OIL BUSINESS . . .

By Reg Boles ©1993

It is Oil Patch Basics time, and we get a chance to talk about what to look for when your local promoter asks you to invest in an oil deal.

Let me start out by saying that the majority of the folks who put together oil and gas deals are honest, law-abiding folk who are just trying to make a living. There are a few bad apples, as well, who will take you for everything they can get by hiding fees and siphoning money. But, most are business people just trying to do what they do best—sell oil and gas deals.

I am going to talk about motivations for the promoter, structures of typical deals, questions to ask before investing, and a few hints on how to spot a swindler. I hope that I will not turn this into a 'bash the promoter' deal, because these people keep the patch working by putting ideas in front of people with capital.

We need to review how the deal is put together, first.

The promoter has gained knowledge and information about a project, be it a drilling well, a workover, a re-entry, or whatever. He or she may be a geologist, engineer, or just someone familiar with the workings of the oil patch and a penchant for selling. The promoter will prepare a package of information and will present it to the prospective investor formally or informally, depending on the situation. The package will probably include a sign-up form, some disclaimers, a very upbeat review of the prospect, and maybe even some maps and graphs. Some packages for more sophisticated investors will include some projections for return on the investment, etc.

As far as the promoter goes, he or she is trying to make a buck, while keeping the deal attractive and competitive. As in any business, if you scalp someone by charging them a high price that kills the return on their money, they are going to be upset, tell others about it, and greatly reduce the promoter's effectiveness as a salesman. So, the price must be right for the risk and reward of the deal, but the tendency is to push it to its highest level to maximize profit.

With these things in mind, lets forge ahead.

Deals are usually structured so that the investor will receive a certain percentage interest in a prospect for a specified amount of money. Very often, the price will be stated in a way that it will be 'x' price per percent. The investor gets the purchased interest in the form of a 'working interest' which, depending on the royalty and override burden, will have an accompanying 'income interest', also called revenue interest among other things.

The income interest is the working interest less the prorated royalty interest and overriding royalty interests (see earlier columns for explanation of these terms or write for more information in care of this publication). For example, a 5 percent working interest might have a 4 percent income interest. The total burden is 20 percent (because 5-4=1 and 1 is 20 percent of 5), and this may be a combination of a 12 percent royalty and an 8 percent override kept by any number of people involved in generating the prospect, including the promoter.

Further, the percentage purchased may only apply to the drilling costs of a prospect well up to the point at which the decision to run casing is made (casing point). If the investor chooses to proceed past this point, then he or she must ante up some more cash to continue to be a part of the deal.

Some questions to ask to gauge potential return on one's investment are not too different than what one might ask about any other type of investment. Such as, what is the projected payout or payback schedule? How much input will I have on later expenditures for the well or wells? Is this a 'turn-key' deal (one price-no variation, regardless of actual cost) or do I get a refund of unspent money? Are the projected costs reasonable for the prospect? What are the tax consequences? What happens in the event of cost overruns? What kind of fees or overrides are the promoter and other middlemen taking before I get my part?

Some of these questions can be asked directly, others require asking a professional third-party (accountant, lawyer, etc.), and others require close scrutiny of the deal and its documentation.

A dishonest promoter can be hard to spot until its too late, but there are some telltale signs to look for. Such as, is the agreement on paper? If not, you better trust this person completely. Are details sketchy and are the documents riddled with hyperbole? Does this guy or gal have any references? Is the promoter and the operator of the prospect left with too many choices as to what to do with your money and not enough direction as to how your return on your investment might find its way back to you?

In my short life, I would say that it takes money to make money in the oil patch if you are on the investment side of the business with no knowledge of the science and finance of oil and gas deals. The investor makes money by beating the odds and investing a lot of straight-up deals with low overhead and no fluff, because many deals are going to miss their mark. Broadening and diversifying the risk is required to get enough successful deals to overcome the unsuccessful ones—it is just the nature of the business.

Winters Library Board of Directors meets, hires new librarian

The Winters Library Board of Directors met at their regular scheduled time, Wednesday, May 19th at 5:00 p.m. Those present were Jean Owen, Noma Eoff, Nina Hale, Ouida Nichols, Mary Margaret Leathers, Genevieve Spill, Bettye Pinkerton and June Blackwood.

The decision was made at this time to change the date of the Library open House and Garage sale, scheduled for June 4th to a date to be announced later. Also the decision was made at this time to close the Library for approximately two weeks, for repairs and due to the fact we do not have a librarian. A new librarian has been chosen. She is Tammy Hall, presently of Comanche, Oklahoma. Tammy is the daughter of Bobbie Sue Jackson of Winters. Tammy and her three children will be moving back to Winters around June 1. We would like to welcome Tammy and family and look forward to working with her at the library. Please feel free to go by and welcome Tammy. The Library Board would like to thank Jean Owen, who has graciously put in many hours the past four weeks. Without her help we would probably have had to close the door until further notice. Bernie Faubion and Ouida Nichols have also put in volunteer time. Thanks goes out to them also.

Donations reported this month were, $600.00 donated by the Woman's Club, $90.00 from the Literary open House and Garage sale, $24.00, and a $12.00 pledge from Susan Conner. Each of these donations is greatly appreciated.

Tentative plans to sell fresh blackberries for $8.00 for a 5 qt. bucket, providing we have enough volunteers to pick them. Bernie Faubion has agreed to donate the proceeds to the library. You may contact any of the Board of Directors if you are interested in purchasing the blackberries, or donating the time to pick them. If you pick your own they will be $2.00 per bucket.

The next meeting is scheduled for June 16th.

Early voting continues through June 1st

Early voting will be conducted through June 1st in the Runnels County Clerk's Office for the June 5th Senate Run-Off Election between Bob Krueger and Kay Bailey Hutchison.

Poe's Corner by Charlsie Poe

Along the Trail

Of the group that recently toured the Indian pictographs at Paint Rock, only four had been to the internationally known historic spot.

Mary Margaret Leathers, Eula Mae Kruse, Elsie Sanders and Charlsie Poe all agreed that this was by far the best tour because of the vivid description and complete history that Kay Campbell gave of the area.

She said that Forest Kirkland, an artist, did the first pictographs (the rock art of Texas). A.T. Jackson, a researcher, was the first person who found the picture writing.

Our guide had also prepared a brochure with pictures and description of the 13 stops along the half mile trail.

Stop 1—a group of characters possibly relating to a hunt. From left to right: a sun or moon followed by crooked lines thought to be throwing sticks or atlatls (used before bow and arrow), two birds, several circles which could be suns, moons or tipi rings. Above these are a number of count marks. Pictographs are thought to have been used in the same manner in which we use words.

Stop 2—The large painting near the top of the bluff is an example of an instrument circle. The Indian used a strip of hide tied to a piece of pigment and made a circle as we would with string and chalk at the black board.

Lower and to the left on another rock is a picture of a buffalo. It is interesting to note the large number of buffalo paintings which appear on the bluff. This indicates that buffalo were abundant in this region.

Stop 3—There are two groups of paintings at this stop. On both of the rocks there are dozens of detailed geometric designs. Possibly the drawings refer to trails or rivers, thereby presenting a map-like meaning. These intricate drawings are made with both black and red pigment.

Stop 4—An impressive design which resembles a boat, possibly the artist's impression of a boat seen along one of the rivers.

Stop 5—The most outstanding drawing at this stop appears to have a fish-like tail. This is thought to be the "Plumed Serpent" which was a diety of Southwestern Indian culture.

Stop 6—From this point four memorable paintings may be viewed - probably the most photographed of all.

Stop 7—This sequence of prominent stars is said to represent the signature of a famous Indian named Asa Havey, a companion of Quanah Parker.

Stop 8—The rectangle with dots across the top is believed to be a mission wall. Two domes of a church project above the wall - each dome has a Christian cross. Early missions in the area were San Clemente and San Saba.

Stop 9—On a small yellow surface near the top of the bluff is seen a buffalo with his tail up. It has been said that buffalo with tails up were running while those with tails down were grazing.

Several more paintings are in the area.

Stop 10—At this stop are seen many red and black counting marks which could be a tallies of days of camping, animals killed or people.

Stop 11—This striking group is one of the best preserved of those at the site. It shows a tomahawk in the lower right, two heart-shaped objects to the left, perhaps representing meat.

Stop 12—On the long yellow rock is the drawing of a horizontal woman. Her position indicates capture. Her hooped skirt identifies her as a white woman. To the left is a shield with crossed lances - a symbol of a war party. Beneath the spear on the left are two scalps.

Stop 13—This is the last large group of paintings on the west end of the site. At the lowest level of paintings is a group of human figures. One of these is a robed picture and the others have an hourglass shape. One of these is inverted, symbolizing death. Other members of the tour group were impressed with the trip. Most of them have lived in the vicinity for many years and wondered why they had never visited the site before. They were Bryan and Marcie Webb, Edna England, Noma Eoff, LaVonda Herrington, Thelma Sneed, Louise Seals, Darlene Sims, Anita Wood, Vivian Foster, Louis Wade, L.B. and Mary Watkins, Lucille Virdin and Dortha Lawrence.

Often we look for treasures afar, only to find them in our own back yard.

Angelita Ochoa has been named Employee of the Month.

She has been employed eight years by Senior Citizen Nursing Center, first in housekeeping then in the laundry. She is married to Elias Ochoa and lives in Lawn. She has four children, Belia, who is married, Elias Jr., 18, Greg who is 12, and Elaine who is 9. The youngest three are involved in baseball, football, basketball and track. by Pastor Jim Hanson St. John's Lutheran Church

It's getting closer. That day in which we are to remember. And so often forget. It seems that Memorial Day and the 4th of July have disappeared, like the friends of my youth. And it's really too bad. A loss of memory, a loss of history, set aside, replaced with "a day off or a day at the lake." I can remember when my children, who were forced to attend with me and Ramona, our local Memorial Day Service at the cemetery in Crookston, Minnesota.

It was a real ritual. Color guards are called to attention. Silence descends. Taps are played. Taps finish. Silence descends again. "Present arms", and "Ready, Aim, Fire." Three times. Each round explodes and echoes. All the vets, men, women, auxiliary stand at attention. Silence returns. The high school band plays "God Bless America", and everyone sings to the brilliant blue sky, with a few billowy white clouds, above the pines that circle the cemetery. Again silence. As the color guards march off, one at a time. The snare drums beat the retreat. It's over. And there aren't many dry eyes in the area.

I made them come with us, the children. The lake was waiting with blue water, motor boats, water skies, food, and friends. They were impatient. And often complained. But, not any more. Now they too hunt up a Memorial Day Service somewhere and bring their children too.

Several years ago our son Timothy, our youngest, arranged for us to attend a Memorial Day Service at Fort Snelling in St. Paul. It is a national cemetery, and my younger brother John is buried there. I hadn't been to the cemetery since the day he was buried.

The ritual was the same. The mode of remembrance that used to be practiced all over America, was the same. Only this time it was different. On all the other occasions we had observed the ritual, there was no one of our family buried there. This time John was.

From deep inside the well spring of my soul, memories started to well up into my mind. Memories of days when we were kids, and the good times we had. The summer we both worked on a construction crew putting a curved roof on a huge auditorium. Our double dating. His graduation from seminary. My marriage when he was my best man. And his marriage, when I as his. And his tragic awful death. And before we left his grave site after the ceremony, I had wept buckets of tears. Remembering is cleansing and purifying and brings into our present, the blessings of the past. I'm so grateful for Memorial Day. And a public celebration of the ritual. This year there will be one at Fairview Cemetery. I plan to be there. It's a ritual. It brings the dead to life. It enriches our present. It reminds us of how blessed we are because others gave of themselves for us. And hopefully, encourages us to give of ourselves for others.

She announced that the club had donated a total of $750.00 during the year to support various organizations from funds received from projects sponsored this year. Also, she stated that the club was the recipient of thirteen awards at the Heart of Texas District Convention of TFWC in March of this year.

Girl Scout Camp suffers severe storm damage

The Heart of Texas Girl Scout Council's Camp Wood Lake, located in Lake Brownwood State Park, was severely damaged in the April 28 wind storm in the area.

Fifteen of the twenty-four platform tents were damaged. A platform tent is used as sleeping quarters for six to eight girls. The tents were not covered by insurance.

In addition to the tents, the insurance company estimated there was $2,000 damage to buildings on the site and several trees were blown down and needed to be removed.

The Heart of Texas Girl Scout Council had just completed readying the campsite for their summer program which is due to start in early June. They are expecting over 300 girls to participate in the summer camping program.

In addition to the summer camping program the Heart of Texas Girl Scout Council uses the campsite for week end camping events and other program events.

150 Brownie Girl Scouts were disappointed when an activity planned for Camp Wood Lake for May 1-2 had to be cancelled due to the damage.

MARK MILLER
INVESTMENT REPRESENTATIVE

Mark Miller, investment representative for Edward D. Jones & Co.,[®] explains Rising Income Strategies

Winters Enterprise: Many retirees are afraid to invest for fear of losing all their retirement money. What do you suggest?

Mark Miller: Retirees who want to achieve proper diversification and rising income are advised to keep a portion of their portfolios in stocks. Some financial advisers recommend 30 percent, and others suggest 40 percent or more. The exact percentage depends on an investor's age and individual circumstances. For retirees seeking to start (or add to) an equity portfolio, our recommended strategy is this:

1. Buy quality.
2. Invest for the long term.
3. Focus on companies that have a history of rising earnings and dividends.

Winters Enterprise: What about Blue-Chip stocks for rising income?

Mark Miller: Blue chips are well-known companies that typically offer products or services that are important or necessary to many people. As a result, blue chips often have a consistent record of growth in earnings and dividends.

The table at the right lists high-quality stocks that have an impressive history of increasing dividends. To create the list, we screened our data base of nearly 12,000 stocks to find the companies that appear likely to stand the test of time in both rising and falling markets. The 21 companies on this list have each recorded consecutive annual increases in sales, earnings and dividends for the past 10 years! In addition, each company carries Standard & Poor's highest quality stock ranking of A+. Although past performance is no guarantee of future success, these companies should be considered by investors seeking high-quality stocks with strong rising-income potential.

Winters Enterprise: OK, Mark, what about Utility Stocks?

Mark Miller: Utility stocks are another popular alternative among investors seeking rising income and diversification. As virtual monopolies, utility companies operate with little competition, and nearly every aspect of their business is regulated by a state utility commission. This combination of limited competition and strict regulation typically results in relatively stable and predictable earnings. In fact, many utility companies can boast that they have paid dividends for 60, 70, even 100 consecutive years. In addition, only three investor-owned utilities have declared bankruptcy in the past 50 years.

Although utility stocks do fluctuate in value, their high dividend yields tend to limit declines during bear markets. Unlike fixed-income investments, utility stocks offer retired investors the power of rising income. Here's how it works: Most utility companies increase dividend payments each year, providing investors with an "annual pay raise." The primary benefit to shareholders is a rising income stream to help pay expenses that increase each year at the rate of inflation.

Winters Enterprise: Which Utilities do you recommend?

Mark Miller: Utilities I like are Southern Company, Central & Southwest, Southwestern Bell, Southern California Edison, Niagra Mohawk, Atlanta Gas, GTE.

Winters Enterprise: Where do the basic Certificates of Deposit rate at the present?

Mark Miller: CD's are very unattractive at this time. People are really looking for good, safe alternatives. Two things my clients are most concerned with are taxes and a rise in income. So we encourage IRA's, annuities, and tax-free investments such as municipal bonds.

Winters Enterprise: How long have you been active in the Winters Area?

Mark Miller: I've been working with clients from Winters since early 1991 and my clientele continues to increase. I see this as a strong sign that folks here are serious about getting the most for their hard-earned dollars. I'm more than happy to talk about retirement planning, IRA's, or comparison investing. Just give me a call. I'm ready & willing to guide folks into an investment plan where dividends can make a significant contribution to the total return of an equity portfolio.

Aviatrix publishes book

MasAir Publications has recently released "All My Downs Have Been Ups" by Nancy Robinson Masters, popular West Texas writer, speaker and airplane pilot.

The 192-page hardcover book is a collection of 29 stories selected from the more than 3,000 Nancy has published during sixteen years as a free-lance writer, plus 29 never before told stories. In addition to stories of unusual and exciting aviation adventures, the book is a candid portrayal of Nancy's childhood in the 1950s with which anyone living in West Texas during those years will readily identify.

According to Mrs. Masters, "My mother had no idea she was raising me to be an airplane pilot—in fact, it was about the last thing in the world she wanted me to be. However, the very things she instilled in me and the experiences of those hard years of drought as a cotton-farmer's daughter set me climbing on course toward becoming a pilot as well as making me the dedicated West Texan I am today."

A variety of careers took Nancy up and away from the family farm in Jones County, but never away from her heritage. Becoming a licensed pilot opened new horizons for her writing skills which she says "began at the age of four with a red crayon on the living room wall."

Nancy is married to veteran aviator Bill Masters. They operate a privately-owned, open to the public airport in the Elmdale Community east of Abilene and raise wheat and livestock.

In addition to her "Ups and Downs" column which appears weekly in the Abilene Reporter-News Nancy is a contributing writer to 26 publications. She is writing consultant for the Texas Education Agency and presents workshops for teachers, schools and industry throughout the U.S.

"This book is the ideal gift for anyone old enough to remember the early '50s, or young enough to need to be told about what it took for us to survive in West Texas during some of the worst of times economically, but the best of times in many other ways," she states. "I am thrilled to say this book is one all ages enjoy reading. I am especially pleased some of the stories have been used by students in this year's UIL prose competitions," she adds.

Why Is Opening Bob's Electric Bill Like Having A Party?

ANSWER: Because every month Bob celebrates the savings on his WTU bill from being a Good Cents homeowner.

A Good Cents home is designed and built to keep your family comfortable and use less energy. That means lower monthly energy bills. WTU works closely with area builders to ensure Good Cents homes are built with energy-saving construction techniques, materials and equipment like the year round electric heat pump.

To find out more details about buying or building a Good Cents home in your area, ask your local builder or call WTU.

BUT I DIDN'T MEAN IT!—From the expressions and body language of onlookers, it would seem that John Paul Belew, to right of net, had spiked the volleyball into the Twilight Zone.

Professional basketball was launched in 1898 by two leagues, the National and the New England. Players in the latter were paid $150 to $225 a month. Both leagues disappeared after two seasons.

Attention:

Winters Little League parents:

We had anticipated having the big field on May 11th, but the school notified us on the 10th that we could not use it. We had backlogged a number of games, so without the big field we are having to play some games at Wingate. This cannot be helped. Because of this our season will run later in the year than we wanted.

We are sorry for any inconvenience this may cause.

Property owners receive 1993 value notices

What should a property owner look for on the notice? "Take special note of the proposed value for 1993," Stewart said. "The notice shows the land's value and any improvement value for the prop-

The Appraisal Review Board, more commonly called "ARB", is an independent panel of citizens responsible for reviewing the appraisal district's values. The ARB also hears and settles protests from property owners who disagree with some action by the appraisal district.

Mr. Stewart emphasized the importance of the notice and the key information that it contains for property owners. "A property owner has the right to appeal to the Runnels Appraisal Review Board on any disagreement with the property's value, exemptions, ownership and other areas" he said.

Gene Stewart, chief appraiser of the district, reminds property owners that the notice of appraised value is not a tax bill. "Please do not pay from this notice," Mr. Stewart said.

Texas property owners have the right to information about changes in their property's value by local appraisal districts. On, May 18, 1993, Runnels County Appraisal District mailed 9,000 Notices of Appraised Value showing the 1993 proposed value.

The sample appraisal notice illustrates key information for a property owner. Property owners are encouraged to contact the appraisal district to discuss any questions.

A property owner can be liable for additional penalties and interest on a tax bill not paid timely. A property owner is responsible for informing the appraisal district of the correct mailing address.

Stewart asks that a property owner look carefully at the legal description and mailing address to be sure that there are no errors. "If the notice contains an old address, please let the appraisal district know. The post office forwards mail to a new address for a short time only, and tax bills do not go out until October," Stewart added.

The appraisal notice also includes current year information on exemptions granted to the property. It provides last year's value, too. The notice will also include "estimated taxes." These estimated taxes are based on the new value. Generally, taxing units set their tax rates in August and September.

The whole difference between construction and creation is exactly this: that a thing constructed can only be loved after it is constructed; but a thing created is loved before it exists.

Chris Dry, driving a 1989 Ford was traveling behind Barnes and came to a stop behind Barnes, waiting for Barnes to turn so he could proceed. Billie Middlebrook, driving a 1988 Chevrolet pickup was traveling behind Dry and due to a distraction, did not see the vehicles stopped ahead of her. Mrs. Middlebrook struck the rear of Dry's vehicle and knocked it forward into Barnes' vehicle. Barnes' vehicle was knocked forward and to the left into the on coming traffic lanes. Barnes was able to cross the north bound lanes and pull into the Lawrence Brothers' parking lot without striking any north bound vehicles. Dry was transported to the North Runnels Hospital by ambulance and was treated and released.
