By Kerry Craig

Our community lost a dear friend this week. Mike Grantham, principal at Winters High School for a number of years, will be long remembered by every person whose life he touched.

Especially for those students and former students the loss will be great. We all will miss that ever-present smile.

In joining with his family in their loss, all who knew Mike were enriched beyond measure.

In being close to high schools through the years, I found none in which the entire student body and its principal enjoyed the relaxed but highly productive attitude, the one-to-one relationship that each student, as well as community members, felt with Mike.

We can extend our hearts and sympathies to his family and at the same time thank them for sharing Mike with us all.

In viewing the activities down south regarding the hospital in Ballinger, we can be thankful that our community, years past, had the foresight to provide a medical facility as we have.

The folks in the southern parts of the county can have something similar if they use their common sense and vote accordingly Saturday.

There have some major waves along with the little ripples in the past two years regarding that hospital but, in a final analysis, that hospital is a vital part of that community.

Sure, if Ballinger's hospital is forced by the voters to close its doors, North Runnels Hospital will have more business but, how about those folks that need hospital care in only a few minutes? They will be faced with an ambulance ride to Winters and that fifteen, or so, minutes may mean the difference between life or death.

It seems that the whole issue down there can be boiled down to dollars and sense. From what is being heard here, the folks concerned about dollars are against a hospital district and the folks with the sense are in favor of the hospital.

On the dollar side, they don't want another taxing entity to shell out the dollars to every year.

On the other side of the coin, those folks that are supporters of forming a hospital district with the authority to levy property taxes, can see beyond the end of their collective noses. They are aware of the vital role the hospital plays in the community.

Either way the vote goes there will be those who feel they won the election, and those who feel they lost.

I would challenge those who oppose the hospital district on the basis of another tax or another tax dollar to pay to tell us how they can equate human pain, suffering and death to cold hard dollars and cents.

Fortunately, we have our hospital here. Sure, we pay taxes to support it and we pay bills for the services it provides and we all, at one time or another, fuss about the cost. We will find, or have found, that the community hospital is cheap at twice or three times the cost.

Especially when that hospital and its nurses and doctors are able to intervene and relieve the pain and suffering or prevent even one death.

Thank you for the time you have given me to discuss my thoughts.

found the hospital to be in compliance in all areas, that only a few minor deficiencies were noted.

Prewit said of the inspection results, "Super, our people have done a great job."

He said that the hospital was pleased with the inspection, that the inspectors were very courteous and offered many constructive ideas, "the team did a very good job."

It was only two years ago, following a similar inspection, that our hospital found itself in danger of being forced to close by an inspection team that apparently intended to close the facility.

Since that time, there apparently have been some revision of the inspection guidelines that now allows the inspection teams to work with the hospitals

Dreams Come True

Dreams can come true even if they are a long time in developing. Gerald and Wanda Smith found this could happen when they recently purchased the John G. Key house north of town. They confessed to each other they both had dreams of living there when they were children.
 Wanda Daniels, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Coward, and Gerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bluford Smith, both grew up on farms north of town and passed this house every day as they rode the bus into Winters through all their school years. They even dated some but time and distance separated them. They had not seen each other in 30 years.
 She was living in Conroe when he moved to Cleveland, a small town nearby. Gerald had retired after 35 years working for Arco Refinery at Pasadena. They renewed their friendship and were married October 13, 1984. Soon afterwards they completed an ideal retirement home at Cleveland where they intended to live out their days.
 On their annual vacation trip to Las Vegas in December last year they stopped by Winters as their custom. On the way Wanda mentioned to Gerald that she dreamed they bought they Key house.

 "Do you want to live there?" he asked.
 "Well," she became practical, "it might be too expensive and we'd have to sell our house first."
 The idea grew with both of them and in a matter of days, after their vacation, plans were well under way. The house was affordable and they mentioned their home was for sale to one couple who bought it in two days time.
 By January the Smiths were back in Winters hauling off large loads of undergrowth, also trimming trees and shrubbery that had grown rampant since the death of the Key's daughter, Towner, who lived there after her parents demise.
 All transactions were completed by February and the block of land south of the house had been bought. The possibilities of the 65 year-old colonial type house became increasingly apparent to the couple who had become experienced at building and decorating when they finished their first home.
 They hired carpenters to rebuild porches and balconies outside that had rotted due to the ravages of time and weather. They were restored exactly as they were. About 200 tubes of calking compound was used to seal every door, board and window. The house was then painted a soft yellow trimmed in white. Shutters and window boxes were added for decoration and a harmonious effect. Nothing was done to the children. She also uses her wood carving hobby to make many of the decorations in the house.

 The hallway is papered with the same design used in the dining area. The foyer and living room are covered with mauve colored carpet. The living room roof which was in excellent condition.

 They only change was to make the lower floor two rooms, kitchen and breakfast room were made into one room as a kitchen-dining area. They had carpenters working inside three months, tearing out walls and rebuilding. By the time it was finished, Johnny Waldrop and Howard Reid had a personal interest in all that went on.
 Joe Kozelsky built the cabinets which are white with blue pulls and blue vinyl tops. The drawers have double depth for storing although they look like single drawers from the outside. The wall paper is blue with tiny white and mauve colored flowers. Wanda made the shades of mauve fabric with tiny blue flowers. These are necessary to keep out the hot morning sun. When raised the shades fold into pleats, a valance also lends a pleasing effect. The windows are flanked by open shelves that hold some of Wanda's many fabric dolls which she creates as a hobby and for her grand-walk-in closets in two bedrooms on the south and a closet in each of the other two bedrooms. There is also a basement that is all cement, it has plenty of shelves and storage space. It also houses the diesel heating unit that provides plenty of economical warmth for the whole house.

 Gerald raises quarter horses but sold all but a broodmare and one horse before he moved. The mare is expecting a colt in June so he has built two lots and also been busy digging a well, working on yards, drive-way and other incidentals.

The Smiths think they will have plenty to keep them from getting bored. The grand children can help there. Wanda has three daughters: Leona, Barbara and Debby. Gerald's daughters are Marla and Rilda. Between them they have 13 grandchildren and three great grandchildren.

FROM A GOLDFISH BOWL

BY PASTOR STEVE BYRNE

Last weekend I took a group of my Lutheran Living Faith youth to San Angelo to view, firsthand, a rather unique ministry of the Lutheran Church—Bethpage Community Services. Bethpage works with mentally retarded adults. We learned that the proper term now is "developmentally disabled."

This Lutheran ministry, aided by contracts from MHMR, takes developmentally disabled adults out of large institutions, buys or rents homes in residential neighborhoods, where 5 or 6 of these folks live together under supervision. They share chores around the house, including cooking and cleaning. Those who are able to work at simple jobs outside the home, many of whom had never before received a actual pay-check.

At one of the homes, Ruth let us in. She saw my clerical collar and immediately wanted to show me the praying-hands bust that she had made in her work. She painted these busts, and was very proud of her work. As she should be. It was beautiful. I don't know how old she was, but she was going to visit her 90-year old mother that afternoon.

Michael was another of the residents there. He had an autographed picture of Tommy Lee Jones on his wall. He was a country music fan and knew every song, by heart, that Hank Williams had ever sang.

I tuned his guitar for him and we sang "Your Cheating Heart" together. It was fun.

I handed him the guitar, which he didn't know how to play. But he strummed and sang for us. Some songs we sang along. Sometimes we just enjoyed his entertainment.

Michael was singing from his heart with such unbridled jubilation that I found my countenance caught up in a smile I couldn't get rid of. An infectious smile like you used to get, right before it turned into laughter of uncontrollable delight. I hadn't had that feeling in years!

It wasn't the laughter of an adult. Not patronizing, condescending, nor a "laughing at." It was the laughter of children. Innocent. Sheer playfulness. The shared merriment of two or more people enjoying themselves indescribably.

There is an old Gospel song, "There'll be No Distinction in Heaven." I experienced a vision of heaven in that home in San Angelo Saturday. It wasn't a sharing of intelligent and mentally handicapped. We were all just God's children, united in a mutual celebration of each other, in a moment in time.

That house is holy ground. Because God is present. In the love and the laughter. I know. I was there. And I doubt I will ever be able to forget it. But then, I don't want to forget it.

"There is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female (neither "normal" nor developmentally disabled, ed.); for you are all one in Christ Jesus." (Galatians 3:28)

Flags wave for dear friend

The face of Winters High School the morning of Monday, September 25, 1989, the day our friend, mentor, example, co-worker, neighbor passed this life. For all who knew the unique spirit of MIKE GRANTHAM will always be among us.

Pirate Log

Teachers will send out progress reports this week. These reports will give parents an idea how their children have done the first three weeks of school.

We have set the date for school pictures. The photographer will be here early on Friday, October 13.

Mrs. Sneed's 3rd and 4th grade classes will be taking their annual trip to Safety City on October 19. This is a good learning experience on safety for bicycle riders, pedestrians, and even motor vehicle drivers.

Mrs. Derrington's 7th and 8th grade classes are doing a family history project in English class. On Friday they will be going to Oak Creek Lake for a welcome back to school party. They will be going for some fun and hopefully some sun.

Mrs. Medford is doing newspaper activities in her reading classes this week. The students are having fun while learning more about current events.

We have begun to receive calls to schedule basketball games. We hope to have a full schedule this year.

The airshow begins at 10 a.m. and admission is free.

Mathis Field is located south west of San Angelo off Knickerbocker Road. Plenty of parking and food and beverages will be available, so bring the kids, plenty of film and plan on making a day of it.
