Construction to begin on US 83 in Winters and US 67 in Ballinger

Highways and Public Transportation has contracted with Reece Albert Construction Company of San Angelo to seat coat U.S. Highway 83 this summer.

Beginning July 14, barricades will be set on US 67 through Ballinger and US 83 through Winters in preparation for the work to be done in those areas, according to Jose E. Morales, P.E., the Texas Department of Transportation.

With all of the bad news in the oil patch, these days, it is easy to overlook the good news.

I want to share with you a few tidbits of information that are on the positive side.

While majors are downsizing, moving out, laying off, etc., certain independent oil companies are prospering.

Parker & Parsley (from 14 employees to 350), Wiser Oil (from West Virginia marginal producer to successful Texas cash machine and international player), and Mitchell Energy (snapping up discarded properties sold by majors and making them impact properties) are just some examples of those taking 'lemons and making lemondade' with today's oil field economic environment.

Horizontal drilling technology continues to improve, as focus of its use widens from South Texas to the rest of the world.

Alternative Minimum Tax relief is on its way for independent oil producers.

Charles Kuralt, on the CBS News, chronicles the tough times of the oil patch and the hundreds of thousands of lost jobs, and states, emphatically, that those who supported punitive tax measure against the oil patch were WRONG and are, at least in part, responsible for the damage done to the domestic industry. Finally, someone notices.

Oil prices have been above $20/ bbl for two months, and gas prices are starting to show surprising strength for the summer.

Saudi Arabia doesn't appear to be ready to flood the market to keep market share, and allows prices to remain stable.

American oil folks are leading the way in Russia, and their families and the people with whom they do business stand to benefit.

gress ready to pass National Energy Strategy that ignores oil...'. About time that someone noticed that.

The rig count is up instead of down for a change, and a strong fall and early winter is likely if oil prices stay above $20.

Computers, lean staffs, and sheer determination are allowing some independents to make fools of majors who have been in such a rush to sell domestic properties. It seems the independents are able to find, produce and sell oil from 'worthless' properties, and some are becoming financially independent doing just what the majors have given up on.

Tool companies continue to give out pin-up girl bathing suit calendars. Thank goodness someone has their priorities straight in these tough times.

No matter how attractive the rest of the world is for exploration and locating new oil and gas, the leaders in finding, developing, evaluating that resource are right here in the United States. As a matter of fact, most of them are right here in Texas. And, no matter how attractive the prospects are in Timbuktustan, Texans usually end up right back where they came from, turning their consulting fees and profits into new business opportunities right here.

We were standing on the front steps of a big church up north. The wedding was over. The guests were downstairs eating cake and drinking coffee. The groomsmen were decorating the car. One was writing on the windshield, in big letters, with white shoe polish, these words, "Just Married." We were watching.

My friend turned to me and said, "We do it all wrong. We shouldn't have the big party when people get married. 'Just married' is no big deal! What we really should do is wait until the couple has been married for twenty or thirty years. Then we should have a big party for them. And write, in big letters, on the windshield still married!" That would be really worth celebrating!

Still married! That's what anniversaries are all about. Living together as husband and wife. Keeping the promise. For years and Early this summer my wife and I attended a big celebration. A fiftieth wedding anniversary. Earlier this summer we had attended a seventieth wedding anniversary. That was so beautiful, a family time. We were glad to be part of it. But this one was a big one. And the first part took place in a church. A beautiful church with a tall steeple, rising up over the prairie and pointing to the sky. Right in the middle of the mass the husband and the wife renewed their vows, repeated their promise. "To have and to hold, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health, to love and to cherish, till death us do part, according to God's holy ordinance." Hearing them say those words touched a deep part in my soul. It was beautiful. Sacred. I felt like we were standing on holy ground. And we were.

After the mass there was a big reception at the Parish Hall. And a big meal. And a dance. As we were driving home I remembered my conversation with my friend up north many years ago. I wished I had brought some white shoe polish. It would have been fun to sneak over to their car and write on the windshield, "Still Married." For indeed, it was worth celebrating!

Spirit Filled Happenings

By Jan Thompson Guiding Light Spirit Filled Baptist Church

II Cor. 12:9 states that Christ's strength is made perfect in our weakness. Paul taught that the grace of God was in Christ. He said, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." We read that For more information call 754- in Philippians 4:13. All things take in a large field.

Paul said in verse 19, "But my God shall supply all your needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus." People are fearful of this circumstance and that circumstance. Why? Anyone is afraid if he does not have what it takes to face a situation, and the devil has sold us on the idea that we do not have grace.

You would think it was something that we got by the pound, like cheese. No! it is through Christ within the heart and life. In Eph. 3:16 Paul wrote, "That He would grant you, according to the riches of His glory, to be strengthened with might by His Spirit in the inner man." Christ's Spirit in the inner man is your strength and grace. You do not need to pray for it; you have it. I am not taking away any glory of the Holy Ghost, for He is not to get any glory anyway. We read in John 16:13-14: "Howbeit when He, the Spirit of truth, is come...He shall not speak of Himself; but... He shall glorify me..." Did you ever hear so much preaching about exalting the Holy Ghost? That my friend is false preaching. When the Holy Ghost comes, He will not exalt Himself, but He will speak of Christ.

Oh, how minds have been corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ! After people were born again, had Christ, had the power of Christ in their lives, were able to quit old things and all things had become new, and had the joy of salvation, then tradition taught them, "You are not sufficient yet. You must have another part of the Godhead move in." Therefore, people are seeking and seeking, and as long as they are seeking, they will never be sufficient. Remember our sufficiency is in Christ.

When Jesus spoke to Paul and said, "My grace is sufficient," it is just the same as your giving your child $100.00 to take a trip, and then he/she comes around and says, "Dad, give me $5 or $10 extra," and you say, "What I have given you is sufficient." This is what Christ said to Paul: "Paul what your asking of me something more. What I have given you is sufficient; I have given you My strength." Christ in you is sufficient.

You have a standing invitation to be with us in worhip services and Sunday School. Sunday at 9:45 and 11 a.m. and evening at 6 p.m. Wednesdays at 7 p.m. for Bible study. The pastor, W. Lindsey Thompson at Guiding Light Spirit Filled Baptist Church, Winters, The Winters Enterprise, Winters, Texas, Thursday, July 16, 1992 3

When Grandma came home the next day, she announced we had a baby sister - Cassie and I were glad. Clyde was a stinker to us. We rushed over to touch her. The baby opened her mouth, yawned and returned to sleep. Cassie and I thought she looked just like a big doll. We wanted to pick her up and play with her but Momma said, "No, she is much too fragile."

I was ten years old when Lola was born. By the time she got to the third grade, I was a beginning school teacher. She was in my third grade class. She had difficulty with arithmetic and often came to tears. But with a big sister's love and extra help with homework, her grades improved.

Papa made headlines one day by rescuing a school teacher after a flood. She and a colleague were on their way home late in the afternoon. They lived at the foot of Mount Radziminski which was one half mile north of Mountain Park.

The women always walked home on the railroad. It had poured down rain all day and water could be heard swishing and rushing everywhere. When the teachers got about half way home, they had to cross a railroad trestle which spanned a wide revine. It was brim full of water that day and the water splashed against the railroad ties. One teacher walked between the rails and the other walked the ends of the cross slipped, fell, and caught the rail.

While living in Mountain Park, The other teacher grabbed her by the arms and held on. Both screamed for help. Papa, Momma, sister Cassie and I were coming a short distance behind them as we had been out viewing the high flood waters. Papa ran to their aid. When he reached the trestle, he lifted the desperate teacher back on the railroad track and assisted them both across the trestle. Momma, Cassie and I saw him get two of the biggest hugs of gratitude anyone could possibly receive.

The next day the teachers returned to school and reported the incident. In a few days we read about it in the local newspaper under the heading Will Phillips, The Town Hero.

Mountain Park is where we four grew up and received the knowledge to carry responsibilities and store up many enduring memories. We recalled the sound of churchbells, voices of the church choirs and resounding Amens. But more often the noise of the school bell and the shouts of children playing on the school ground rang in our ears. There was the clang, clang of the blacksmith's hammer and rasping saws while the town had growing pains; the lonesome whistle of trains, and the gaggle of geese flying in "v" shapes across the

We heard the sound of cotton seed rattling on tin and knew that the gins were running full speed. We heard the sound of grasshoppers trying to find a new hiding place; the crowing of roosters without which no day dared to start; the squeal of hungry pigs; the heavy plodding of horses feet; the rattle of a chain harness and the sound of Indian tom-toms beating all night long.

We stored memories of sights such as Glenwood Park and its swinging bridge over East Otter ties outside the rail. The swirling Creek. Other sights were waters made her dizzy. She Campbell's Lake and the peach orchard.

TCC working toward a sound

The Texas Conservative Coalition (TCC) was organized in 1985 as a non-partisan group of state legislators for the purpose of analyzing issues affecting the State of Texas and of working toward the development of sound legislation benefiting all Texans.

White grub control in home lawns

Timing of treatment for white grubs in lawns is approaching in the Concho Valley. The white grub is the larval form of an insect commonly known as the May or June beetle.

They live in the soil and feed on grass roots. Their feeding causes the grass to die in irregular-shaped areas, and the grass can be rolled back like carpet.

There are several ways to determine if your lawn has white grubs. You could wait until the irregular-shaped brown areas show up and you roll the sod back like carpet, but this may be too late. The best way is to take a shovel or knife and cut a flap (one square foot of grass) on three sides in the grass and roll the flap back. Examine the roots in the upper four inches of the soil for white

You should make this test in several different places in the lawn during early to mid July. If you find more than 2-3 grubs per square foot of sod, then an insecticide treatment is needed.

The best time to treat for white grubs is when the grub worms are less than one half inch long and located within the top one inch of soil. This should be anywhere from July 5th to July 20th. A second treatment around August 25th may be needed if small grubs (less than one half inch in body length) are present in the top one inch of soil.

Some suggested insecticides for white grub control include: Triumph®, diazinon, Oftanol®, or Dursban®. Triumph® is only available to commercial applicators.

Caution should always be exercised when applying insecticides. Practice pesticide safety and read the label insructions before applying any pesticide.
