Area cotton crops devastated

New pesticide probably last chance to save cotton crops

Too little, too late may be the case for area farmers battling the beet armyworm which has devastated cotton crops in the last three weeks.

A new chemical, Pirate®, was approved by the Environmental Protection Agency on August 16, to help fight the infestation of beet armyworms. The EPA Section 18 approval allows the chemical to be used only in Tom Green, Concho, Runnels and McCulloch counties. Section 18 is a provision controlled by the EPA which allows Pirate® to be used on acres not yet severely damaged by the voracious pests.

Rick Minzenmeyer, extension entomologist, said the chemical is scheduled to arrive in this area on Thursday, August 24, but only enough Pirate® for 30,000 acres has been allowed by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

However, for many farmers, this newest weapon is just too late.

Minzenmeyer said that the older cotton poses less risks for further treatment than the crops planted in mid to late June.

"The fruit is just too small on this newer crop. The risk (for further treatment) is so great that it's probably futile to try to fight it," said Minzenmeyer. "We are in a very bad situation right now."

Various farm services agencies have estimated the value of cotton crops at risk to be $15 million in Runnels County which has approximately 49,333 acres, $10 million in Concho County with 38,000 acres, $26 million in Tom Green County with 99,299 acres, and $1.585 million in McCulloch County with 7,500 acres.

While no one knows for certain how the beet armyworm infestation occurred, there are two theories.

One says that the insect migrated from South Texas or even drought-stricken Mexico.

The other theory, which Minzenmeyer believes, blames the mild winters of the last several years which allowed the insects to overwinter in the Southern Rolling Plains and begin reproducing without migrating to the region.

Still some farmers wonder if the boll weevil eradication program has contributed to the infestation.

Dr. Tom Fuchs, an extension entomologist, said he does not place the blame on the eradication program.

"This is a weather-related problem," he told the audience at Monday's meeting of cotton producers at the Texas A&M University Research and Extension Center, north of San Angelo.

Although most of the 200,000 acres of planted cotton in the Concho Valley are devastated beyond any hope, producers may be receiving federal aid through a disaster declaration.

Two of the counties — Runnels and Schleicher — have already turned in flash reports to the governor's office. This information will be sent with recommendations that the U.S. Department of Agriculture declare disasters in the separate counties.

Senator Bill Sims of Paint Rock says, "In some of these counties, between 50 and 75 percent of the cotton planted is already heavily infested and any attempts to kill the worms at this time would be saster declaration for the area," continues Sims. "This declaration should help soften the blow these farmers and their communities are facing by providing some low interest financing and other assistance. These designations are difficult to get, and I will keep everyone informed as I get word from the state and federal levels."

For producers who have already lost their crops to the beet armyworm, the only real hope remaining is to get clearance to plow under the stalks in order to kill some of the remaining worms and keep them from reproducing.

The process to get clearance has begun and the two criteria to get permission have been met.

First, the disaster has to be weather-related, and second, farmers must have made an attempt to save their crops.

Minzenmeyer said the final approval for the plow under must

Regular season play begins September 8 when the Big Blue travels to Roscoe.

Why your child brought home a note from school

State law requires written notification to parents of all discipline violations

The State of Texas passed a complete rewrite of the laws which govern education. One of the new sections (37.001B) requires the school to inform the parents in writing of any violation of the student code of conduct. This is new and the school would like to inform parents of this change.

Terry Wyatt, elementary school principal, states that there could be some confusion or over-concern because of this change. "The law was written so that parents would be more aware of any difficulties their children were having in school. We applaud this goal," he says.

"One of the things that could happen is that parents might be overly concerned because of the change. A violation of the student code of conduct includes: being tardy, failing to complete assignments on time, disrupting class, and ranges to more serious offenses like fighting and cheating. We will be informing the parents any time a child violates any of the rules contained in the student code of conduct. This means that parents are going to get a lot more communication from the school.

"Receiving this information can provide for opportunities to have family discussions about school," he continued. "The thing we want to be sure to let the parents know is that children are probably behaving in ways similar to how they did in the past, but that now the school is working harder to inform the parents of each violation.

Wyatt states, "One of the things we are doing is not sending a report home when a young child violates a rule during the process of our teaching the children about the rules. For example, in Kindergarten and First Grade, we teach the children a lot about how to behave on the playground and in the hallways. As we do this the

OIL BUSINESS

By Reg Boles ©1995

It is Oil Patch Basics time, and we are continuing our discussion of life in the oil field.

This time, we are going to delve into the maze of government and regulatory agency rules that have an impact on the business of oil and gas.

In Texas, the Railroad Commission (RRC) is the primary authority that regulates oil and gas activity in the state.

Since the Texas RRC is the "granddaddy" of them all and our primary concern, this column will concentrate primarily on the Texas agency.

From the moment a well is seriously considered for drilling, the RRC is involved.

First, a producer must have identified himself or herself to the RRC by filing a P-5, which is a form requesting notice and approval as a bonafide oil and gas producer in the state of Texas.

In addition, the operator must file a request for water protection requirements from the state. Upon receipt of such, the operator will pledge to meet all guidelines for water protection in a particular area.

Upon receipt and approval of all of these forms, the RRC will issue a drilling permit that is good for one year (or possibly longer in special-ruling cases).

Once the well is drilled, the RRC must be notified of plans to set casing. The RRC will approve or request revision of the procedure to do so.

While drilling, the wellbore must be surveyed for deviation from vertical and strict records of any and all measurements must be kept for possible inspection by the RRC.

The relationship continues if the well is successful. Forms must be filed as to who is buying the oil and the gas from a well.

These procedures are basically the same in any state, although Texas has many regulations that can only be developed through experience, and other states have not necessarily copied them.

The RRC has other functions, such as hearings on disputes, special field rules, etc. They have offices in Austin and at least 10 other cities, each handling a district. In sum, the Texas RRC is the ruling hand in the oil and gas business—you definitely want to stay on their good side.

Next time we are going to talk about reserves and what that really means.

From The Well

by
Pastor Jim Hanson

Last week I wrote about silence. Today I write about "stillness." The opposite of silence is noise. The opposite of stillness is "wiggling," or "jerking," or "jumping around." Stillness is like when my mother picked me up and set me down in a chair and said, "Now, Jim, sit still!"

That was particularly hard for me. For some reason, as a child, I was in perpetual motion. My father called me "wiggly-bottom," which really was a pretty accurate description. It was almost impossible for me to still my body.

But, as I grew older, I discovered that "stillness," along with silence and solitude, is good for the soul. It is important that we bring into our lives, each day, some stillness time. Time when we quiet our bodies, slow down the adrenal flow, and let peace come into our bodies.

The Psalmist wrote, "Be still and know that I am God." It's hard to sense the presence of God when you are always "on the run," always "in a hurry." Carl Jung, the famous psychiatrist once said, "Hurry is not of the devil. It is the devil."

Our bodies need to be stilled. It is good for them to be quiet for a spell during our waking hours. It's not the same as bed rest, but most of the time we don't need bed rest during the day. (Except for when I take my 20 minute "power-nap" soon after lunch. That is no longer an option. It is sheer necessity.)

We do need some time to just sit a spell. And sigh. Sighing goes well with stilling. If you read your New Testament carefully, you will notice that Jesus often sighed. He took a deep breath and let it out slowly. And, then He did the miracle or heavenly deed that needed to be done.

It's that deep breathing that is the secret. It slows us down, it quiets our body when we do it deliberately, and slowly. I can remember so well that Thanksgiving Eve a number of years ago in Northern Minnesota. I was called to the Emergency Room of the hospital. One of our fine young men was in a car-train wreck. When I came into the room, the surgeon was sewing his scalp back together again.

While I was watching and praying, another patient was brought in. A nice little old lady, who had gone to mass early that evening, and had slipped on the icy steps and fallen and broke her hip. The ambulance attendant was with her as she came in.

As she lay on the stretcher, she was in deep pain. Moaning and groaning and crying out, one could not help but feel sorry for her. But what really impressed me was the attendant. He never left her side until the doctor could tend to her. He took her hand, and held it all that time. And he just said to her, over and over, in a soothing voice, "Take a deep breath, and let it out slowly." At first she didn't hear him, but he kept on coaxing her. Before too long she was breathing deeply and slowly, and the cries of pain turned to sighs of relief. He calmed her down by helping her to be still in her body through deep breathing.

When God created man, He breathed into him the breath of life, and man became a living soul. That's what the Book says. Do you suppose that when we breath deeply, thinking of God, our souls become alive again? When Jesus appeared to the disciples on Easter night, the first thing He said to them was, "Peace be with you." And then it says, "He breathed on them and said Receive the Holy Spirit." Another connection? I think so. I believe so. Stilling the body by deep breathing and believing does make a difference deep down in our souls. And, we even get a bonus — our blood pressure is likely to drop to normal, too. God is so good!

DESCENDANTS OF ALEXANDER CAMPBELL MCBETH AND HIS WIFE MARY THOMAS BRAZIL who meet each year to visit and remember their ancestors. Sixty-two people were in attendance for the 1995 McBeth Reunion.

McBeth relatives gather yearly in county of homeplace

Mabel McBeth White of Tuscola, Texas, was the oldest McBeth descendant attending this year's reunion July 15 in Cisco, Texas. McBeth descendants meet each year at this time to visit and remember their ancestors who settled and lived for many years in Eastland County.

Alexander Campbell McBeth and his wife Mary Thomas Brazil came to Eastland County in 1870 from Covington County, Alabama, and lived in Eastland County, Stephens County, and Indian Territory, Oklahoma, before finally settling in Eastland County around Rising Star. Most of the McBeth families remained in Texas with a few moving back to Oklahoma. From their six children — William James, Alex, Dan, Joe, George, and Lizzie — there are over 600 descendants today.

This year, cousins came from Oregon, California, Arkansas, and Texas. The reunion is still held on the third Saturday of July each year. This tradition was started when the first reunion was begun to celebrate the birthday of Joe McBeth who lived in Rising Star. It has since been moved to Cisco, but it is always held on the Saturday nearest his birthday. This year there were 62 people in attendance.

Those in attendance were John McBeth and Justin, Julian, Benjamin, and Samuel McBeth from Bryan; Louise McBeth, Larry McBeth, Sarah McBeth, Amber Thomas and son Justin from Abilene; Laura Thaxton, Eric and Janlyn Thaxton, Hayley Thaxton, Kirk and Kristi Thaxton, Kyle and Kaitlin Thaxton from Abilene; Jani Edwards, Caety and Reagan

Edwards from Lampasas; Polly Hewitt from Copperas Cove; Marie and Abner Pitman from El Cajon, California; Willie Gee McBeth, Glynda McBeth, and Lynda Fulton from Franklin; Lorene and E. Burn Hull from Rotan; Wynell Terry from Roby; Frances and Orville Ribble from Weatherford.

Also attending were Mabel White from Tuscola; La Verne Huffman from Brownwood; Vernard and Alice Bristow, Velda and Wayne Bristow from Big Spring; Jim Bristow from Arlington; Joe Raymond and Lois McBeth, Carol McBeth from Andrews; Lula and Jim Butler from Abilene; Billie Faye Ellison and Carolyn Ellison from Levelland; Michael, Rosemary, and Ashley from Yamhill, Oregon; Harold and Karen McBeth from Plainview; Francis and Mary McBeth from Arkadelphia, Arkansas; Harold, Thelma McBeth, and Travis McBeth from San Marcus, California; Vivian McBeth from Irving; Carlos McBeth from Abilene; Leslie McBeth from Snyder; Vena Hart, Jerry McBeth, and Doris Cozart from Cisco.

CCCS offers tips for college students using credit

College students are the largest identifiable segment of first-time customers for credit card issuers. As a result, Consumer Credit Counseling Service (CCCS) reminds college students about the responsibilities regarding credit.

The college student market attracts an increasing number of credit card issuers every year because students have the reputation of being less risky than the general population. In addition, college students have fewer cards, are least likely to declare bankruptcy, and are very concerned about their credit report. Nine out of ten students say establishing a credit history is their primary reason for applying for a card.

Students also switch cards less often than the general public and tend to remain loyal to the company that issued them their first card.

Marianne Gray, executive director of CCCS, stresses that when used properly, credit can be a tremendous asset. "Students should take advantage of these opportunities to establish a credit history and to practice strong money management techniques," Gray said.

"However, when handled improperly, the resulting debt can become a terrible liability for a student."

CCCS offers the following tips to help students avoid credit problems:

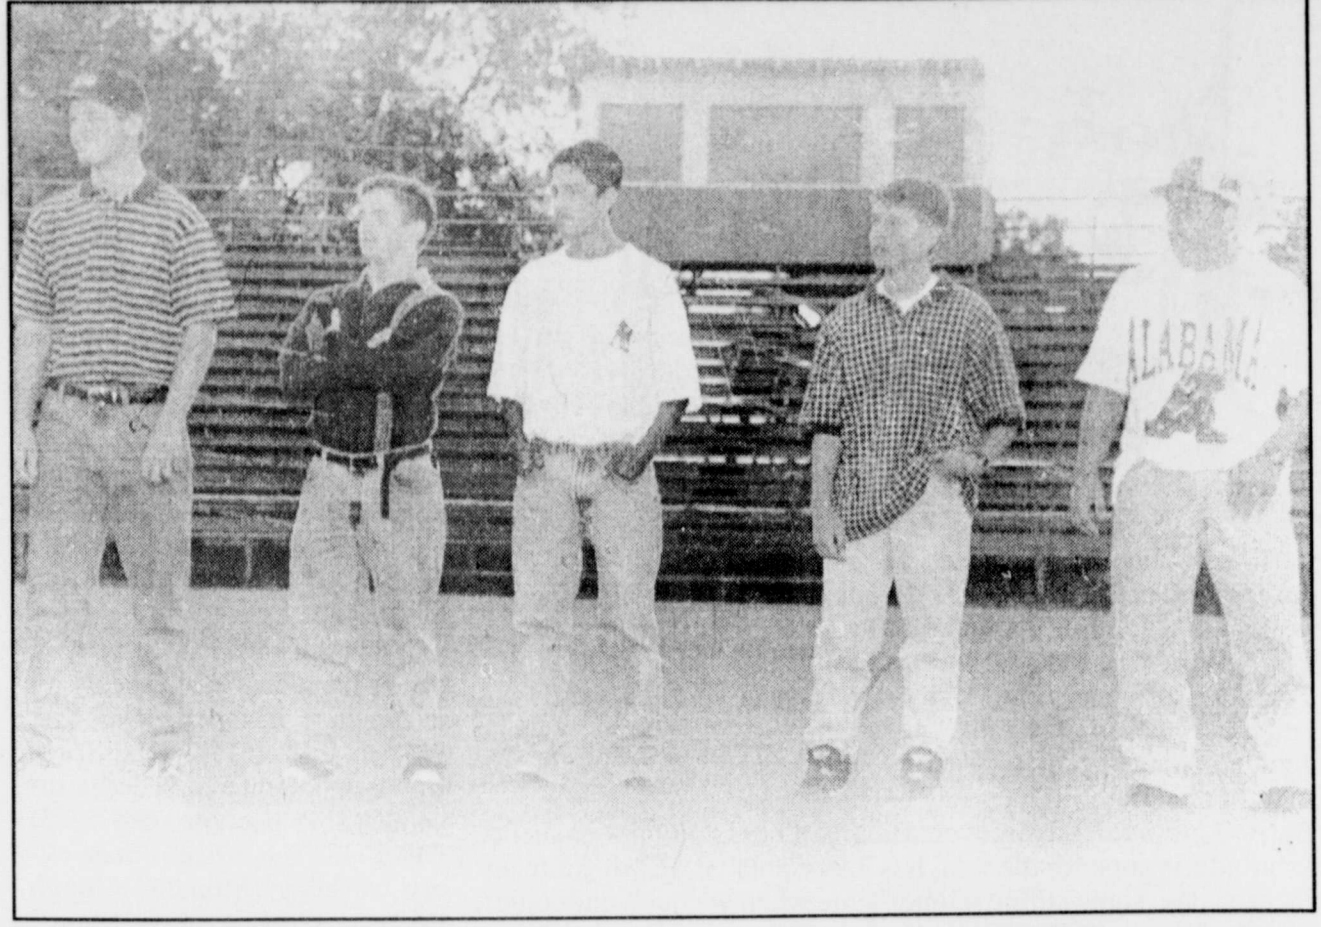

- Before seeking any credit, prepare a spending plan, or budget. How much of your monthly income will go toward paying credit card bills? Monthly debt payments should not exceed 20 percent of your monthly take-home pay or monthly allowance.
- Invest time when shopping for credit and know your options. Look for cards with low interest rates, little or no annual fee, and a reasonable "grace period" to allow "free time" before finance charges begin.
- Monitor your credit line on each card. Pay your bills as soon as you receive them and pay more than the minimum amount due when possible. By not building a large balance, you are avoiding a major debt burden once you finish school.
- When you use credit to pay for an item, write down the amount and subtract it from your funds to ensure you can pay the amount at the end of the month.
- Never lend credit cards to friends or leave cards or receipts lying around where people can easily find them. And never give out a credit card number over the phone.

If you are unable to meet credit card payments:

- Add up your entire debt and know exactly how much you owe. Work with your creditors to develop a plan to repay your debts.
- Call the credit manager, merchant or lender. Explain the situation.
- Discuss your future financial prospects with your lender to work out a plan for repaying the debt and stick to the plan.
- Get the names and phone numbers of the individuals with whom you have talked, follow up your phone conversations with letters confirming what was worked out, and stay in contact with your creditors until the problem is resolved.

If you would like assistance in budgeting or working out repayment plans with creditors, contact Consumer Credit Counseling Service.

To schedule an appointment for counseling, consumers can call toll-free throughout Texas, (800) 374-2227.

children sometimes forget what we have taught them. So if a child forgets and runs in the hallway, this would be an instance where we would not treat the child as though he had broken the student code of conduct," concluded Principal Wyatt.

The school sent Discipline Management Plans home with all students this week. The school is required to have a signed form from each parent indicating that they received the plan. There was a form on the back of each plan to sign and return.

This year the school will be forming a broad based committee under the direction of Superintendent Tommy Lancaster to review and rewrite as necessary the Discipline Management Plan (DMP). State law requires that the Board of Education adopt a DMP before September 1, 1996.

Parents having questions about their students should contact their child's teacher or Mr. Wyatt at the Elementary School, 754-5577; or Mr. Kidwell or Mr. Cathey at the High School, 754-5516.

Compulsory education was first introduced in 1819 in Prussia.

DPS requests form to apply for concealed handgun license

On August 15, 1995, the Department of Public Safety began issuing request cards for a concealed handgun license application.

Demand for these cards has been high. As a convenience for readers and as a means to provide efficient response, DPS has allowed newspapers to reproduce the form.

Once all the blanks have been filled, the form should be mailed to: The Texas Department of Public Safety, CRS/Concealed Handgun Licensing Unit; P.O. Box 15888; Austin, Texas, 78761-5888.

The completed card will be used as a screening tool. Those who appear to qualify for a license will receive the full concealed handgun application packet in the mail after September 1.

After the DPS receives the completed application, the agency will have 90 days to either issue a license or reject the application. Licenses will not become valid, however, until Jan. 1, 1996.

For information on the concealed handgun law, contact 512-706-7293 or 512-706-7294.

End of the trail

History tells us that for many years the government maintained a series of army posts and camps both for the protection of the settlers and as outposts for the stage lines. Old Camp Colorado was one of these army posts, and its establishment marked the beginning of the settlement of Coleman County.

From 1857 to 1861, Camp Colorado was the center of Coleman County's settlements. The buildings were of adobe with shingled roofs and pine plank floors; the lumber, doors, and windows being hauled by ox team from East Texas.

A post office and a telegraph line, along the Wire Road between the camp and army headquarters at San Antonio, gave outside communication. People settled at all the nearby water holes. In 1857, J.C. Mullins, a graduate of Yale University, settled west of the camp and taught school under an elm tree on the post.

The camp was abandoned February 26, 1861, by order of General David E. Twiggs. The men stationed at the camp went into the Confederate service. From 1862 to 1864, a company of Texas Rangers occupied the fort. Two companies were stationed at the camp from 1864 until the end of the war.

In the 1870's, the site of the old camp was purchased by H.H. Sackett, an Englishman who had married the daughter of one of the army officers and had built a home and a store at the camp. The old guard house, built in 1857, was standing in 1947. In 1936, the Texas Centennial Commission erected a replica of the administration building of the camp in the city park of Coleman.

The old guard house of Camp Colorado is the only structure left standing today of all that row of buildings. All the lumber from the houses was carried off piece by piece by the early settlers in building their homes. The guard house was the only one made of stone. It is a small room about ten by twelve, walls eight inches thick. Its one window looks to the north, and its door to the east. This building has been restored in recent years.

On the way to Trickham from Camp Colorado, we see the graves of five pioneers along the roadside. They are covered in cement.

Trickham, the oldest town and first post office in Coleman County, is on Mukewater Creek near the Brown County line. It originated in 1856, when Emory Peters, brother-in-law of John Chisum, operated Chisum's combination store and saloon on the Jinglebob Cattle Trail for the convenience of the trail drivers.

The original name, "Trick-em," was given because of the many pranks of the cowboys, the change in name being made at the time of the petition for a post office. Bill Franks was the first postmaster. Roving bands of Indians disturbed the early settlers, and the cemetery contains graves of at least three persons who were scalped by Indians.

Voss was headquarters for the colonization of the Leaday Ranch and was named for the ranch superintendent who petitioned for the post office. The Red & White Grocery store is still in use. Elm Creek separates Voss and Leaday.

Leaday was first settled in 1861, when Rich Coffey camped on Grape Creek several years before he homesteaded land at the mouth of the Concho River. A house at the Trap Crossing of the Colorado River was used as a general store, saloon, and post office, and was known as the Rich Coffey Post Office.

In 1876, the William H. Day Ranch enclosed the area, and the Coffey rock house became ranch headquarters. When the ranch was cut up into farms, Leaday was laid out as a town in 1904, and named for the ranch owners, Mrs. William H. Day and her husband, J.C.

Lea. In 1946, it was a thriving little town.

The Colorado River authority now owns all this property, and it is covered with water, known as the Stacy Lake and the Ivey Dam. The Rich Coffey rock house has been moved up on the hill and has been restored to its original appearance. It has been awarded a historical marker by the state of Texas.

VFW Post and Auxiliary attend workshop

A workshop was held Saturday, August 18, at the Fort Concho Post #1815 in San Angelo where the District Commander and Jo Blackwell, Auxiliary District 22 President, emphasized the necessity of the women helping the posts members, and the posts and units working together as a team. Several members from the Winters VFW Post and Ladies Auxiliary attended.

A film, "Flying Squadron," challenged each post to the call of duty to serve, preserve, and help such programs and issues as veteran's health, MIA's, homeless vets, legislative services, and to foster patriotism. The film's theme was that each post is the heart and soul of the VFW and the VFW is the sum of all posts working together.

The 1995-96 year for the VFW will focus on Americanism and youth projects.

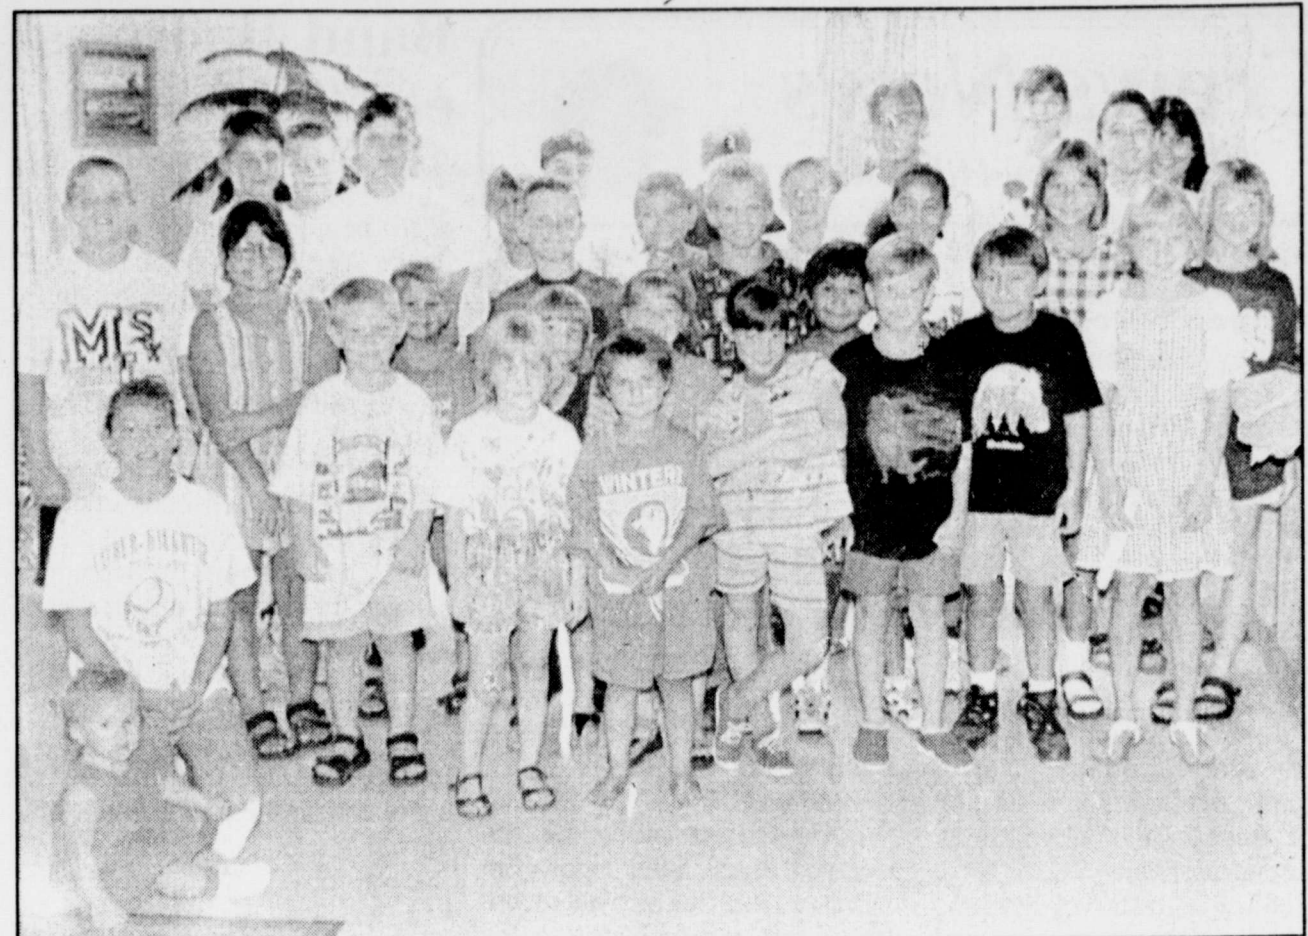

In a separate meeting for the ladies auxiliary, Jo Blackwell urged members to achieve the goals for relief funds, cancer research, and the promotion of Americanism. The importance of keeping good historical records was discussed.

Assembly of God Church to feature Columbian missionaries on Aug. 27

Reverend Bob Millsaps, Assemblies of God missionary to Colombia, will be speaking at Winters Assembly of God, 304 Wood Street, on Sunday, August 27, at 6:00 p.m., according to Reverend Robert Jones, pastor.

A nation of about 35 million people, Colombia is larger than Texas and New Mexico combined. Colombia lies on the northwest coast of South America and is bordered by Panama, Ecuador, Peru, Brazil, and Venezuela. It is a mountainous nation, with three ranges of the Andes running through it.

Bob and Jureen Millsaps have completed their first term to Colombia. Ministering in Cartagena, a prominent city on the northern Caribbean coast, the Millsaps focused on planting new churches in areas without a gospel witness. After a recent 6-month effort, they have seen an exciting new work started in the city. A facility has been purchased and is being remodeled by the national church.

"Nightly crusade services, Kings Castle puppet ministry, dramas, illustrated sermons, mime, preaching, and teaching in open air meetings are just some of the ways God has used to raise up this new time commitment, many others have testified of healing, restoration of family relations, deliverance from alcohol, and have been ministered to in various ways. God has raised up a beautiful new congregation."

Upon their return, Bob and Jureen will be going to Bogota with three additional church planting projects in mind. A fund is being raised to purchase property in this city for permanent facilities. The Millsaps plan to use volunteer building crews from U.S.

churches through the Missions Abroad Placement Service to construct the churches once properties have been selected. "There is nothing as exciting as going into an area where there is no church, and watching as God raises one up," they both emphasize.

The public is invited to attend the Millsaps' missions presentation on August 27 at Winters Assembly of God.

County budget hearing slated September 12

The Runnels County Commissioners met August 15 to present a budget workshop and set the budget hearing for September 12 in the county judge's quarters.

In other business, hospitalization insurance coverage bids and consideration of a payroll deduction insurance plan were tabled.

Commissioners voted to close the east end of Oak Street where it ends after intersecting Hillcrest Avenue, between Lots 12 and 13 of the Hillcrest Addition, Ballinger. All petition requirements had previously been met.

Approval was given to purchase a photocopy machine at a cost of $1,785 for Joyce Weems, J.P. Precinct #2, Winters.

Horizon Well Services, Inc. will be burying a pipeline at two locations in Precinct #2. General Telephone Company will bury cable at a location in Precinct #3.

Judge Murchison voted, breaking a tie between the four commissioners, in favor of rescinding the Commissioners' Court order of September 9, 1986, requiring Court approval prior to hiring full-time county employees.

Orders were passed to audit the County Treasurer's accounts, to accept the County Auditor's report, and to approve all current accounts.

Pest Management News

by Richard Minzenmayer Extension Agent-Entomology (PM) Runnels-Tom Green Counties

General Situation—Folks, we are in a very bad situation right now. I bet we need to try and maintain a positive attitude. Thinking positive will help us through this situation. Negative comments about what may or may not have caused this disaster is not helping matters and will actually not help in finding a solution to the problem.

Dr. Tom Fuchs and I have both been misquoted and believe that there are a number of factors that have contributed to this situation. The Eradication Program may have intensified the problem, but we do not believe it was the sole cause for the outbreak.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Boll Weevil Eradication Program personnel, County Committees, and FSA personnel are searching for ways to bring disaster assistance to the area. A fact-finding committee has been formed and will meet with legislators soon to see if assistance can be arranged. I will keep you informed.

Producers in Tom Green, Runnels, Concho, McCulloch, and Schleicher Counties have spent many dollars attempting to control the beet armyworm. We had fairly good results early, but much less success the past two weeks. Some treatments are providing 60-70% control, but the sheer numbers are overwhelming us. When some fields have worm numbers which range from 35 to 50 worms per foot of row, 60-70% control is not adequate.

In my opinion, producers should evaluate their potential yield in each field as well as their crop insurance programs before committing to a spray program that could get very expensive. Folks, much of the crop has already been destroyed and the yields in most situations is not there to justify spending additional dollars because it is too late for a second crop. Keep in mind it takes a pinhead square 22-25 days to reach a bloom. Under normal fall conditions we need a bloom by the first week in September. That means what is on the plant today is all the potential you have in that field.

TDA has issued a Section 18 for the use of Pirate® for beet armyworm control. Many producers are trying to buy time until they can get it. It will be the middle to later part of next week before the product is here for your use. Supplies are also going to be very limited. Worms can eat a crop up in a week, so control decisions will have to be made now.

Bollworms/Budworms—Tobacco budworm traps have increased somewhat in Tom Green County, but remain low in Runnels County. I have looked at a number of larvae that was collected from fields that had been treated with a pyrethroid or Larvin® insecticide, and found only a small percentage to be tobacco budworm. We have experienced a number of control problems with virtually all products and in my opinion it is probably due to lack of coverage and sheer numbers. There has been every concoction known to man tried the past 10 days and nothing is doing a super job.

Bollworm trap counts went down on the 14th and 15th, but are going back up. We could experience another egg lay next week.

Armyworms/Loopers—Beet armyworm trap numbers are going every direction right now. Trap numbers have continued to increase in the Eldorado, Veribest, and Winters areas. Trap numbers remain high in San Angelo, Wall, and Mereta areas and low in Coleman and Rowena units.

Fall armyworms and yellow striped armyworms can also be found in most fields. Loopers are also found in very large numbers and most treatments are having little to no effect on them. "Bt" insecticides are the most effective against loopers. Specimens have been collected and are currently being identified to see if these loopers are actually soybean loopers. Soybean loopers are more difficult to control.

Required training and licenses to carry concealed handguns

Also September 1, concealed handgun program instructors certified by the DPS may begin offering the 10- to 15-hour classes which applicants must take to become licensed. Certificates, which indicate successful completion of those classes, must be forwarded to the above-listed address along with completed application packets.

The DPS-authorized course will consist of both classroom and firing range instruction. While shooting ranges are not subject to direct DPS regulation, owners or operators must register any facilities that will be used for this instruction.

The DPS immediately will begin registering ranges at no cost. Ranger owners and operators may call the DPS at 512-706-7293 or 512-706-7294 to request registration of their facilities. Then, the DPS will contact the owners and/or operators to complete the registration process.

Texas seeking concealed handgun licenses may begin the application process September 1. The DPS is gearing up by distributing application request cards

Rep. Bob Turner looking for area producers for broiler operations

State Representative Bob Turner is presently completing work on a study to determine the feasibility of producing and processing broilers in this area.

Representative Turner said, "Due to the serious economic problems in our area, we have been looking at alternative investments, diversification and a reliable source of income, particularly for the farmers and ranchers. We have been working on this project for about three and a half years and hope there will be enough response to bring in this new business."

The management of a particular broiler company is looking at this area for the potential to develop broiler production. One step is to attract growers, which would create an outstanding investment opportunity for interested farmers and ranchers.

According to Turner; "when you build a new broiler house, you don't become an employee; and the payments you receive aren't wages. Instead, the money you earn is cash flow from a business you own and manage yourself and the company is a valuable partner backing you up. The company will assist you in obtaining financing and will supply chicks, feed, medication and vaccinations. Your chicks are delivered and even your market-ready flocks are caught."

A newly designed, energy efficient broiler house will be built and equipped by the company, per their specifications. Producers will be responsible for mortgages, bedding, electricity, fuel, maintenance, building insurance and taxes. Producers will receive a contract which gives a minimum payment for each flock raised. "During this time, most producers will beat the minimum as they learn to manage each flock more and more efficiently," said Turner.

He continues, "Even if you've never raised chickens before, don't worry. A company service person will visit your operation once a week (or as often as necessary) to monitor the birds' health, check the house systems, and answer any questions." "The company's decision to offer a broiler program and establish a processing plant, hatchery and feed mill in this area will depend on the response we receive from area farmers and ranchers."

If you would like to learn more about the broiler operation and investment opportunities, please write immediately to the following:

EPA approval given for use of Pirate® to aid in combat of beet armyworms

Environmental Protection Agency officials announced August 17 that approval was granted by the EPA for use of a special agriculture chemical in Southern Rolling Plains counties.

The chemical, Pirate®, was approved to help fight an infestation in cotton fields by the beet armyworm. The pest has caused widespread damage to cotton fields in the area and producers sought the special approval to combat the infestation. The chemical was developed and produced by American Cyanamid Chemical Company.

Cotton producers received a great deal of help in the approval process from the Texas Department of Agriculture, Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation Inc. officials, and members of the Southern Rolling Plains Cotton Growers, including Kenny Gully and Sid Long. The approval process began August 14 and was completed late August 16.

The EPA Section 18 approval allows the chemical to be used in Tom Green, Concho, Runnels, and McCulloch counties.
