Frog Jaw, '34 Ford, playing ring games - The Wingate Class of '42 remembers

The 1942 graduating class of Wingate High School will be celebrating their 50th reunion on Saturday, June 6. Hosting the celebration will be A. J. and Ludie Dean of Wingate.

The class of 1942, with eighteen members, was the largest class to graduate from Wingate High School. Graduates have met for a reunion every year since graduation and look forward to this year's gathering.

Mr. Pat Shields of Abilene supplied a brief history of his class. He was quick to reminisce about how much fun his class has always had. "This class had more fun than any other class in Wingate," said Shields. There were always lots of parties at homes where everyone played "ring" games such as "Knockin' for Love." Shields said that if no-body planned a party then the kids just gave a "storm" party where they all ganged together and "stormed" somebody's house, unplanned.

There were many dances at "Forty" Bailey's cafe in Wingate. Many Saturday nights were spent in Winters where everyone danced at Campbell's Cafe or else attended a movie at the State Theatre or the Queen Theatre. Shields said the fellows took their dates to the State because it showed the kind of movies a date would like. The Queen Theatre was a favorite hangout for kids who wanted to see a good ol' shoot 'em up Western.

"I remember coming out of the State Theatre and hearing that Pearl Harbor had been bombed," said Shields.

Most all the kids worked before and after school, mainly in farming. School would be turned out for about six weeks for cotton picking season so all the kids could help on the family farms.

Transportation consisted of riding horses to and from school for many students for several years. The school eventually acquired two buses - one went to Pea Ridge and Wilmett and the other went to Grassbur and Frog

OIL BUSINESS . . .

By Reg Boles ©1992

It is Oil Patch Basics time, again, and this time we talk about a very common procedure in the oil patch: fracture stimulation treatments.

And, although the treatments are common in the oil business, the general public (and some in the oil patch, even) may understand very little about the processes involved. Those that do know something about it may have some misconceptions that we can clear up here, too.

To start, we will review just a little 'bit'.

Stimulating a well is the term for some type of procedure that will enhance the productivity of a well above its 'natural' post-completion capacity. But, 'natural' does not mean that the well does not have some artificial blockage or some other impediment to production—it just means the well has not been stimulated.

Artificial impediments are usually created in the course of drilling or casing of a new well. It can be a reaction between the formation fluids and cement or drilling mud or oxygen, etc.

Techniques such as acidizing and flushes work to eliminate these man-made problems to increase a well's productivity to a level that is more indicative of the reservoir encountered in the completion without some unnatural blockage.

More advanced stimulation techniques go beyond removing the simple blockages created by drilling and completion activities. Gelled fluids and acids, nitro-glycerin, underreaming, and fracturing are examples of these more advanced stimulation procedures.

Fracture treatments involve creating a crack in the reservoir rock and propping it open by cramming something (usually sand) in the crack before it closes. By creating this crack, it greatly increases the ability of the formation to produce fluid into the wellbore.

The crack is created by pumping viscous (gooey) fluids into the rock at sufficient pressure to open a crack. The sand (also called proppant) is mixed with the viscous fluids (also called gel) as it is pumped in the well at the surface.

A fracture treatment operation can involve a large array of equipment and manpower. There are pump trucks, sand trucks, gel trucks, mixers, high pressure lines, monitoring equipment and experts to run and monitor each piece of machinery.

The monitoring van is set up to see the equipment and the well through a viewing window and is electronically attached to flow meters and pressure gauges placed at strategic points in the operation. The gel truck and sand trucks are usually placed side-by-side, while the mixer is between the trucks and the well. The pump truck is placed so as to be able to draw from the gel and sand and mixer and pump down the well.

There are places to redirect flow if a line breaks and safety valves to shut things down in case of emergency. Everything is double checked for safety and proper set-up by crews that take several hours to drive to the location, prepare the equipment, and pump the job.

Once the job gets underway, wellhead pressure and flow rate are closely watched to achieve the best combination of the two. The pressure must be sufficient to fracture the formation, and the rate should be properly selected to provide good carrying qualities for the sand and any other additives that might be added. Since wellhead pressure is somewhat dependent on pump rate and downhole pressure (the actual pressure working to create the fracture in the rock) must be constantly calculated based on friction effects and hydrostatic effects, everyone must be alert and ready to make split-second decisions to get a desired result.

As the job progresses, the sand concentration is stepped-up (because the fracture is bigger near the wellbore and the last part of the pumped fluid will be in that bigger part of the fracture), and decisions must be made as the sand concentration is stepped-up based on extensive pre-planning and design. Each increase in sand concentration affects downhole pressure and flow rates, so the effects must be calculated and adjusted as needed.

If the job is not designed properly, or a bad decision is made during the job, or something unexpected occurs, then the most dreaded end to a fracture job can occur—a screen-out.

A screen-out is when the fluid being pumped can no longer properly carry the sand down the tubing (or casing in some instances) and into the formation. This can be the result of too-thin gel, too much sand concentration, or just very tight and resistant rock. (There are other causes that are just too complicated to go into in this space.)

In any event, the tubing and surface lines become clogged with sand until they are completely stopped-up. That is bad news, because it can be very difficult to clean-up. A screen-out may result in the loss of an entire string of tubing or even the wellbore itself.

That is the reason a frac job must be properly designed through pre-planning, it must be carried-out properly, and everyone on location must be alert for signals the well is sending about a possible screen-out. There is a lot at stake.

That's all for this time—it ran a little long, so I am in the dog house with the editor. Hope to see you next time.

From The Well

by
Pastor Jim Hanson
St. John's Lutheran Church

Monday was Memorial Day. A day to remember. Soldiers, sailors, marines, air force men and women who died in the service of our country. Who gave their lives that we might live.

It started, the holiday that is, after the Civil War. Some kind woman, seeing some untended graves of soldiers, decided to decorate the graves with flowers. And before long, our nation had a holy day, Memorial Day.

When I was a boy, Memorial Day was big. Right after breakfast my dad would give each of us a "buddy poppy," made by the Disabled Veterans and sold on the streets the week before by the Auxiliary. And just before 10 a.m., we'd go down town for the parade. First of all, the color guard, usually a member of each branch of the service. Then the band, playing patriotic tunes. "The Stars and Stripes Forever" was my favorite. Then the other marching units. And then we would go to the cemetery. Usually there was a speaker who would encourage us to remember, and to be good citizens. Then there were readings, The Order of the Day, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address, "In Flander's Field," and others. Then they would decorate a special memorial stone, dedicated to the memory of the departed veterans. Each unit would place a wreath of flowers there. And then the firing of the salute. "Ready." "Aim." "Fire." The noise of six or more rifles reminded us of how these folks died.

Then "Taps" played by a bugle. Solemn. Serious. And then the boys, my age, and me, running to where the guns had been fired, looking for the empty cartridges. If you found one, it was a prize. And then a picnic in the park.

Time has eroded Memorial Day. There aren't many parades, or marching units any more. When do we take time to remember, to sing "My Country 'tis of Thee," and "The Star Spangled Banner?" Rudyard Kipling put it well in a poem "Lord God of Hosts, Be with us yet. Lest we forget. Lest we forget." If you, like me, forget, take some time, even now to remember. Name them, the ones you knew. And give thanks to Him who never forgets us.

If enough of us start remembering and not forgetting, maybe Memorial Day will come back. And with it, some of the prayers for and love of country that our country so desperately needs.

Spirit Filled Happenings

By Jan Thompson
Guiding Light Spirit Filled Baptist Church

Isa. 55:8-9 gives us a reason why it is sometimes hard to follow the way of God. "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

It is hard sometimes to humble ourselves under a way that we can not understand. Often we cannot really grasp the reason behind it. We cannot even begin to fathom why we should not do this or go there, why this is wrong, or why God's Word says this or that. "MY WAYS," God said, "are higher than your ways."

Neighbor, God never intended you or me to know and understand all the reasoning behind His moves. He only wants us to learn and accept them. This is God's will, and we are to accept it.

Many times we cannot understand it, we cannot explain it, and we cannot reason it out; we only know it is His will. It is in His Word, and therefore we stand on it. Pastors have to preach it, parents have to teach it, and Sunday School teachers have to instruct it to the children. Why? Because God said so. Why do we have to do this? Why do we have to pray? Because God wants us to.

When was the last time God stopped down your way and ask your opinion about something? I have many times given Him my opinion, how I felt things ought to be; but He said very soft and sweet, "My thoughts are not your thoughts. My ways are not your ways."

Sometimes it is difficult for us to bring ourselves to do His will when we think we know the answers. Sometimes we think ourselves quite wise. We have studied the situation out, and we feel that we have it in control. Therefore at times it is hard for us to bring our thoughts down and submit to divine sovereignty of God in our lives, yet we must do it. God made it that way so that no flesh should ever cause to glory in His presence.

Make your way as others are doing, come worship with us at: Guiding Light Spirit Filled Baptist Church, 1017 N. Cryer here in Winters, with Pastor W. Lindsey Thompson and church family.

Pioneer Church of God News

by Dixie Leverett

While thinking about school ending and summer vacation beginning reminded me of how life was when I was a child. School ending always brought both joy and dread for us. We had to pick cotton and do other farm chores so we dreaded that but also it meant many long lazy hours of playing and fishing in the creek behind our home. We'd get us an old fruit jar, poke holes in the lid and go catch grasshoppers or dig worms for bait. The we'd grab our old cane pole and off we'd go barefooted to the creek. We also played town, we'd use the hoe and make roads all over the yard and around the roots of the trees and we'd make our houses and garages. We didn't need TV, VCR tapes or road trips to keep us from being bored. Summer meant not wearing shoes or getting dressed up except on Sunday. Church was a special part of our life and Vacation Bible School was a break, a time of joy and learning. How simple life was. Now our children are afraid to go barefooted, worms and grasshoppers are out and they are told all things are hazardous to their health and everyone has allergies. You know God is the same today as he was when I was a child, (the world has changed). God can take care of our children, barefooted or in shoes. He can heal allergies-God can do all things. Maybe we should relax and let our children be children, teach them the real values. Nothing is going to happen in your life that you and God can't handle together. Praise God. Psm. 24:1 "The earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein."

Frog Jaw, Class of '42 - continued

One day, however, continued to be set aside for hooky each year. Every April 1st students went swimming down at the Hensley swimming hole, no matter how cold the water. Some discretion had to be used because the boys preferred to go skinny-dippin'.

Because the boys in the class of '42 outnumbered the girls, the boys always tried to vote down whatever the girls wanted to do. The class officers were always boys. The only time the boys didn't win their vote was when they tried to declare the class motto to be "do unto others before they have time to do unto you", and the class colors as "muck-elledunn". After a minor but effective protest, the girls succeeded in changing the class motto to "Our future lies within ourselves" and the class colors to American beauty red and gold.

Valedictorian for the class of 1942 was Ora Lee (Hancock) Dean and Salutatorian was Eudean Foster.

The senior history, written by Ora Lee Hancock, reflected such events as the Carnival Queen being selected from the senior class, the senior play, "Hobgoblin House", the junior-senior banquet, football games, and helping the Red Cross and purchasing Defense bonds and stamps "to aid in the defense of our country."

One especially humorous event occurred during a football game at Merton when the Wingate team was lacking one player on their eleven-man squad. To avoid defaulting the game, the other players "recruited" W. T. Howard who had come to the game as a spectator and had never played football in his life. Wingate won the game.

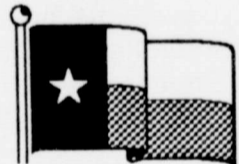

After graduation, Mr. Shields enjoyed a short career in the restaurant business. He, along with fellow classmate, E. J. Bishop, were the proud owners and operators of a cafe in Wingate called The Green Fly for about a year and a half.

Mr. Shields enjoyed a 35-year career with the Texas Highway Department as an engineer. He is now retired and lives in Abilene.

So with the passing of time and lives, the Class of '42 will gather once again to remember and reflect the good ol' days at Wingate High School.

Poe's Corner

by Charlsie Poe

ABOARD AND NOT OVERBOARD—Charlsie Poe on the Greek ship Apollo XI, conducting a safety drill intact with life jacket.

Traveling the Corinth Canal

We have been studying about Paul in Sunday School and, in one quarterly, was a picture of the Corinth Canal. This reminded me of my trip to Europe and the Holy Land with a tour group in 1979. I had some good pictures of the tour down the canal, if they could just be located.

True to my 'pack rat' instincts, the photographs were found stored in the basement.

After a tour of Rome, we checked out of the Beverly Hills Hotel immediately after lunch on Saturday. We boarded our special air-conditioned motor coaches which took us across the picturesque Italian countryside to the port city of Aconna on the opposite of the 'boot.' Our chartered Greek ship, Apollo XI, was supposed to be waiting.

Upon arriving at Aconna about dark, we were informed that the ship had been in a heavy storm at sea and was eight hours behind schedule. The buses were required to report back to Rome, so we were directed to a tavern, the only place open, and unloaded.

Imagine 142 people descending upon a place of this nature asking for coffee and soft drinks. Finally, some time after midnight, most of the group had been served and everyone settled down.

Then, church was conducted against a wall of liquor bottles, all shapes and sizes. Our director preached after group singing and a testimony by a witty Irishman.

It is doubtful that the Italians understood what was going on, but they stood at the doors and windows looking on.

Even bars have to close sometime and word came about 3 a.m. that we would have to move out. We began walking toward our ship and were soon allowed to board. It took some time to find luggage and be assigned rooms, but we were in bed by 4:30 a.m.

Is it any wonder that everyone slept through breakfast and had to be awakened for lunch at 1 o'clock? We were off schedule but had a 'get acquainted' time and services on board. Father's Day was recognized in the evening.

We sailed down the Adriatic sea, through the Strait of Oranto for our first port-of-call, Korinthus Greece, in the Ionian Sea. There was time to explore our surroundings and become familiar with the ship and other tour members.

Another rare experience awaited those who were willing to get up at 1:30 a.m. Monday and go on deck to watch the ship enter the Corinth Canal. First, we were required to have a safety drill and learn how to put on a life jacket. I was traveling with Myra Dorsett, Dr. and Mrs. John Griffin. Claire said, if anything happened, she would take her purse with her.

The Corinth Canal is of great importance as it connects the Aegean and Ionian Seas and saves ships many days of travel. It was started before the 18th Century and took several hundred years to build. It is four miles long, 90 feet wide, 200 feet high, and 30 feet deep. As the tug boat led the ship through the canal, it seemed as if the ship would touch land on one or both sides, but the passage was traveled without incident. The walls of the canal are straight up and appear to be chiseled out of solid rock.

At 8 a.m., the ship arrived at Piraeus, a city of 3 1/2 million people and the biggest port in Greece. We departed for Corinth by buses over a beautiful road that was lined with oleanders and eucalyptus trees.

Old Corinth was destroyed by earthquake in 1855 and again in 1938. It has no population - only excavation which goes on all the time at intervals. New Corinth, several miles away, has about 30,000 people.

From Bible history, we know that Corinth was the intellectual capital of the world, while the most wicked city, anywhere. The Epicureans believed that man was born to enjoy life, and they did.

In the old city, we saw the Temple of Apollo and the Bema (judgement) Seat before which Paul confronted Gallio.

We returned to Athens for lunch and spent the afternoon sightseeing at the Acropolis, Mars Hill, and Athens before boarding ship to sail to Dikili, Turkey.

Norton Notes

by Janice Lange

"You can't count your chickens before they hatch, but you can count your dollars before they are spent."

Doyle Lange, Andrew Englert and Brent Mikeska attended the Texas Water Commission hearing in Austin on Wednesday, May 20.

Norton received only a few tenths of rain until early Monday morning, May 25th when nine tenths came. Later on during the day Monday, another 1/2 to 1 inch fell giving the community right at two inches of moisture since May 21st. High winds also came with the storm but no property damage was noticed.

Norton United Methodist Church has had a long history, some 40 plus years. Sunday, May 24th, the doors opened for the final worship service. About 100 former members, friends and former pastors gathered for the final services. A reception followed the services and gave the church members and visitors a chance to reminisce.

Sunday, May 24th, visitors at the Anton Lange's were Fred, Debra, Brooke and Clint Wilde. Randy, Deidra and Logan Ritter were with their grandparents in Norton Thursday and Friday, May 21 and 22. Logan is the only great-grandchild of Leroy and Mildred Burris.
