Blizzards upset Bulldogs 28-22

the Stamford Bulldogs, the Winters Blizzards came out on top 28 to 22 Friday night at Blizzard stadium.

Winters was coming off a hard fought 15-14 upset win over the Anson Tigers and Stamford had just suffered an unexpected defeat by Jim Ned.

Sometimes, it just doesn't pay to try and make a buck.

By Reg Boles ©1993

Follow me back to 1960, when oil was plentiful and cheap at $3.00 per barrel. U.S. domestic supplies were big enough to provide most if not all of her own needs. But, the warning flags were up as domestic production was declining and imports were getting cheaper and more attractive each day. Soon, imports would be a neces-

The U.S. Government was encouraging oil companies to continue their search for secure sources at home. Alaska was a prime target, albeit unfriendly.

Several dry holes, very expensive dry holes, had been attempted. Most folks had given up hope. But, in the true spirit of oil patch romance, one last well was drilled by an alliance of ARCO and Humble (Exxon). As a matter of fact, the well was not going to be drilled but a drilling rig had already been secured and paid for, so the companies decided to drill their last chance, the Prudhoe Bay State Number 1 in 1967.

The result was, to coin a cliche, history. The well brought in the discovery of the largest American field ever with over 10 billion barrels of reserves. There was only one problem. How do they get the oil to the lower 48?

After considering all of the alternatives, the consortium's engineers determined that a trans-Alaska pipeline to Prince William Sound was the most costeffective and viable route to the market place. The oil would be loaded on tankers in the Sound and shipped to the West Coast of the U.S.

The group of companies, which now include ARCO, Exxon, and British Petroleum, planned on getting the oil to market in five years (by 1972). Unfortunately, the profit of said investment be- after mass at 10 a.m. Thursday the new environmental move- cause it is considered a 'windfall ment, born of the Santa Barbara oil spill in 1969, were successful in delaying the pipeline for 10

A few things happened during that 10-year period.

The Arab Oil Embargo of 1973, the Iranian Oil Embargo of 1978-79, and the oil price increasing 10 times over. All during this period, the oil companies had been accused of engineering the shortage to increase prices.

Funny thing was, that at least three of those oil companies were trying to bring 2 million barrels per day of crude (at least onefourth of the daily U.S. consumption and approximately equal to the daily imports of 1973) to the marketplace but environmentalists weren't about to let them.

Seems those groups were not

Three years of work and dreams, cont.

Outstanding exhibits through the Winters School students 1981 were the Doll Show with three exhibitors and more than 100 dolls. June was Flag Day with the VFW and Auxiliary in charge of the program. Flags, uniforms, insignia and medals were displayed and their meanings discussed. Cowboy equipment was exhibited during "Western Roundup"day. A saddle and other articles were a permanent gift. Seventeen local artists displayed outstanding pictures in August. The September program coincided with the Baldwin School Reunion and brought many visitors. The two-day quilting contest sponsored by the Arts and Crafts Show in October and held at the museum was the highlight of the year. There is definitely a return of interest in the art of quilting. It seem imperative that other quilt bazaars be held.

In June another round of renovation was begun. Maurine Davis said the next priority was the closing and painting of 12 more windows, followed by the preparation and painting of storage space. This work had been delayed because of the inability to stop the roof from leaking.

Illness and surgery plagued museum members early in 1982, but by February everyone had recovered and the year started off on a high note with a luncheon at the Winters State Bank hospitality room. An impressive new plaque entitled "Family Memorials to the Z.I. Hale Museum Foundation" was displayed, and will be a permanent fixture at the museum. For a donation of $200 or more, those wishing to honor loved ones, living or dead, may have their names engraved in gold and added to the list. Approximately 25 names are already listed. The theme of the next open house was "Heritage Family Day."

All efforts to stop the roof from new one replaced it at a cost of $1.170. Mildred Gardner, curator, announced that work on storage space and cataloging of contents would now resume.

Many people have worked at the museum on the numberless tasks but Cecil Stephens has been a faithful and consistent carpenter and receives our grateful thanks.

through the years have been presented to the museum and now reside in a trophy room. A browsing room next door has scrapbooks and other mementoes.

Interesting programs this year have been the Easter Hat Parade and a wedding dress display. The dedication on August 1st climaxes three years of progress.

After the dedication of the museum on August 1, 1982, we began looking with interest at the historic Rock Hotel next door.

When the Rock Hotel became available in May of 1986, the Z.I. Hale museum board felt it would be good to purchase the building and restore it for several reasons: expansion of the museum, a meeting place for civic clubs and other organizations, as well as preserving one of the oldest historical buildings in town - the only one in its original state.

Through the generosity of the entire community and the alumni of Winters High School we were able to raise the $30,000 to purchase the hotel and drummer house within the allotted time of a six month period.

The small drummer house on the west of the property was used by traveling salesmen to show their wares. With a $5,000 grant from the Dodge-Jones Foundation of Abilene, and other gifts, we were able to restore the drummer house and it became a showroom as well as a home for the 1906 horse-drawn hearse that was used by Spill's Funeral Home until it was replaced by a gray motorized carriage. It was passed on to the museum by the John Gardners.

Our museum is maintained principally by volunteer workers. For a while we had one paid worker who kept the museum open on Tuesday afternoons. Later we took advantage of the Green through October 29 Thumb program, sponsored by the leaking proved of no avail and a Young Farmers. At the present we are back to volunteers.

It has been longer coming than we desired, but plans are in the making to start restoration of the hotel in the next few weeks.

Members were busy planning and working for Winters Centennial celebration in 1990, when we received a terrific jolt. The Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. had Trophies and awards representa bandoned its service to Winters ing outstanding achievements of and declared its intentions to pull Hearing that the railroad company was giving away some catrack was removed. But alas, this unfurnished. was not to be.

When the bright red caboose came to rest on the tracks in Abilene our troubles had just begun. You don't move a 54,000 pound caboose, which is 16 feet high and 11 feet wide, every day. Winters House Moving Co. spent the morning lifting the car off the tracks in Abilene and placing wheels underneath it. After a threehour trip to Winters the caboose arrived at 6 p.m. Moving costs amounted to $1,750.

We scrounged gravel and railroad ties. The City of Winters provided machinery and men to build a base for our new addition to the museum complex. It's absurd, but it lifted the spirits of our town considerably. We set to work in earnest to prepare for the upcoming 100th anniversary.

There is a nice shady lawn east of the museum and we needed some picnic tables. John Austin, a WHS freshman, chose as his Eagle Scout service project some tables for the museum.

The project was begun in June and, due to unforseen delays, was not finished until September. One boy's project became a group effort as others assisted with work and materials. The space is for the use of the community under the direction of the museum board.

The Winters Centennial celebration was a huge success and the museum complex of four attractions served as its focal point.

All the Way Big Blue!

I was seated at a banquet table at the Hilton Hotel in College Station. There were about 70 people there, mostly clergy. It was the Minister of the Year Recognition Banquet, which is part of the Town and Country Conference held each year at A & M.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service puts it on. The Texas Council of Churches, Texas Baptist General Convention, Unity of Brethren Church, ADM Enterprises of Temple, and The Progressive Farmer Magazine support it with dollars. It is a good, two day meeting with top notch speakers, work shops, and panel discussions. Many different dominations participate. The primary concern of the conference is to encourage, inform, and strengthen pastors and congregations in rural areas in Texas. The banquet is part of the encouragement honoring eleven clergy, one of whom is "Rural Minister of the Year."

We had eaten a marvelous meal, had some good entertainment. The honorees were being introduced and asked to form in a semi-circle. One of them, the first one introduced, caught my eye. He was small of stature. Red faced. Had a pale blue clergy shirt with a white tab collar. Seemed to be a little out of place. Didn't seem to know quite what to do. I sort of dismissed him as being the candidate who would win.

You can imagine my surprise, when a few minutes later he was introduced as "Minister of the Year." He had done a great deal for the two communities in which he serves, as well as for his congregations. He introduced his family, his wife, two daughters, and a daughter-inlaw. He spoke very deliberately, with a German accent. He spoke of this ministry as a "joy and privilege." He talked of his congregations as if they were the two biggest and best in the world. One of them has 150 in church on Sunday and the other has 51.

He sprinkled his speech with Scripture. He thanked God for lution control amendment to the ministry, quoting another short preacher with a red face who spoke with a Hebrew accent, and in humility wrote to a church in Corinth, "When I came to you, brothers and sisters, I did not come proclaiming legislature to grant a limited ex- the mystery of God to you in lofty words or wisdom...I came to you in emption from local property taxes weakness and in fear and in much trembling...my speech and my proclamation were not the plausible words of wisdom."

Tyson Adami, son of Chuck and Ralene Adami, is a sixth-grader at Wylie Middle School. While playing in a game at Lee Athletic Complex October 2, Tyson found a wad of dollar bills on the field. No identification, nothing else around - just a wad of bills.

He could have kept quiet, pocketed them and no one would have been the wiser - and he would have been "rich."

He quickly tossed the bills to his coach, who gave them to league official Bill McBain. It turns out that someone had indeed reported the loss of the money, and it was returned to its worried, rightful owner. Tyson didn't have time to think; he just reacted. But reactions often

Chapter I Advisory Board meets

Monday, October 18, at 5:30 p.m.. the Chapter-I-Regular Parent Advisory Board met at Winters Elementary Library. The meeting was lead by Terry Wyatt. Elementary principal.

Officers for 1993-94 were elected as follows: President-Dora Martinez, and Secretary-Barbara Wagoner.

Terry Wyatt discussed the evaluation of the Chapter I program for 1992-93. The evaluation showed positive growth in both reading and math. In reading there was an overall 4.1 NCE gain and an overall 1.8 NCE gain in math.

Mr. Wyatt also said that there will be no NAPT test this year. This will cause the evaluation to be different for the current year.

Mary Beth Ahrens compiled the interest survey for the Campus Performance Council that was sent home in the children's report cards. There were 113 responses.

The survey showed the top three informational topics that parents were interested in were "Reading Tips for Your Kids." "Math Tips for Your Kids," and "Discipline". Suggestions were made concerning prospective speakers for parent workshops this

Scouts complete Community Christmas service project

Boy Scout Troop 249 of Winters recently completed a Community Service Project. The troop built three fire rings at Elm Creek Reservoir.

Robert Bedford planned and organized the building of the rings as his Eagle Scout project. The Winters City Council approved the construction of the rings, each of which is five feet in diameter.

The rings are to used by campers to help eliminate a campfire getting out of control.

Volunteers who helped Robert haul rock, dig trenches, mix and pour cement were Heath Watkins, Michael Mostad, Dean Evans, Austin Jobe and Scott Kozelsky.

Scout leaders for the project were Fred Watkins and Mike Kozelsky.

Robert wishes to thank the Winters City Council, City Administrator Aref Hassan, and David Carroll for their help in this project.

He also wants to thank Wendell Lee of Higginbothsm's Lumber and Hardware for the donation of the wooden stakes used to mark the outline of the rings, the City of Winters and Nadine Bedford for the donation of the cement mix.

WHAT KIND OF BYRD? A BALD EAGLE NOW— Varsity Blizzard Johnny Liggins seems to have the cutting edge as he takes more than a little off the top of Coach Robin Byrd. Coach Byrd lost his locks as part of an agreement he made with his football team for a victory over the highly favored Stamford Bulldogs. The Big Blue defeated the Bulldogs last Friday in an exciting battle so Coach Byrd got his new "do" before a full high school assembly on Monday.

is a big win and maybe what we tine in UIL competition at 1 p.m. Angelo State University. need to get over the hump. Our offense and defense played well. The defense did a good job containing Gardner, their tailback. We did a good job not allowing him a chance to break the big play. We had lots of people trying to get to the ball and it paid off.

We did have some breakdowns, but we overcame those mistakes by being aggressive on our special teams. Two punt blocks were very big and one led to the winning score. We had a total team effort on defense. Coach Murphy, Coach Butts and Coach Lipsey did a great job in preparation.

Offensively, we were able to move the ball on the ground and used play action passes effectively. I think the change we made several weeks ago has paid off for us. The key for us now is to continue to improve each week and not to look down the road. We control what happens as far as making the playoffs. As I have said, 'Tough times don't last forever'."

Three Blizzards have received Honorable Mention honors from the Abilene Reporter-News. Robert Silva, Presliano Sanchez and Zane Guy have been recognized for their strong contributions to Friday's upset victory.

With this win, the Blizzards are 2-1-1 in district 7-2A. This puts them in third place behind Hamlin (4-0) and Jim Ned (3-1).

The Blizzards travel to Hawley this Friday to take on the "stick and pick" offense of the Hawley Bearcats. As it happened last year, the Blizzards can gain a playoff spot by winning all their remaining games. The Blizzards' destiny is in their hands.

The 7th grade Breezes lost a at Stamford 16-6.

The Breezes defense played well but made two costly mistakes. On the second play of the game, the Stamford runner got around the corner and ran for a 65 yard touchdown.

Later in the third quarter, the same Bulldog ran around the end, broke three tackles and scored from 29 yards out.

Stamford also converted both for all their support." 2 point tries with passes to a Breezes had trouble adjusting to. Hicks, and Michael Prewit.

Offensively, the Breezes were hard fought battle last Thursday unable to move the ball consistently. The bright spot came in the fourth quarter when Michael Prewit broke loose for a 33 yard touchdown run.

by Laura Dees

The Winters High School Student Council had their regular meeting on Wednesday, October 13 at 6:00 p.m. Angela Bryan, president, presided.

The main topic of discussion was Drug and Alcohol Prevention Week, October 25-29. This coincides with National Red Ribbon Week. Members voted to continue many of the same activities that have been done in the past, plus several new activities that were planned.

It was agreed that each day of the week would have a theme: Monday's theme is "Put a Cap on Drugs" for which students will wear caps; on Tuesday, faculty and students are asked to wear red to show support for the prevention of alcohol and drug use; Wednesday will be "Turn Your Back on Drugs" Day, and students will be wearing their clothes backward; on Thursday students will be asked to wear clothes that don't match in keeping with the LisAnne is currently a member theme "Life and Drugs/Alcohol Don't Match;" Friday has been and Alcohol" Day and everyone will be wearing their wildest socks.

Other activities planned for the same week: the Student Council will conduct a survey of junior

Multiple Peril Crop Insurance By BYRON BAUERLEIN

Runnels County producers who want to participate in the 1993 Disaster Program administered by ASCS must purchase 1994 crop insurance if the 1993 loss for the crop for which the producer is filing is greater than 65 percent of expected production. September 30, 1993, was the sales closing date for Multiple Peril Crop Insurance for small grains but it now has been extended to October 31, 1993.

If it is later determined that crop insurance is not required, it can be cancelled.

Producers cannot avoid the crop insurance requirement by delaying the filing of a request for disaster benefits until after the crop insurance sales closing dates.

Winters Police Beat

The information below is taken from reports on file with the Winters Police Department. Some of the information is provided to police b cases, police have not finished investigating the reports.

Winters Police Department reports received and/or investigated from Sunday, October 10 through Saturday, October 16, 1993. Winters Police Officers:

while responding to a Shots Fired Disturbance call in the early morning hours of October 10 in the 400 block of Jones Street, the officer on duty discovered a 1981 Chevrolet unattended. The car was sitting in the street and upon further inspection, the officer discovered that persons unknown had broken the steering column in an attempt to hot-wire the vehicle. The owner of the vehicle, who lived in the 400 block of Jones, was contacted and advised that the car had been properly parked and that the steering column had not previously been broken. The persons involved in the reported disturbance were not located.

After daylight on the same morning, a 1989 Oldsmobile was discovered missing in the 300 block of E. Pierce Street The owner advised that the vehicle was stolen sometime after 1:30 a.m. The stolen vehicle was later discovered abandoned in Cisco. In addition, an abandoned vehicle was discovered near Bradshaw. Investigators believe that persons unknown drove stolen vehicle #1 to Winters and attempted to steal vehicle #2 in the 400 block of Jones St. When they were unable to steal vehicle #2, they stole vehicle #3 in the 300 block of E. Pierce St. and abandoned vehicle #1 near Bradshaw and drove vehicle #3 to Cisco. At this point, vehicle #3 was abandoned and another vehicle was stolen at Cisco. There are juvenile suspects in the case and the case is still under investigation.

The Education of a Small Town Doc

by Keith Boles

Keith Boles has signed a contract with North Runnels Hospital to practice medicine in Winters once he is through with medical school and residency. At this time, he is a second year medical student at Texas Tech in Lubbock.

Keith Boles

Howdy Winters! I know I said last time that I would talk about the classes I'm taking but I tend to write faster about things that are presently on my mind. I just attended a lunch meeting where a doctor here in Lubbock spoke on "medical marriages." The doctor had great things to say about marriages, but he really made me think about some of the changes I've experienced in the past year or so.

Have you ever noticed that doctors are different? They are always in a hurry. They talk fast. They write fast (and, therefore, messy). They are always serious. They hardly ever smile. I've always wondered if I would become like them. I have noticed a few changes in myself. I am constantly looking at my watch. Time is of the essence, ... all the time. I have estimated that I study on average about 75 hours per week; a little more just before a block of exams and a little less just after. There is so much to do that one has to become extremely proficient at managing time (reread the first sentence of this article). I usually try to be in my room studying by 7:15 every night. I get home from school about 5:30 which gives my wife Lori and I that short amount of time in between to eat supper and visit. And, unfortunately, I find myself looking at my watch even then.

Also at school last year, other students and I would stop in the halls every now and then and shoot the bull. This year, I've noticed that we pass each other in the

we hardly have time to stop and

The speaker brought up the point that there are many doctors who commit suicide. He pointed out that the most common time period for physician suicides is three years after they get out of residency and have established private practice. We, as students, were amazed! Why then? You've got it made! No more school, no more training, no one looking over your shoulder or breathing down your back, not to mention you're finally making pretty good money.

He proceeded to explain that, throughout their training, doctors are molded into goal-oriented people. When you're in high school, your goal is to do good on the SAT so you can get into a good college. Once you're in college, your goal is to have a good GPA and in your junior year, to do well on the MCAT (the medical school entrance exam) all to get into a good medical school. When in medical school, once again the goal is to have good grades and score well on the nationally standardized board exams to get into a good residency. Finally, in residency your goal is to get out and set up your own private practice. A future doctor's whole life becomes setting goals and achieving them.

done with all this? You look up one day in the hospital and there is you would probably rather have a 70 year old doctor down the hall doing the same thing you're doing. There are no more goals to covering physician do the work. It achieve! The rest of your life will may only take twenty minutes to be spent doing the same old thing! repair a broken arm but four or At this point, some doctors give five similar calls can really mess into the misconception that life isn't worth living. Hence, the reason for so many doctor suicides three years out of residency.

Now I would like to share with you my response to this hopeless outlook on life. I am a bit different from your average medical student. Becoming a doctor did not cross my mind until I was 24 years old. I haven't always been driven by medical goals as many of my classmates have been, but I have noticed a small change. After each set of block exams, I am on an incredible high. I've studied halls, say hi and go on about our nonstop the previous two weeks business. We're each so busy that in order to achieve my GOAL (there's that word!) of doing well on my exams. Once I'm done and Ithink I've done fairly well, .. hey!, I've achieved my goal. Life is great! And I can hardly sleep at all the night after tests are done. It's really frustrating because I've usually stayed up very late the preceding two nights and am very tired yet I still can't get to sleep!

But even though it's easy to merely move from one goal to the next, I have found a way to keep my medical goals in perspective. Many doctors have told me that the key to happiness is to maintain balance in your life. They say spend time with your family, keep up a social life, and take time off just to goof around. I wholeheartedly agree!

My priorities are God, family, and career, in that order. Did you catch that? My job as a physician is number 3 on my list. Now this may have some consequences for you folks in Winters because when I come back and set up practice, my priorities will still be the same. Being a small town physician will keep me pretty busy without a doubt. If I'm ever so busy that I'm unable to spend adequate time with my kids, I'm going to take off some time to do so. Occasionally, I might need to call in a physician from out-of-town to cover my emergency room duty; So what is left when you are if your kid breaks his or her arm and I'm your family physician, me come in and fix up your youngster. But I would rather have the up a relaxing weekend at home with my family. This is merely an illustrative example, but I hope you get the picture and I hope you will understand.

> I strongly believe that if I keep my priorities in the proper order, everything else will fall into place. I'm going to try my best to resist becoming that extremely hurried, stone-face doctor that seems to be the norm. Hey, I like to grin as much as the next guy! That's all I have for now. We'll see ya next
