Jackson's 98 years have all been interesting ones

by JOYCE JONES

Pearl Jackson celebrated her 98th birthday on February 7 and can't really pinpoint a particular reason for her longevity and sharpness of mind. She said that it might have been the vitamins and health food that she got involved with in the 60's and 70's. Her son, C.S., attributes her sharpness of mind to the verbal sparring that goes on between the two of them when he visits her. "She's a brilliant conversationalist and a sharp lady."

She was born February 7, 1894 in Bell County and moved to Winters around 1926. She was the youngest of eight children which included six brothers and one sister. She was married to the late C.S. Jackson Sr., who was a druggist. He died in 1962. She has one son, C.S. Jackson Jr., one granddaughter and two great-grandchildren.

Jackson, a resident in the Senior Citizen Nursing Home, is a retired school teacher, retiring in 1963 after 38 years of teaching. She taught two years at Belton and the other 36 in the Winters school system. She received her Bachelor of Arts degree at Mary Hardin in Belton and her Masters at Hardin Simmons in Abilene. Her major was English but she taught typing, bookkeeping and shorthand. "I taught a year or two in other subjects, but grading was murder and I didn't want to spend the rest of my life grading papers," commented Jackson.

Her students went to state competition in Interscholastic School Work at Austin for more than 20 years and placed first in state several times. She said that because she and her students went to state so often, she became known as "Miss Winters" at the Austin meets.

Jackson said that she was a strict teacher and that she didn't put up with any foolishness. She had one rule and that was: her students would know more when they went out of her classroom than when they entered. She commented, "If I have any gift, it is seeing the potential in a person or a child, and helping them to reach it." She taught her own son and said that it wasn't easy. "If you want an experience, teach your own child. C.S. was a wise-cracker and I couldn't teach wise-crackers, especially my own son."

She said that she taught a lot of second generations and a lot of outstanding students. Alton Lowe was one of those outstanding students according to Jackson. She said that he visits her and other residents at the nursing home regularly. Jackson said "Alton worked in the kitchen at a Fort Worth college to finance his college education. He was a principal for 22 years near New York City and has now moved back near Abilene. I get so much pleasure out of his visits and I am so proud of him. I stirred him to reach his potential."

Jackson said that another of her most outstanding and smartest students was Novelle Bedford Mostad. Bedford's granddaughter, Mary Mostad, visits Jackson often. Mary is the fourth generation of Bedfords that she has known.

"I didn't intend to live to be 98 years old, but I don't know what years I would have cut off; they were all interesting and still are."

Jackson attributes her education to her mother and her teaching career to a former English teacher that she had in school. She said that her mother thought that education was the strength of life and insisted that her children have one. She said that she just hated the English teacher because she was so hard in her teaching methods. She once gave Jackson a zero which made her more determined to learn. Jackson said that she realized later in life that it was that particular English teacher who was the cause of her being a teacher.

Her son, C.S., who lives in Midland comes to visit her for a week at a time on a regular basis and they spend the entire week talking constantly. C.S. said "We discuss everything; we really put it back and forth, whatever it may be, religion to politicians and much more. We will read newspapers and then discuss what we have read and we don't always agree on subjects." His mother said "You can't imagine the pleasure of having your son come back and meet you on an adult level. We carry on a lot of conversations, there is nothing we can't talk about."

Jackson said that she took a nice trip every year the first three or four years after she retired. She has traveled to Mexico twice and wanted to go to Hawaii and California, but never made it.

She said that the town of Winters has really been great to her. Some of her former students honored her on her birthday this year with a party, her first ever birthday party. In the past, the citizens of Winters presented her with a gold watch inscribed on the back with all the dates that her classes had won first place in Austin.

Jackson reads daily from a book titled "The Measure of My Days" published when the author was

84. She said that when she feels like she is ugly or moody or not sharp, she will read passages from the book for inspiration.

She said "I didn't intend to live to be 98 years old, but I don't know what years I would have cut off; they were all interesting and still are."

Young Farmers journey to Abilene

by SUSAN CONNER

For the seventh year the Winters Young Farmers took a week-end trip to explore Texas agriculture. This year the group journeyed to the nearby town of Abilene. Nine cars met in downtown Winters to caravan to Dyess Air Force Base. Starting the trip in Winters were Dub and Jo McMillon, R.Q. and Doxie Lou Marks, Red and Omega Priddy, Robert and Adeline Holder, Hazel and Selma Dietz, Aubrey and Patsy Faubion, Alton and Virgie Jansa, Dwaine, Anthony and Richard Lange with Travis and Sarah Lange, Fred Wilde, Dale and Linda Duggan, and Randall and Susan Conner. They were met at the Dyess gate by Rodrick and Jill Bredemeyer and Ralph Porter.

Sgt. Crozier of the Dyess public relations met our group to conduct their personal tour of Dyess Air Force Base. We boarded the Dyess bus to get to the B-1 bomber. Along the way, Sgt. Crozier told us that Dyess is the largest employer in the city of Abilene. There are 5000 personnel stationed there. Construction at Dyess began in 1954 and the base was opened in 1956. Along the entrance way vintage aircraft are on display for everyone's enjoyment. These displays are maintained by different squadrons at Dyess. There are no wooden structures at Dyess. The Air Force planned for this installation to be a permanent one from the very beginning.

There are two different wings stationed at Dyess. The 463rd Air Lift which flies the C130 Hercules transports and the Strategic Air Command which is responsible for the B-1 Bomber, the KC135 fuel transport, and the T-38 Trainer. There are 31 B-1's assigned to Dyess.

We had the privilege of being out on the flight line right next to the B-1 bomber. It was a down day at Dyess, which meant that no planes were flying at the time. Actually, we were lucky this had happened or we would not have been able to hear anything our guide was telling us.

The B-1 bomber is a highly sophisticated designed aircraft. There are more computers on board than there are on the space shuttle. There are radar systems in the nose and also in the tail. The three weapons bays can carry 125,000 pounds of munition. The aircraft can also carry up to 200,000 pounds of fuel. The cost of the plane is over $300,000,000. Each plane is one-half the length of a football field.

There is a crew of four that flies the plane. It takes six months of training in order to learn to fly the plane and three of those months are spent training on a ground simulator. There is a ground crew of four personnel assigned to each plane and it is their names that are stenciled on each bomber. However, the flight crew may fly any one of the B-1's that is air ready.

We were instructed to stay close to our guide while we were near the B-1 and the presence of security police nearby restricted any tendency to wander too far away.

The next aircraft that we were allowed to see was one of the KC135 fuel transport planes. This plane was originally designed as a military transport plane, but has been adapted to civilian use as a Boeing 707. These planes are equipped to refuel the B-1 in air. It is also used to carry cargo and supplies. It can carry 30,000 gallons of fuel. We were allowed to enter this aircraft, and some of our crowd even laid down in the refueling area to see if they would like to try that. Most agreed that it was a tight squeeze and would take a special person to be able to do that kind of maneuvering.

Sgt. Crozier then gave us a general tour of the base. We saw the kennels where the military dogs are kept. Today these animals are used for security and drug detection. We also saw the munitions depot, base hospital, B-1 training center, and some of the on-base housing for 2000 single personnel and 1000 on-base family units.

The bus took us back to our waiting cars and we made a brief stop at our lodgings for the night, the Kiva Inn. Back in caravan order, we drove to Ft. Phantom to tour the West Texas Utilities Power Plant.

Next Week: A Powerful experience.

Trowbridge home destroyed by fire

The home of Don and Maxie Trowbridge, located 12 miles Northeast of Ballinger on County Road 162, was destroyed by fire on Monday night, February 17.

The house sustained heavy damage to the living room area. There was heat and smoke damage to the rest of the residence. The fire was reported by Maxie Trowbridge and was caused by a grease fire that started in the kitchen.

The State Fire Marshall's office was called to assist investigating officer Joe Stokes of the Runnels County Sheriff's Department in determining a cause and origin. Investigator Rick Womack with the State Fire Marshall's office ruled that the fire was accidental and caused from the grease fire that originated in the kitchen.

Council approves purchase of new computer system for city

In their regular scheduled meeting Monday night, February 24, the City Council approved the purchase of a new computer system, for the City of Winters, from C.P.S. Systems Inc. of Wichita Falls. The complete system cost $15,237 which included $1,000 for a report writer.

Other items on the agenda included the approval of hiring Keith Collom as a patrolman on the City of Winters Police Department and the approval of Charles Ludwick as Acting City Administrator and Acting City Secretary.

In other action, the Council also reviewed and approved Ordinance No. 92-05 for the assignment and transfer of cable television franchise to Marcus Cable of San Angelo and Rate Ordinance No. 92-04 providing floodlight service by West Texas Utilities.

Jerry Sims addressed the Council in reference to repairing the tennis courts at the city park. Sims said that one court is unusable at the present time and the surface is loose on the other two. Sims submitted a bid for $4800 to the Council for the cost of resurfacing two courts. This does not include the cost of taking old surface off and sandblasting the concrete slabs.

Sims said that a leak at the city swimming pool has caused some of the problem. The Council decided it would not be feasible to repair the courts until the problems at the pool have been straightened out. The Council took the matter under advisement until they can get some price quotes on sandblasting and take care of the problems at the pool.

Caravan of Dickson supporters to visit Winters and Wingate

Several carloads of campaign volunteers will visit here early Thursday morning at the start of a two-day schedule for the Dickson for Senate caravan.

The caravan is making its way to county courthouses and town squares throughout the 25th Senatorial District to show support for Senator Temple Dickson in his reelection bid. Kathy Dickson, the senator's wife, is among the friends on the caravan which started last week in Menard. So far, the caravan has visited 21 communities in the district.

The caravan is scheduled to be in Wingate at 7:10 a.m. to 7:55 a.m. and in Winters from 8:10 a.m. to 8:40 a.m. They will stop at The Enterprise first and then visit other businesses in the area.

OIL BUSINESS

By Reg Boles ©1992

This is the fourth column for February, so it is time for our "Oil Patch Basics" discussion.

This time around, we are going to talk about "fishing" parted tubing. In the theme of our "Basics" discussions for 1992, we are going to select this specific topic and talk about it. So, we are going to deal with tubing, not rods, not packers, not anything but tubing. We have to do that, because "fishing" is an art unto itself and can involve many downhole items. A book can be written on the subject, and all we have is this measly column.

Now, before I run you off with all of these disclaimers, let's define "fishing".

"Fishing" (that is the last time I am going to use quotes—I'm getting tired of it) is the process of getting a hold of something that is down inside of a wellbore. You may have used the term to describe other endeavors, such as 'fishing a match out of the furnace' or 'fishing a nickel out from under the refrigerator'.

In the oil patch, fishing is the term used to describe the very difficult job of fishing some thing out of a well.

Fishing tubing is...well... fishing tubing (what else?) out of a well.

Usually the tubing has been left in the hole due to no intentional act on an operator's part. In fact, it is a sign of trouble if you have tubing to fish. It means something has gone wrong, and your well is in danger of being lost as a means of income.

Tubing may "part", which means it broke, and fell to the bottom of the wellbore.

Tubing may have been dropped by a workover rig, or the tubing may have been left in the wellbore by some earlier unscrupulous operator who took the money and ran. (The RRC frowns on such things.)

In any case, the tubing top is usually down in the hole out of sight at some as yet undisclosed location. (If tubing is dropped or parts at the top of the string and the tubing can be reached at the rig floor, count your blessings and get off location—you're in for a pile of bad luck that is too terrible to contemplate to even things out.)

The first job is to locate the top of the "fish" (the item you want out of the hole) and try to ascertain its condition.

This can be done in a variety of ways, but a popular and effective method is to put a tool made out of soft lead on the end of a working string (the tubing you are using to fish with) and run it into the hole until it tags the fish. This tool is called an impression block.

When you tag the fish, you put a little weight on the tool and pull it back out. When it reaches the surface, you can see a molded replica of the top of the fish. This will give you an idea of what you are trying to get a hold of.

Knowing the fish will help you select the type of tool you want to fish with.

If you know that fish is pretty well in round (not too distorted), then you can try to run something that will fit over it. As such a tool goes down over the fish, its ID (internal diameter) is smaller as you go up into the tool, and this causes the tool to fit tighter and tighter onto the fish.

Hopefully, this will allow the tool to grip the fish and hold on until you can pull it out. If you are pretty lucky, this will work after only a few dozen tries, and you will have your tubing fished.

Unfortunately, it doesn't always work that way. In many cases, the fish top is smashed and crooked and the fish may be wedged into the casing or open hole.

In these instances, other more complicated and expensive fishing tools and methods must be employed.

Wash pipe is big open ended pipe that allows fluid to be pumped down and around the fish to wash away any debris to allow a better grip. A hollow bit or notched collars (hollow pipe with teeth) might be attached to the wash pipe if metal, mud, or formation is blocking the way.

Spears are also used to go inside of the fish to fish open ended tubing and provide a grip to pull the fish out.

I've already gone over my allotted space, but, again, this subject is broad in scope and I have only touched on a few oft-used techniques to fish tubing.

I have always greatly respected fisherman of the oil patch genre, because they have the patience of Job and the ingenuity of Edison. I think you get an idea why from our discussion. See you next time.

The Methodist's Message

The church welcomes the new pastor, Mike Madden and his wife, Jo Anna and everyone looks forward to his special ministry to the church and to the community.

Twenty-eight youth and adults from the church left on a retreat to Angel Fire, New Mexico on Saturday, February 22. They returned Tuesday night, February 25th. The church is thankful for their fellowship together and God's spirit that was alive and working in the lives of each person on the retreat.

The parsonage committee says "thank you" to all who helped paint and clean the parsonage, and to the ones who brought food for the workers.

A "Basic Lay Speaking course" will be held at FUMC Dublin, Texas, March 8, 15, 22 and 29th from 3 to 5:30 p.m. All who are interested are invited to this special Lay Speaking Course.

39+ will be meeting at 10 a.m. Thursday, February 27th in the fellowship hall.

The March/April issue of "The Saturday Evening Post" will contain a major article on the United Methodist Church. It will feature "United Methodists on the Move" in a four page story that includes photos and quotes of prominent United Methodists, Senator Robert Dole, ex-football Coach Tom Landry, Harry Blackmun and Minnie Pearl. The "Post" associate publisher, Robert I. Silvers states, "United Methodists deserve this recognition, I believe readers will be astonished by the positive contributions United Methodists are making in the United States and around the world."

You are special and are welcome to worship with the United Methodist Church. Sunday, March 1 schedule is : 8:45 a.m. Wingate worship; 9:30 a.m. Winters Sunday School; 10:45 a.m. Winters worship; 5:30 p.m. UMYF snack supper; and 5:45 p.m. United Methodist Youth Fellowship.

UMYF install officers

On Sunday night, February 16, the UMYF group met for a special Valentine party and installation of officers in the home of Van and Nora Spill. Twenty-six youth, six adult sponsors, guest speaker and new pastor, Mike Madden, attended.

A special thanks to Marthiel Russell for giving a wonderful devotional and for installing the officers using the theme of "The Rainbow." Special thanks also, to the Spills for letting the group meet in their home.

Congratulations to the following officers: Kari Biddix, President; Kelli Biddix, Vice President; Jennifer Boles, Secretary; Jennifer Matthews, Treasurer.

Baptist women present study book on Home Missions

And last the Flame represents the civilization of South Africa. No Small Sacrifice, the study book on Home Missions, was presented at the First Baptist Church Tuesday at a luncheon sponsored by the Baptist Women.

Jo Olive Hancock, president, presented Beth Bradley and Susan Conner who conducted the study.

Sarabeth Heidenheimer opened the meeting by reading the names of missionaries who had birthdays that day. Prayer was offered for them.

Beth Bradley introduced Barbara Oden, a single parent, who had assisted her mother in managing a large Houston apartment for eight years. She was tired of the job and wanted to work with children, but was asked by a minister to work in Springbook Village, a community of 5/6 units and about 2000 people. All nationalities and all low income. She had great response and changes were dramatic.

Susan Conner told of Ken Ellis who sacrificed a professional basketball career to enter the ministry. He became pastor of First Baptist Church at Burnham, a dying church. His power in the pulpit has brought life back to the church.

This meeting was attended by 30 people. There were guests from Ballinger, Bronte and Robert Lee.

Methodist ladies February Meeting

The United Methodist Ladies met in the home of Nina Hale on Tuesday, February 18. The new pastor, Mike Madden led the opening prayer. After the business meeting and treasurer's report, Dorece Colburn presented the program "Just Imagine - Living in New Creative Style." Judy Biddix read Psalms II. Those on the program were Lois Jones, Billie Middlebrook, Odessa Dobbins, Ethel Bridwell and Pauline Johnson. The group had a very interesting discussion, the program interested everyone. The next meeting will be March 3 at the Church. The group recited the Lord's prayer for dismissal.

Hispanic service

Notice is given of a Hispanic Pentecostal service to be held in Winters. Anyone that is interested can contact Rev. Thomas Ringo at 754-5400. If enough people are interested and concerned, the service may be on a weekly basis.

Spirit Filled Happenings

By Dixie Leverett, Church Editor
Guiding Light Spirit Filled Baptist Church

Here's my life Oh Lord live in me
I dedicate all my being to Thee
You fill all the moments of my days
To you I give eternal praise
Here's my heart You dwell there in
Keep my body fit and free of sin
Here are my hands that labor for You
My feet go swiftly Thy service to do
Take my voice and let it sing
Praising You my precious King
Take my lips and let them be
Speaking and witnessing for Thee
Here's my will, it is not mine
I gave it to You for all of time
Take my love Oh Lord I pray
For You have freed my life this day
You took this lowly sinner that is me
Cleansed my soul and set me free
You ransomed my soul with Your precious Blood
You've carried me through the flame and flood.
Thank You Lord Jesus.
"Psm. 86:3" "Be merciful unto me, Oh Lord: for I cry unto Thee daily."

We have a dynamic childrens program in Sunday School and Children's Church. Our children are our future. All children are welcome.

Guiding Light Spirit Filled Baptist Church is located at 1017 N. Cryer and is a spiritual light through Jesus Christ growing even brighter in a seemingly darkened world.

On Saturday February, 22, we were privileged to witness James and Frances Hamilton renew their wedding vows. A small reception followed.

Winters Colorguard group, Superior in competition

The Winters Colorguard participated in their first competition of the 1992 TEXAS COLORGUARD CIRCUIT on February 1 at South Garland High School in Garland, Texas. They scored a Superior in their Novice Class.

The second competition was at Alford High School in Alford, Texas on February 15. They scored 32.3 which moved them from Novice Class to High School Class A. The Colorguard is rated 6th in the State. The group is under the direction of Mr. Stephen Henry. Colorguard coordinator is Mr. Celeste Sosa with Pam Adams assisting. Scott Plumby is rifle consultant, with Kenneth Moses as motivator. The theme is "Well, Let's Go for the Gold!" The appropriate music used was the 1984 and 1988 Olympic tune. The Winters Colorguard consists of 12 young ladies and eight young men. This group did an outstanding job. Good luck in your next competition. Way to go Mr. Henry and your Colorguard!

The Colorguard consists of Tina Melton, Diane Abermathie, Loy Blackshear, Mandy Hall, Brooke Killough, Alisa Presley, LisAnne Smith, Jennifer Matthews, Brenna Mikeska, Angela Bryan, Kristen Deike, Charlie Burton, Chris Dry, Ahmad Griffin, J. G. Heidenheimer, Scott Kozelsky, Eric Hamrick, Kirk Connor and Willie Brown.

TEXAS TRAILS
LONE STAR STATE HISTORY by DAN BROWN
PAVED WITH GOLD
In 1936, two highways, U.S. 81 and U.S. 287 were being built across Montague County. Sharp-eyed construction workers noticed that the sand being used to mix the cement glistened. A sand sample was sent to Fort Worth to be assayed, inspectors found that it contained 54¢ worth of gold per ton of sand. Recovery of the metal wasn't feasible. Thirty-nine miles of highway were paved with $37,000 worth of golden cement.

From The Well
by
Pastor Jim Hanson
St. John's Lutheran Church

I've been watching the Winter Olympics. Alpine skiing, speed skating, cross-country, hockey, bob-sleds. They are all fun to watch. But for me, the best of all is figure skating. The ice and the skaters.

The movements are so graceful and so strong. The skaters are graded for athletics and artistry. Strength and grace. It takes both to score.

Behind the performers, underneath and supporting, are a host of people. But for most, most of all, a parent or parents. Ever so often when an athlete is doing a program, the camera will pan the crowd and find the face of a mom or dad or both watching. Scott Hamilton, former Olympic skater and one who narrates the program on TV was quick to point out the parents. He spoke of his own mother, how she had encouraged and supported him on his way to the top. She took on an extra job in order to get money for his lessons. How proud she was of his abilities. She really cared. He spoke of other mothers, and of one who drove four hours a day in traffic, two hours to and two hours from practice. Almost every day of the year.

Henley, "Blizzards out sized and out manned but never out played"

The Winters Blizzards met defeat February 14, losing to No. 10 ranked Stamford 55-40. Even in defeat, the Blizzards showed a lot of "class" playing hard despite being out manned and out talented. The Blizzards finished the season 15-15 despite not having a starter over 6'1".

A lot can be said for the 1991-92 Blizzard basketball team. Being very small, being in a very tough district, being out manned many times, the Blizzards fought every battle with a great amount of pride and determination. Down many times, they were never out of a ball game until it was over.

To the seniors, Greg Tamez, Leo Campos, Brandon Boles, Ahmad Griffin and Andy Webb, "Thanks" for your leadership on and off the floor. Never let it be said that anybody could take us lightly.

To the juniors, Josh Bahlman, Kirk Conner, Adrian Albarado, Vennie Reyes and sophomore Wes Hart, "thanks" for your major contributions in the 1991-92 basketball season. Let this be a start for better things to come.

A special "Thanks" to all the parents and supporters too numerous to mention during the 1991-92 season.

"Out sized and Out manned But never out played Need I say more."

Poe's Corner

by Charlsie Poe

While interviewing Becky (Mrs. Elwood) Brown about her trip to South Africa, I noticed that the second day of her itinerary included a sight seeing tour of Pretoria, the Administrative capital of South Africa.

The tour included a visit to Kruger House, a drive through church Square and a visit to the Voortrekker Monument.

"What is the Voortrekker Monument?" I asked. It would take too long to tell you about it. I'll bring you a book of information, Becky said.

From the time of the first settlement of the cape in 1652, there was an increasing degree of dissatisfaction among the colonists concerning the authorities. They kept moving eastward from Cape Town until they reached the Great Fish River. It was there that the white colonists met a black tribe, the Xhosas. In time friction developed because of repeated stock thefts and even murders that were committed by the blacks. The cape government dealt with these problems in a most incompetent manner and this gave rise to more trouble among the colonists on the border. At the beginning of the 19th century the Cape was annexed by Britain. The London Missionary Society began mission work at the cape. From the outset these missionaries adopted a negative attitude toward the colonists. In the course of time these missionaries acquired great political power and influence with the governments of the Cape and in England.

"The situation for the pioneers on the eastern border now became intolerable. In the material field they were faced with a shortage of land, capital, labor, and uncertainty regarding their future. The problems with the Blacks became more serious and the pioneers felt they needed to find a county beyond the reach of the cape government where they could live in peace and freedom.

From 1835 separate groups began to trek into the interior.

These people were called voortrekkers and were mainly of Dutch, German and French descent.

In the Voortrekker Monument the way of life and destinies of the Voortrekkers are depicted in relief on the historical frieze. These scenes bear witness to the price that the Afrikans has had to pay for the right to call South Africa home.

The Monument was built as a tribute to the Voortrekkers who brought civilization to the interior, order and geometrical precision are therefore basic to its design.

The Gate represents the power of Dingane, who sought to block the path of civilization. The Wall of 64 wagons gives symbolic protection to the monument.

The four corner figures form a symbolic guard of honor. Statue of mother and child depict the christianity maintained and developed by the women driving the Great Trek.

Around the top of the Monument is a triangular cornice that symbolizes fertility. The buffalo head defends the monument against onslaughts from without. The buffalo is the most dangerous wild animal in South Africa.

The Ray of Sunlight is a symbol of God's blessing on the work and aspirations of the Voortrekkers. In the upper dome is an opening through which the sun shines.

The floor of the Hall of Heroes is lined with everwidening rings of marble which represents ripples after a stone has been cast into the water. It portrays the spirit of sacrifice that was generated by the Voortrekkers that eventually spread throughout the entire country.

Above the Hall of Heroes is a dome with a large round opening in the middle, and this is overlapped by a second dome. If the lines of this dome were extended they would enclose the entire monument in one immense circle.

WALL OF WAGONS — Becky Brown standing near the Wall of 64 Wagons that depicts symbolic protection of the monument.

Magic Travel reunion held in Ballinger, February 22

More than 500 people attended the Magic Travel reunion held at the high school cafeteria in Ballinger on Saturday, February 22.

The luncheon was hosted by Dean and Lois Smith, assisted by the KRUN Radio staff and travel friends. If the guests desired, they could bring a salad or dessert.

The first Magic Travel tour was in 1977 and five people were present who took this trip. It included Dickie Lloyd of Winters and Smith's father, Dayton Smith.

Charlsie Poe presented Smith with a copy of her latest book, "Booger Red: World Champion Cowboy," in appreciation of his service that enriches the quality of life for all citizens, especially the senior adults.

The Embers Quartet of San Angelo furnished the program of religious and patriotic songs.

Slides were shown of the trips made in 1991 with emphasis on the driving tour of Alaska. It covered eleven thousand miles and included Alberta, British Columbia and the Yukon Territory. Ten people took that "pioneer" trip, they called it, and all ten of them were present at the luncheon.

Thirty-four tours have been planned for this year by Magic Travel. Some of them are in connection with Bank One, Humana Senior Association and the West Texas Branches of Blue Bonnet Savings Banks.

A new outdoor pageant tour will be introduced by the Smiths with all proceeds to benefit the Southwest Bible Institute of San Angelo.

Stuff 'n Such

by Joyce Jones

This past week of spring-like sunshiny weather was really a welcome change from all the rains we had earlier in the year and in December, ...and I guess I spoke to soon, because we have more rain this week. If you read the "Old Farmers Almanac" and you believe what it says, Texas is in for more rain in the months of March, April, May and June, and probably some heavy flooding in May and June.

Spring and Fall are my favorite seasons of the year, because the weather is neither too hot nor too cold. I know it isn't Spring yet, but it's just around the corner and I for one am looking forward to it. However, I don't exactly look forward to the storms that usually occur in Spring. As a child growing up storms never really bothered me, but after I almost lost my life in a freak summer tornado in East Texas in the '70's, I am now terrified of storms.

When summer comes around, it is so hot here in West Texas most of the time, I like to head for the mountains when I can get away from work. And since the mountains of Colorado are too far away, that usually means I try to go to Ruidoso, New Mexico whenever time and money allows. The weather there is ideal in the summer time, it rarely gets above the 80's and at night, it is usually cool enough to wear a sweater or a lightweight jacket. There seems to be a peaceful serenity in the mountains, which takes your mind off of the everyday cares and problems of the world.

I really enjoyed my visit with the Gibbs at Crews. Their home is a warm welcoming home, not unlike the home that I grew up in. It brought back many fond memories to me. Their home is the type of place that you want to go back and visit again and they are two very lovely people. They enjoy life and that's what it's all about.

For people living in the Norton community, Janice Lange will be collecting and reporting the news from that part of the county. So if you have any interesting happenings going on out that way, give Janice a call and let her know.

Well Super Tuesday is almost here and everyone will get a chance to go to the polls and vote for the candidates of their choice. It's a shame that some people who are running for political offices think that they have to run down their opponent in order to get elected. I have a lot more respect for a politician who runs a clean campaign than one who slings mud. The last governor's race was one of the worst cases of mud slinging from both sides of the fence that I have ever seen. And it sure made the state of Texas look bad, to other states, I was in Reno, Nevada at the time and the media out there and in California were really having a heyday with it. If a candidate can not win a race on his or her own qualities and traits, then they shouldn't belittle themselves by slinging mud and being underhanded. When they start slinging mud, they have lost my vote. Election day is coming up on Tuesday, March 10, so go to the polls and vote for whomever you choose, but please vote, your vote does make a difference. If you don't vote, then don't complain when the candidate of your voice doesn't get elected.

Deadline for re-registration of livestock is March 2

Livestock producers are reminded that all livestock brands that have not been re-registered since August 30, 1991, will become null and void after March 2, 1992.

County Clerk Linda Bruchmiller stated that out of the 450 brands that are on record in Runnels County, only about 200 have been re-registered since August 30th. Miss Bruchmiller said that although present owners can still re-register after March 2nd, brands will not be held for the present owner after this date, and therefore, can be registered by anyone.

In order to re-register brands, producers should appear at the County Clerk's Office in the Runnels County Courthouse between the hours of 8:30 A.M.-12:00 noon and 1:00 P.M.-5:00 P.M. Monday through Friday. The fee will be $5.00 per brand, per location on the animal.

Adult assorted books at WPL

Numerous non-fiction books have arrived at Winters Public Library. Here are titles with authors first: Herbert Hoover, "The Yankston Sioux"; Richard Bernstein and Jerome Agel, (two books), "The Supreme Court," "The Presidency"; Denison Wepman, "Desmond Tutu"; Bonia Thauer, "Emily Dickinson"; Tom McGowen, "Chemistry, The Birth of a Science"; Rhoda Levin, "Heart Attack, A Survival Guide For the Cardiac Spouse"; John Bierhorst, "The Mythology of South America"; David Louis, "2201 Fascinating Facts"; Burke Davis, "Jeb Stuart, The Last Cavalier" (Civil War); Judith Belushi, "Samurai Widow"; Scott

Thorson, "Behind The Candela-bra, "My Life With Liberate"; Linda Wolfe, "Wasted, The Preppie Murder"; Susan Jerrers, Ph. D., "Opening Our Hearts To Men"; Theresa Carpenter, "Missing Beauty"; Christina Crawford, "Survivor"; and Nigel Dempster, "Heiress, The Story of Christina Onassis." There's a new novel by Danielle Steele, "Message, From Nam.

As you can see, this is a wide variety of books, for persons of differing tastes. We hope that you will welcome these books, a product of the membership of WPL in the Big Country Library System. Come, taste our goodies.

State spends over four million in 1991 in welfare programs

The state spent a total of $4,579,365 last year for major welfare programs in Runnels County, according to Ray L. Dunavant, Regional Administrator for the Texas Department of Human Services.

"Medical assistance had the biggest impact, with $870,036 spent for families and children and $680,366 for the aged and disabled for hospitals, physicians, laboratory, X-ray and other services. Also, $45,222 was spent for families and children and $203,253 for the aged and disabled in Runnels County for prescribed medicines. Nursing home costs of approximately $1,277,105 were paid for aged and disabled residents. Community Care for Aged and Disabled spent $372,889," Dunavant said.

Food stamps worth $922,216 were issued for the fiscal year which ended August 31, while Aide to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) totaled $208,278. Food stamps are funded entirely by the federal government, while the department determines eligibility of applicants and issues the food coupons.

Between the Bookends

by Melvin Mathis, Friends of the Library

Illustrators contribute, too! To save space we often mention the author and the book only, as new books come in to WPL, or we show some sample books in a given section of the library. But in many cases, notably in children's books, illustrators play a prominent part, too. The older the presumed reader is, the less illustrations usually are present. But even in a very learned book, we welcome pictures of the leading players on the stage. For instance, in 19th century Europe, we search for Queen Victoria, Gladstone and Disraeli in Great Britain; for Mazzini, Garibaldi, and Cavour in Italy; and for Bismarck in what what is now Germany. In this century, as books roll off the presses, we would look for women such as Margaret Thatcher, Indira Gandhi, and Golda Meir when we read of Western Europe, India, and Israel. Perhaps some day "Ma Ferguson" and Ann Richards will be among many women featured in Texas history, as well as Allred, Connally, Clements, White; and other men in the Lone Star State.

Now I would like to focus our attention on children's book illustrators of recent times. WPL has received many kids' books recently, very attractive, and we find such names as these on the cover, along with the names of authors: Mark Wilson, Ilon Wikland, Mary K. Pershall, Manuel Boix, Janet Wentworth, and Derrick Stone.

Mark Wilson did the pictures for "Hello, Barney!" And who was Barney? He was a cockatoo bird! "Adita and The Forest" has pictures by Stone. Amid a riot of color we find the main subject: "Adita the Parrot." "Leroy and the Clock" features a little boy and his grandfather. Wentworth brightened up the words in this one. Manuel Boix illustrated "The Magic Well," a beautiful book. What's it about? Let's not give away all the secret, but just say: "It's about never-never land." Surely you can "read all about it at WPL, 120 N. Main." One more shot at this picture business: Think about your family Bible or a big one on the pulpit. It's likely to have Moses in the Bulrushes, Adam and Eve leaving the Garden, crestfallen; Moses and the Burning Bush; Christ at Christmas and around Easter; Paul speaking on Mars Hill in Athens. Sometimes one will have the Beatitudes, the Ten Commandments, or Samson as he pulls down the pillars in a palace. Some scenes may be startling; many are familiar. They all tend to light up the text. I have never believed that "A picture is worth a thousand words"—but they really help. Occasionally one author is also an artist—but more likely, these talents differ—just as those of use who write are not always the best at "fixing things up." Let us be thankful that every needful task meets its master in someone. Keep looking pretty; someone may take your picture!

Pruning your fruit trees

I am sure some homeowners have already pruned their trees, but the ideal time to prune is just prior to budbreak. The big key to pruning is to have a purpose in mind before beginning the operation. Early in life, trees are pruned in order to shape or train them to develop a strong frame-work for production in later years. Later pruning is aimed at reducing fruit load and maintaining adequate shoots for next year's crop. Unpruned trees produce too many fruits which not only break limbs, but also produce ultra-small fruit. However, unpruned trees fruit sooner than pruned trees. Still, there is no one system for pruning trees. Pruning will be dictated by geographical location, soil depth, spacing, variety, irrigation capability, and management program. For example, trees on shallow soil must be pruned harder than trees on deep, fertile soil. Irrigated trees can carry more fruit than non-irrigated trees and so on. For example, the goal is to produce a minimum to two bushels of 2 1/2 inch plus peaches per tree from peach trees. For additional information on pruning fruit trees, you may call the Runnels County Texas Agricultural Extension Service office.

Dormant oil for trees

The prime time to apply dormant oil to fruit trees, nut trees and various landscape trees is now. Scale insects are primary target of the oil spray. Scale are tiny sucking insects that can severely injure or kill branches or entire trees. They attach themselves to twigs, limbs, and major branches with smooth bark. Each insect seals itself under a protective covering, visible as scaly crusts. Crusts that are dull, grayish white indicate San Jose scale, the most common scale on fruit trees. Snow white crusts indicate peach scale, while those that are dull brown indicate other types of scale.

Scale insects are especially serious in peaches, plums and other stone fruits, as well as apples and pears. Numerous ornamental trees and shrubs also are attacked. Serious scale infestations also have been noted on silver maple. Dormant-oil sprays also are applied to kill overwintering eggs of various insects and mites. Phylloxera eggs are a primary target on pecan trees. The dormant oil spray can be applied anytime when the tree is fully dormant and before it has leafed out or begun to bloom. Late winter is better because the insects weaken through the cold months and become more vulnerable. Trees should be sprayed when the temperature is between 50 and 80 degrees and when no hard freezes are expected within the next few days. The dormant oil shocks the tree's system and a freeze is a further upset. For the best results, an insecticide should be mixed with the oil, following label directions. Good spray coverage is important since it's the oil film that suffocates the scale. Air sprayers and other low-volume sprayers are not as good as handgun applicators, although air sprayers will do the job if care is taken to endure good coverage. Do not overapply dormant oil, because that could injure a tree. Heavy scale infestations may require more than one dormant oil application for eradication. If a second oil spray is applied, wait at least three weeks after the first spray or until after heavy rains have fallen. Oil-related tree injuries sometimes occur because of poor mixing in the spray tank. The spray tank should be agitated well immediately before and during spraying.
