuring Tina Sanders, South Plains Maid of Cotton. Awards will be presented to the Runnels County Farm Family of the Year and to the Runnels County Agribusinessman of the Year, and Mr. John Block's address will conclude the evening.

Education And Fun in San Angelo

The educational part of the tour sponsored by the Winters Young Farmers began on Saturday morning when a chartered bus arrived to carry us around the countryside for a look at the agricultural world we live in every day.

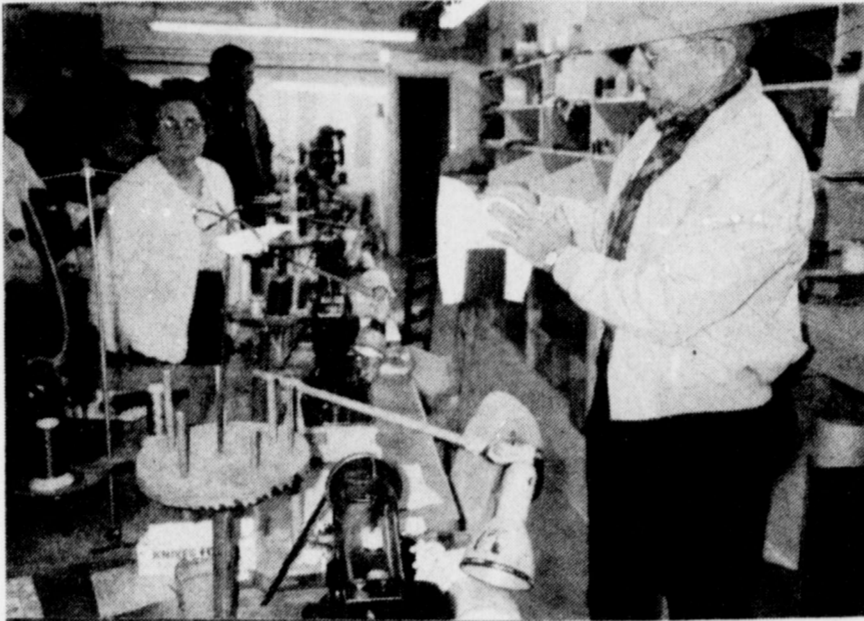

Our first stop was at the Texas A&M Research Center to visit the Wool and Mohair Research Labs. The center was built in 1972 and has seven research leaders. Its primary efforts are to assist the range livestock industry with emphasis on the range resource and sheep and goats. They receive close attention because about 20% of the U.S. sheep flock and over 95% of the Angora goat flock are maintained in the area around San Angelo.

The wool and mohair research was explained to us by the associate professor, C. J. Lupton, a PHD from England. Different types of feeding are used and the wool is tested to see if it has improved. Other research carried on is range management, protein, and amino acid nutrition, meat production and improvement of reproductive Selma Dietz watches closely to see a boot shaped at Leddy's efficiency.

Two years ago the center lost 150 lambs with a disease similar to "blue tongue", a disease known in Korea. The lambs were born badly deformed and some died. With careful research and many tests the disease was found all over the United States and was transmitted by mesquitos. It was named "Cash Valley Virus," and much has been accomplished in controlling the disease since then.

Our next stop was at the Angelo State University Management and Research Center, nine miles north of San Angelo, adjacent to the A&M Research Center. The college owns several hundred acres, with some leased land, they have about 700 in cultivation and 3,000 acres of pasture.

The staff professors discussed their work with us. Russell Stevens, in charge of the range and wild life program, told us that he spot counted the wildlife rather than using a helicopter. Trophy hunts are used to clear out the wildlife. The first was a combination hunt in November that brought in one buck, two does and two turkeys. They also have quail hunts.

Brush control is practiced and there is grain production as well as cattle, sheep and goats. Gil Indol is in charge of the sheep. He said they raised the straight registered Rambouillet and had a show string. They sell some ewes each year. Don Shelby, in charge of beef cattle, has taught since 1973.

We were served a beef barbecue lunch here and the tantalizing smells wafting their way down the hall made us glad when we stopped for lunch.

After lunch we went directly to the Scherz Horticultural Farm to see the greenhouses and landscape plants. The wholesale firm is managed by Janell Turner, daughter of Allen Turner, County Agent of Ballinger. In addition to many colorful plants they have oak trees planted from seed. It will be five years or longer before these trees can be sold.

Our tour of Leddy's Boot Making plant was directed by Neil Becknell, who has been with the company for 37 years. The store was opened in 1922 and has been at its present location since 1927.

It is a very difficult task and time consuming to make boots by hand. No wonder they cost all the way from $300 plus up to $1,100, depending on the leather. A cardboard pattern of the foot is made and kept on hand. Many time consuming steps are taken before the boot is complete. Boots can be made quicker and cheaper by machine, but the handmade ones are worth waiting for. One can also sit in a chair with arms and back made of steer horns from Mexico, while being fitted.

We got so involved in the boot shop that it was time to return to the hotel and dress for dinner at Rio Concho Manor. Some ladies moaned that they had only 10 minutes for shopping, which was on the schedule. The men thought that it was long enough.

Our dinner entertainment was by San Angelo's own Wizard of Oz—Oscar Zapata. Better known as The Oz, the name taken from his initials. When he opened his hair styling salon, "The Scissors of Oz", he became the "Wizard" and purchased a costume to promote his business. "If you are going to be a wizard you need to do magic," he said.

The Oz took training under various magicians and soon had a second career of presenting programs to adults and children alike, especially on holidays. He delighted us with the unexpected, including the appearance of rabbits, and birds here and there.

He asked us to give a round of applause to his big brother "Jesus Christ." "The magic is only brought through him. My work is nothing but a trick and anyone can start like I did, it's all entertainment".

Women's History Month celebrated

Members of the Runnels County Historical Commission will join other organizations in commemorating "National Women's History Month" during March.

Begun a decade ago through a joint Congressional resolution to encourage public recognition of the history of women, the month's focus allows historians, educators, and others the opportunity to concentrate on and celebrate a rich part of our heritage.

This year's theme, "Heritage of Strength and Vision," will be marked by exhibits featuring area women's roles in Runnels County History at the Z. I. Hale Museum, Winters.

FROM A GOLDFISH BOWL

BY PASTOR STEVE BYRNE

I have served churches in rural areas. There IS a difference.

When I was pastoring in Odessa (and before that, as an intern in Dallas) we spent a lot of time trying to build community. Maybe as much as 30-50 percent of the pastoral ministry time.

In the rural parish, the efforts are different. The community is already there. If anything, in the rural parish, the job is to loosen up the community so that folks moving in can fit in.

The community spirit is an asset. It enables caring to take place. It enables the Good News to be not just mouthed, but acted out.

There are a lot of us in the rural areas who have foregone the big salaries and nice lifestyles to raise our families in caring communities. Because it is important.

It is important to be a part of a world with meaning. Where you care about people and they care about you. Where you have to live with your mistakes and get forgiven and not just run away from them in the anonymity of the masses.

The last Sunday in February, my congregation pulled off a surprise birthday party for me. Totally a surprise. A lot of stuff happened. A lot of special people had a part in it.

But most of all, it made me realize what it is like to be a part of a community.

I have lived here for over 5 years. Longer than I have lived anywhere in my adult life. I have lived rather intimately with my congregation. They know my short comings. My sins, if you will. They know my strengths, as well.

They sent me a message in that birthday party. A message of community. "Because of it all. Sometimes in spite of it all. We care about you."

You can't demand it. You can't fake it. You can only experience it.

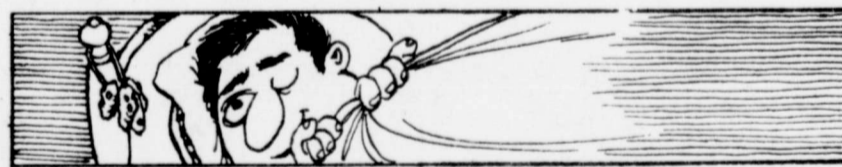

And give it. I think that is what Jesus was trying to tell us about the Kingdom of God.

I think that is what the Church was meant to be.

I know that is why one pastor is thankful to have an opportunity to serve in a place like Winters. At St. John's.

Conservation compliance

With the passing of the 1985 Farm Bill, Congress and the USDA are taking a stand on protecting our natural resources. Congress, along with the USDA, has adopted provisions that are commonly known as swampbuster, sodbuster, and conservation compliance. The Food Security Act of 1985 disqualifies you for certain USDA programs if you produce crops on highly erodible land without following a conservation plan approved by the local Conservation District, or if you break out highly erodible land and do not protect it from erosion. Some of the programs which could be put into jeopardy are disaster payments, crop insurance, FHA Loans, CCC storage payments and farm storage facility loans. To remain eligible for the aforementioned programs, a conservation plan must be developed for highly erodible fields by January 1, 1990. The plan must be fully implemented by January 1, 1995. If you have questions, please contact the Soil Conservation Service in Ballinger.

Young Farmers met

The Winters Young Farmers met Monday night for a program on North Runnels Emergency Medical Service. There are two full-time and four part-time employees and three fully-equipped emergency response units. Randy Nolte discussed different techniques used in handling emergencies such as rattlesnack bites, major cuts and lacerations. Nolte explained to the chapter that in an auto accident the victims should not be moved unless there are life-threatening conditions such as fire, exposure, or chemical exposure. The Winters Young Farmers got a chance to inspect the ambulance. During the business portion, members discussed the scholarship for high school seniors to be presented in May. The $300 scholarship is available to any graduating senior who plans on a career in an agricultural related field. Applicants may be picked up from Roy Shackelford.

A bowling ball can teach us something, it goes down the aisle again and again—and it has holes in its head. A good time was had by all who came to our supper and game night Saturday night. Therin Osborne called the business meeting to order, Nila Osborne read the minutes. The Osbornes and Hilda Kurtz were hostesses and Adeline Grissom assisted. An Easter theme decorated the gym with Mr. and Mrs. Bunny Rabbit and Easter basket filled with eggs as the table centerpiece, with baskets also on the serving tables. The Rodney Faubions and the Walter Clendenens will host the April party. We welcome all the visitors to come again. Bro. Oscar and Janie Fanning were Sunday dinner guests with Selma and Hazel Dietz. Afterwards they visited Alta Hale and Amber Fuller in Coleman. Adeline Grissom spent some time with Mae Hoelscher in Ballinger Thursday. Visiting the Bradley Papes over the weekend were Debbie Conroy of Fairfield and her friend, Garland Horn, of Karnes, Texas. On Wednesday Ruth and Leona Hicks were shopping in Coleman, on Thursday Ruth had to carry Leona to her Dr. and on Friday Bradley and Ruth took Leona to the hospital for test and xrays. Selma Dietz spent Monday in Brownwood and heard Keith Parks speak in the Coliseum. Karen McGallian came out to the Therin Osbornes Sunday to pickup daughter, Stefanie, who had spent several days with her grandparents. Mike Hill of Sweetwater spent Thursday with his folks, Claudia and Robert. Our sympathy to the Coleman Foremans due to the death of his Aunt Buna Bolton of Gustine, Texas on Friday. German Burritos to be served downtown

This is a special invitation for you to join us in downtown Winters this Saturday. We are excited about all the participation in our Spring Fling. All the businesses on Main Street are going to have Sidewalk Sales and "very, very special sales."

James Cross at Main Drug tells me he is getting in a lot of merchandise to put on sale. Ava's Dreams By The Yard has new fabric on sale and will have all her left over fabric on a special discount in the back of her store. During the day, Ava will be having some real "blue light specials". At the Merle Norman Studio on North Main there will be a special trunk showing of ladies fashions and jewelry. Along the sidewalk near the Country Cobbler will be a display of Joni Lyn ladies wear for sale. Near there will be a booth of brass giftware, including brass lamps, shown by one of our local businesses. Jerrolyn's and Heidenheimers will be having Sidewalk Sales and specials inside their store. Winters Flower Shop and Flowers Etc. will have some beautiful arrangements on sale for your Easter giving. Carolyn at Fashion Shop has received some fantastic new fashions and will have her "special grand opening" following the remodeling of the store. Spills has received a special shipment for this particular weekend. Be sure to make that one of your stops.

How about a garage sale downtown or call it a "flea market" - Connie Key will be having one on the corner lot beside Video Hut. Allan Key has recently retired and is Winters all time - so between his place in Fort Worth and their house in Winters - they need to get rid of a lot of items.

Melba is going to have 50% off items and also buy one and pay a penny and get another one.

Did I forget to mention the homemade bread which will be served during the day at Bahlman's Jewelry? Lanny has this fantastic bread maker in his store that makes and bakes all in one operation. Go by there and get a sample of bread and see some of the "fantastic give-away prices".

And you would not want to miss being in Winters during the noon hour. On East Dale there will be Nachos, Brownies, Cookies, Charcoal Hamburgers, and along Main Street, Cotton Candy, a Candy Concession Stand, face painting, a fishing pond with prizes, Barbeque at Holloway's and more.

How about getting your car washed for $1? The Catholic Youth will do this for you at Gene Wheat's Shell Station.

Alert driver saves home

A tragedy was averted last week in Winters when a passer-by noticed flames on the porch of a Winters residence and responded to the call.

Winters Elementary School teacher Dianne Davis was driving north on Main Street when she saw a fire on the porch of the Johnnie Aldridge home.

Mrs. Davis stopped next door, at North Runnels Water Supply Corporation to report the fire. Water supply corporation employees Perry Poe and Andy Smith, who is also a volunteer fireman, ran next door and put out the fire.

Upon checking inside, the men found the resident trying to put out a fire in a mattress. She had already thrown the burning blankets out on the porch.

An alert neighbor and others responding quickly prevented a major house fire and possible injury.

Girl Scouts observe 77 years of scouting

Heart of Texas Girl Scouts and Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. will be celebrating Girl Scout Week March 12-18. This year marks the 77th year of Girl Scouting.

Many troops will be observing Girl Scout Week with special activities such as doing a community service project, hosting banquets, awarding earned recognitions to girls, and attending church services on Girl Scout Sunday, March 12.

In troops, girls continue to learn traditional values and skills which include: camping skills, God and Country awards, and homemaking skills. They are also learning to live in and with a changing world so they may become positive contributors to society. Girl Scouting helps girls develop values, self-confidence and leadership skills to make sound decisions about their own lives and issues that affect all of us. Girl Scouting does this by offering programs about careers, doing activities that focus on contemporary issues such as drug abuse and other forms of abuse, dealing with divorce or death in the family, encouraging girls to learn more about science and math, and many more. All the time the girls are learning, they are having fun as Girl Scouts.

The second grade Brownies participated in a special activity this week. They went to the nursing home for a visit. The girls took some cookies and pictures they had colored. A good time was had by all.

The troop, led by Mary Mahaffey, consists of Jamie Bishop, Kourtney Cathey,

Out of town guests were, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Austin, grandparents of Abilene; Fred Austin, uncle, of Oklahoma; Ralph and Melissa Austin, brother and sister-in-law, Orlando, Florida; Mrs. Corine Oliver and Ann Reed, aunt and cousin from Nolan, Texas.

Card of Thanks

We would like to thank the Scouts who took part and those who came to John's Court of Honor. Also those who sent cards and gifts and those who attended. These very special people made a special occasion even more special.

Also a special thanks to Pastor Steve, Lanny Bahlman, Mike Kozelsky, Jason Young, Fred Austin, Elaine Miller, Billie Gerhart and Dawn Bryan. These special adults helped John to achieve his goal.

We hope when the time comes we will be able to help others as much.
