City of Winters receives tax rebate check for $20,493.72

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said Friday that his office sent checks totaling $156 million in local sales tax rebates to cities and counties in Texas.

Included in this total was a check for $20,493.72 to the city of Winters; up 3.28 percent from last year's February check. The year-to-date total for Winters stands at $29,125.49, down just slightly from last year when the two month total was $29,139.42.

Other area cities and their rebate amounts were: Ballinger, $54,244.58 (ytd $64,875.19);

Miles, $2,061.75 ($2,911.47); and Tuscola, $1,799.05 ($2,743.29).

Merchants collect the state, city and county sales taxes and send them to the Comptroller's office with their tax returns. The state keeps its 6% share and each month sends cities and counties their portion of the sales tax.

This month's checks reflect taxes collected on December sales and reported in January by businesses filing monthly tax returns. Also included in this month's payments are sales tax collections reported by quarterly and yearly filers.

This month's total is the second highest monthly rebate in the state's history with last February's payments of $157 million to cities and counties setting the state's record.

Total payments last February were $1.2 million higher than this month because a number of large audit payments were credited to the books last February, Bullock said.

This February's payments to cities totaled $143 million.

Houston received $24 million, the state's largest payment. Dallas received the state's second largest payment of $15 million. San Antonio received $8 million and Austin received $6 million.

Payments to counties totaled $13 million this month, compared to $12 million last February.

County's Chief Appraiser resigns amid controversy

Clayton Brazelton, Chief Appraiser for the Runnels County Appraisal District, submitted his resignation Tuesday, Feb. 6.

Brazelton had come under fire from five of the county's eleven taxing entities during a special meeting of the Appraisal District board Thursday night, Feb. 1.

Brazelton's resignation was accepted following an extended executive session by appraisal district board members. The Chief Appraiser met with the board in its executive session, then came out and typed the letter and submitted it to the board. Board members accepted the resignation in open session.

The resignation by the Chief Appraiser was a voluntary one, tendered "with mixed emotions," according to Brazelton.

Under terms of the resignation, Brazelton will remain on the job until April 30 with an option to leave sooner if he finds satisfactory work elsewhere. Additionally, he will remain on the job after April 30 if a replacement has not been found and he has not secured employment.

At the Feb. 1 meeting representatives from Ballinger and Winters city and school districts were joined by other taxing entities in Runnels County in expressing their displeasure with the performance of the Appraisal District in general and the Chief Appraiser specifically.

Areas of concern itemized at the meeting included:

- * Failure to provide a reappraisal of properties every three years as required by state law.

- * Lack of adequate progress toward establishing an accurate mapping and numbering system for county properties.

- * The appraisal district office's continued failure to provide a listing of all tax exempt properties.

- * Improper granting of 1-d-1 (agricultural) land appraisals.

- * Failure to provide adequate agricultural land evaluation training to ag advisory board members.

- * Failure to improve the quality of computer generated reports furnished to the taxing entities by the appraisal district office.

According to Chuck McIlvaine, Winters City Secretary, the city has had ongoing problems with the Appraisal District.

He said matters came to a head last summer over the district's budget. The first budget submitted by the Appraisal District was rejected by a majority of the taxing bodies. Under that budget, the purchase of a pickup truck was included with office expenses and all salaries were lumped together, rather than itemized.

The second budget submitted resolved these problem areas and was approved.

McIlvaine also said that the city sent out its tax notices late last year because the appraisal office did not provide a tax roll to the city in a "timely" manner. Additionally, he noted that the city had requested a figure from the Appraisal District on the average value of a home in Winters and was told to figure it themselves.

"We had some questions on valuations, the tax roll was late, it really didn't balance," McIlvaine said.

Appraisal District board members now have the task of finding solutions to these problems in addition to hiring a new Chief Appraiser.

Members are expected to discuss the possibility of hiring an independent appraisal professional to evaluate the appraisal office performance at the March board meeting.

Board members discussed the state-mandated re-evaluation of county properties at the Feb. 6 meeting, but could not agree on how and when the comprehensive program must be completed.

Brazelton told board members that it is unclear when the property re-evaluation must begin -- this year or next. He told the board he believed the new appraisal could be delayed until 1991. He also noted that the re-evaluation will require additional money from each of the taxing entities.

Other items discussed by the board included the possibility of reprogramming the appraisal office computer to comply with a Runnels County request for alphabetized tax roll corrections; interpretation of laws governing 1-d-1 evaluation; and development of an accurate mapping system of county properties.

Brazelton said that his employees had been working on the mapping project as time allowed since 1985. He replied that it would take more money to accomplish the task if an outside mapping firm was brought in to handle the job.

OIL BUSINESS

By Reg Boles

Due to the complexity of the oil and gas business, there are an abundance of "experts" out there offering to help the apparently "helpless" operator. I admit that there are highly technical aspects of this business that require advice and guidance from an experienced professional. But, I am often amused at the situation where a consultant is hired only as a result of the fear of the unknown. In many cases, a consultant is not required for an operation but is hired anyway because of normal "industry practice." On the other hand, I have seen projects fail miserably because of the resistance to hiring anybody that is not kinfolk, regardless of the nature of the situation.

So, when does the average Joe Operator need a consultant? What kinds of consultants are there? How much do they cost? When are they really needed?

There are as many types of consultants as you can think up a name for. This is going to take some valuable print space, but it will be worth it. There are drilling consultants, geologists (on-site and prospect), mud loggers, petroleum engineers, well log analysts, operation specialists, stimulation experts, and so on and so on and so on... Get the picture? You name it, you can pay somebody to do it. For that very reason, don't look at somebody's list of consultants and assume you are going to need one. Plan your operation first, then hire based on what you really want and need.

How much for these services? It varies by type of consultant, geographical region, complexity and uniqueness of a project, and the price of oil. The only way you can find out is to ask. Consultants are kind of like doctors; they don't advertise their rates. But there is no reason why you can't ask and shop around. You need to have your requirements down in writing and allow the consultant time to evaluate his costs. From that starting point, he should be able to give you a fair estimate of the cost of his services.

Guess what! Some of these guys don't even have to be paid for their services (at least by you). That's right. They come along with some services you are already purchasing. Now wait a minute, you say. That sounds a little like communism. Not to worry. The cost for these consultants is in the price you already pay for oil field services. You just don't see them itemized—they are a part of the service company's overhead. Here's how it works.

Let's use an example. Let's say you set up an acid job with a big service company that paints its trucks red and gray. They have engineers on staff that are there for your use. They can advise you on the size and design of your job. They have sophisticated computer programs at their disposal. They are a great resource that doesn't cost you an extra dime. Use them as much as you can—the price is right. Just remember one simple warning. These guys and gals are as honest as the day is long, but the red & gray (or yellow & red or orange & black blue & white, etc.) company signs their paychecks. Selling more acid and frac fluid makes their employer very happy. I think you get the point. Stimulation companies are not the only service companies with consultants on staff, but their example is a good one. Actually, any service company may have really sharp experts working for them. In many situations, the owner or manager of a small company is an expert by experience. Consult those guys for practical and effective (and cheap) advice.

Now that we know how to recognize a consultant, when does an operator really need one? There are no hard and fast rules, here. Look at your objectives for a project or daily operations. Use consultants to fill the holes where you are weak or need help. Otherwise, you can probably avoid hiring a consultant.

There are some areas where a consultant is almost always required. Certifying reserves, tests, etc. for Railroad Commission hearings or in a court-of-law, critical design for high pressure systems, use of specialty logging or drilling tools, precision reservoir pressure measurements and analysis, and toxic or volatile chemical treating system design are examples.

In any case, use good judgment in hiring a consultant. If selected properly, they can solve problems that will save you money far in excess of their fees. If chosen based on ignorance, fear, or because "it is usually done," they will waste your money and your time.

FROM A GOLDFISH BOWL

BY PASTOR STEVE BYRNE

The sewer backed up at the church Sunday morning. This happens in places where there are a lot of trees. It seems that tree roots find their way to this rich substance and somehow manage to break through the pipe. Then things get all clogged up.

One person suggested that it could have been an act of God. "Sort of a Divine comment on the quality of preaching around here." I prefer the first alternative, myself.

It was Sunday afternoon. A couple of the men began digging to hit the line. With shovels. Finally they called another member who had a backhoe. He dropped what he was doing, came out. They found the pipe. Finished the job Monday morning.

Everything is flowing well, thank you.

As a rule, these things never happen Monday-Friday, 8-5. More than likely, they happen between 5 p.m. Friday and midnight Sunday. Usually when you have company from out of town. Especially from the city where things like this never happen.

One of the delights of living in a small community is that when there is a need, the neighbors seem to be there when you call them. Even if it is not during "regular working hours." Even the guy down at the retail "gizmo" place will leave the ball game on TV and go unlock the store to sell you a $5 gizmo. Not because he/she is going to make a lot of money. But because you have a need. And because you are a neighbor.

Jesus told the parable of the Good Samaritan as a way of telling us the importance of BEING a good neighbor. Not just having one. The Samaritan went out of his way to help a neighbor (translated, "a fellow human being") simply because he had a need. And I'll bet a dollar against a hole in a donut that the parable takes place on a weekend.

I've been the recipient of this neighborliness. Hopefully, I have been on the other end, as well. And it always makes me glad to be a part of a place where this happens.

Yet, sometimes in my more wishful moments, I wonder what the world would be like if everybody was trying to be a good neighbor. I think that was what Jesus was trying to tell us His kingdom is like.

Which makes it a joy to pray, "Thy Kingdom Come." Jesus is a good neighbor. And, in a symbolic way, it is still backed-up sewers that he helps us unplug. To keep our lives flowing with His love.

Twain Talk

by Twyla Twain

Do you have one of those fabulous junk drawers? You know, the kind where you keep all the things that are vital to the actual survival of you and your family. I guess everybody in the Free World has a junk drawer or two. It's just that some junk drawers are of a higher caliber than others. I know that the junk drawer in the home where I grew up contained things like rattle-snake rattles, pens that wouldn't write, the beginnings of a great aluminum foil ball, and a comb with half the teeth missing. While our junk drawer was pretty nifty, it didn't begin to compare with the junk drawer at my grandmother's house. Now she had some classy stuff--buttons that looked like real money, old pictures of boy babies wearing lacy dresses, steely marbles, hairnets, and one of my favorites--an extra set of false teeth. (May I suggest right here and now that it's not a good idea to "try on" someone else's false teeth--especially when you already have a full set of natural teeth). I also thought it was rather sweet how my grandmother kept the real-live ponytails from a couple of her granddaughters. At least I thought it was neat after I realized it wasn't something that had died in the drawer and "fuzzed over".

My grandfather had his own drawer but it couldn't really qualify as a true junk drawer because it was all orderly. I always had a sense of importance when I got to investigate his junk drawer because I was certain it contained papers dealing with the security of our government. He had a weird triangular-shaped ruler with all sorts of funny numbers. He had the same pair of those thin, nylon socks still in the package and handkerchiefs with his initials on them. He had maps and a magical magnifying glass. Yes, it was one of the classier junk drawers I've seen thus far.

I've decided you can tell a lot about a family just by the contents of their junk drawers. It's pretty fun to watch someone else dig in their junk drawer, but an even bigger thrill when they ask you to "just look in there" for something. You have no idea where things belong or how deep you're supposed to dig, so you just kind of shuffle stuff around, trying not to look too nosy, but actually taking it all in with your photographic memory and comparing it to your own junk drawer at home. The family with little kids has broken crayons and birthday candles, some "Go Fish" cards, paper coupons that expired, and lots of those "surprise treasures" you pay dearly for in certain cereals. The family with teenagers might have pencils with no lead, a very worn and marked phone book, school pictures you intend to cut apart, and pieces of Chetcos that have hardened beyond belief. I imagine an older, organized couple will have a crisp phone book, glue you can actually get out of the bottle, sharp pointed scissors that actually cut, several individual containers of nails and tacks, and maybe even some tickets to some place fun.

Because junk drawers are so important to every household, I decided to clean and reorganize ours. I must admit, I did a pretty good job considering I had to tie a rope around my waist before jumping into that mess. Now I've got just one comb with missing teeth, buttons to sew on "some day", pictures cut apart but not in the album, last year's phone book because it's not as limp as this year's, and an envelope of coupons that I promise to use before they expire. And just for the heck of it, I threw in a brochure of a Caribbean cruise and box of Polident. So you're welcome to check out my junk drawer and decide for yourself whether I'm coming or going.

Ne'er the Twain Shall Meet!

A Panorama of Life

While celebrating her 80th birthday Saturday, February 17, at St. John's Lutheran Church Education Building at a reception hosted by her children and grandchildren, Eula Mae Kruse will also be observing her 40 years in the teaching profession.

Mrs. Kruse is a former teacher with Winters Independent School District, who has enjoyed working with the education profession and estimates that she has taught three-fourths of the Winters population at one time or another.

Her teaching career began October 7, 1929, when she taught her first day of school at Dale, a rural school six miles southeast of Winters. Her salary was a whopping $90 per month, she said, "My room and board cost me $25 a month, so I had $65 left to spend as I pleased. I was rich! Walking a mile and a half to and from school each day was no chore."

After seven years at Dale School, she moved to Harmony School, about eight miles north-east of Dale, where she taught for five years. In the fall of 1940, she began teaching at Winters, where she taught for 20 years until her retirement in 1971. She spent her entire teaching career a total of 40 years within a radius of ten miles.

Eula Mae was born eight miles east of Winters on a stock farm. Her parents were Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Barker, pioneer settlers of the county. She was the eighth of nine children, all of whom are deceased, except Eula Mae and her sister, Kate (Mrs. O. C.) Adami, of Seagraves.

Life at home consisted of ordinary farm activities; performing certain chores, going to school all week, hunting birds nests and twisting out rabbits from their holes on Saturdays, attending Sunday School and church on Sundays followed by baseball games with the neighborhood children in the afternoons.

"One school memory really stands out. Mother always insisted that Kate and I wear split bonnets to school. How we hated those SPLIT BONNETS! We hid them at a certain place on the way to school each morning and picked them up in the afternoon. Upon returning home we were perfect little "angels" wearing our split bonnets!"

"My second grade teacher was quite strict. She expected perfection from her pupils, young though they were. On the way to school one morning, I lost my pencil. My first class was spelling. I made a ZERO! I cried most of the morning, but I had learned my lesson. BE PREPARED. That was my worst experience. All considered, I thoroughly enjoyed most of my school years."

"Before coming to Texas in the 1880's, my father taught school in Loganville, Georgia. His experiences intrigued me. Le Belle, my oldest sister, began her 17 year teaching career in 1919. Her last eight years were spent in the San Angelo schools. Another sister, Opal Dale, was teaching her second year at Bovina, when she died of a ruptured appendix. The examples of my family members plus the encouragement of Miss Marryatt Smith, my high-school Latin teacher for four years, convinced me that teaching school should be my chosen profession. Because of my encouragement, my sister Kate became a teacher, also, and completed 41 years teaching. We four sisters spent a total of one hundred and two years teaching in Texas schools."

Following her graduation from Ballinger High School in May, 1928, Mrs. Kruse enrolled in Texas University for the first six-weeks term. Le Belle was attending, so she felt confident with her as her guide. Le Belle advised her to transfer to a teacher's college so that she could become certified. In September 1928, she enrolled in West Texas State Teachers College at Canyon, where she spent two long terms and one six-weeks summer session. This training qualified her for a Temporary Teacher's Certificate.

In the summer of 1933, she began taking six-weeks terms at Sul Ross State Teachers College at Alpine, and continued until she received her BS Degree August 27, 1942.

In the winter of 1949, she began attending Saturday classes at Hardin-Simmons University to work on her Master's Degree. With this and two summer terms she completed the task in August 1951.

Eula Mae met Charles in November, 1929, when she was boarding with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kruse, who were Charles' brother and his wife. On their first date, they attended an apron-and-overall party at Dale School. That was the beginning of their romance, which lasted from their marriage September 17, 1930 until Charles lost his battle with cancer August 29, 1985.

The couple's children are James Charles (Jimmy) born in 1936. Then almost eight years later, in 1944, their daughter, Lynann, was born.

Jim is co-owner of a construction company in Midland. His wife, Wanda, does secretarial work for the company, and his step-daughter, Amber, is in the sixth grade. Jim's son, Gregory James, is a sales executive and lives in Tampa, Florida. His wife, Pamela, is a secretary at the University of Florida.

Lynann and her husband, Dr. Charles E. Simpson, live in Stephenville. She teaches English in junior high, and is a member of Delta Kappa Gamma. They have two daughters, both Texas A&M students; Melissa is a senior and Shay Lynn a freshman.

With boundless energy and enthusiasm, Mrs. Kruse became a leader in many activities connected with her school, church and town.

She was a charter member of Winters Classroom Teachers Association and served two terms as its president. Also, she was elected president of Winters Band Mothers Association. For four years, she served as chairperson of TSTA District XV Teacher Welfare Committee. In 1954, The Glacier (Winters High School Yearbook) was dedicated to her.

Fame came to Winters in 1948 when four teachers were inducted into Delta Kappa Gamma, an international honorary organization for women teachers. They were, Mattie Cooke, Myra Dorsett, Eva Kelly and Eula Mae Kruse. They all belonged to the Alpha Beta Chapter and, when division became necessary, due to its size, they became charter members of Theta XI Chapter in 1968.

Other honors received by Mrs. Kruse include:

1959-Elected "Teacher of the Year" by the local federated clubs and also won district title.

1960-Elected Honorary Member of Winters FFA Chapter. Named Goal Diggers Mother of the high schools girls' organization.

1961-Received "Outstanding Teacher" award from the Winters Chapter of FFA.

1971-Received the coveted "John H. Lovelady Lifetime for Youth Award" at Houston during the Texas Future Teachers of America State Convention.

1974-Runnels County Retired Teachers Association was organized. Served as first president and three times since has served in the presidency.

1983-Served as president of District XV Texas Retired Teachers Association, of which she is a life member.

1986-Received "Award of Distinction" TRTA.

1989-Runnels County unit of Texas Retired Teachers Association sent a contribution to headquarters building fund in honor of Mrs. Kruse.

Federated Club work had always fascinated Eula Mae, and she became a member of the Literary and Service Club in 1947. During the following years she served in various offices and as president a number of times. She is the president in 1990.

Other affiliations include, membership in St. John's Lutheran Church, where she has taught Sunday School, served as president of two different ladies' organizations, and currently serves as vice-president of the Ladies Aid. She has membership in Winters Chapter of Order of Eastern Star, and has served as secretary. Lectured for Weight Watchers from 1972 to 1976 at Ballinger, Winters and Coleman. Substitutes when needed at school. For the past several years has served as Election Judge for Winters City Elections, Precincts 3 and 4.

With all of her activities, Eula Mae took time out to travel. When she couldn't persuade Charles to go with her, she took others. In 1972, Lynann went with her to New York City for a week of sightseeing. In 1974, sister Kate toured Europe with her. In 1975, her sister-in-law, Odessa Barker, went with her for a fun-packed trip to Hawaii with a tour group.

All agree that Eula Mae Kruse has lived a full and productive life. Her motto is: "Take one day at a time--stay busy."

Winters school counselor honored during Appreciation Week

February 5-9 was Counselor Appreciation week for public schools. Mrs. Susie Johnson is in her third year as counselor for the Winters Independent School District and teachers, students, administrators and parents have truly come to realize the scope of her influence and to appreciate the many hours of dedicated service and guidance she has given to those who depend upon her.

A school guidance person has myriad functions, such as helping students assess their strengths and limitations; to make decisions about their lives; to develop positive attitudes; to choose courses that are right for them; solve personal problems with family, friends and teachers; discover talents and abilities; find jobs; plan their education and decide on a career.

Capping off Counselor Appreciation Week, the Three Rivers Association of Counseling and Development sponsored a luncheon at Bentwood Country Club in San Angelo to honor the area administrators. Attending from Winters ISD were School Superintendent T.D. Lancaster, Curriculum Director Barbara Everett, High School Dean of Students W.G. Cathey, Elementary Principal L.C. Hounsel and Counselors Susie Johnson and Peggy Herrington. Athena Bean, counselor at CAP, also attended.

tion reference or connotation. The directors have authorized the use of the logo and name for publicity purposes, as long as it is in good taste.

The directors will consider granting permission to organizations, businesses and individuals who would like to use the logo/name for commercial purposes. The Celebration Committee will request a royalty to help defray some of the Centennial costs and they will consider exclusive and non-exclusive agreements to sell certain souvenir items.

The Centennial Celebration Committee will be selling a cookbook, a historical book, a collector's plate, souvenir medallions, wooden nickles, hats, ties, bonnets, buttons and some old fashioned dresses. Many other souvenir items and concessions will be available for sale by organizations and merchants.

We feel that this will be a great opportunity for clubs and businesses to have some additional income during the centennial, but we strongly recommend that no financial commitments be made until you receive final approval from the corporation.

ment (freedom of speech) was still in effect. To those who took offense, I would say to you that perhaps you took the kids' answers too personally and seriously. I have never heard anyone--third grade through college and the military service--be complimentary of lunchroom, cafeteria or mess hall food. Let's face it, it's not Momma's home cooking. Those opinions weren't directed at any one in particular, just comments to be made in a quick answer to a quick question without much thought being put into the answers.

To the kids who answered and perhaps got into trouble about the way they answered, I would say please keep expressing your opinions! No matter what you say or do, no matter how innocently, somewhere along life's way you'll succeed in offending someone. Part of the trouble we adults have is that we're afraid we'll offend someone by what or how we say something.

"There is no happiness comparable to that of the first hand-clasp, when one asks 'Do you love me?'" and the other replies 'Yes.'"

Project takes many hours: Persistence has paid off for Leila Perkins, who recently finished a wedding ring tablecloth. This project proved to be quite a challenge for Mrs. Perkins as it was started last fall; it took many hours to complete. What makes this piece so unusual is the wedding rings which are crocheted first, forming a circle. The work then continues up toward the center forming the table top area. Additional crocheting below the wedding rings puts the finishing touch to this beautiful piece. Mrs. Perkins would like to hear from anyone who has completed projects similar to this one.

I apologize on behalf of the students that took part in the newspaper's interview. Maybe next time we will either not take part in such an interview or give an answer that people would prefer to hear.

A couple of weeks ago I made a quick trip to the High School to get some pictures and comments for the February 1 Enterprise. In the cafeteria were several groups of kids-laughing, snacking and cutting up-during their break time. Since we had a short article concerning the school board considering a closed campus in the previous paper, I thought that might be a good subject for Kids Korner. I innocently asked the question "What do you think of a closed campus?" and the kids innocently, honestly and somewhat frivolously at times, answered. None of us, even grown-up, mature, fledgling newspaper publisher, me-realized we would cause such an uproar. Elsewhere in this week's paper you'll read a well-written and well-thought-out letter to the editor from one of the students who seems to have gotten into trouble because they stated their opinion.

Farm Bureau Membership Week celebrated in county

County Judge Mike Murchison has signed a proclamation designating February 11-17, as "Farm Bureau Membership week" in Runnels County.

The week is part of a statewide observance during which county Farm Bureaus will make a special effort to enroll new members, according to Rodney Faubion of Winters, president of the Runnels County Farm Bureau.

Allen Belk of Ballinger is chairman of the membership committee which is responsible for membership acquisition and maintenance. Other committee members are directors of the Runnels County Farm Bureau.

"The Texas Farm Bureau, with more than 325,000 member families, is influential in both state and national affairs on behalf of agriculture," the proclamation reads.

"Farm Bureau is a grass-roots organization. Its foundation is the county unit. There are 214 organized county Farm Bureaus in the state including the Runnels County Farm Bureau," the proclamation states.

Belk said the local county Farm Bureau has 1681 member families and is seeking to exceed that figure in 1990.

He said that the Farm Bureau is a general farm organization that seeks to improve income and living conditions of farm and ranch families. It represents the farmer and rancher at the local county courthouse, in Austin, and in the nation's capital, Washington, D. C.
