Commissioners take care of routine business items to start fiscal year

Housekeeping items consumed most of the Runnels County Commissioners Court meeting on Tuesday. The majority of items on the action agenda had to do with beginning the new fiscal year for the county.

County Judge Marilyn Egan read for 25 minutes the calendar of county expenses and operations and setting salaries for county employees. Following the reading and some minor corrections, commissioners approved the calendar unanimously.

Other items relating to the beginning of the new fiscal year included:

· Approving the retaining of all county and precinct officials on salary basis.

· Accepting an order of the District Judge setting the salaries of the County Auditor and two assistants.

· Authorizing the County Treasurer to invest county funds in certificates of deposit in a local depository.

 Commissioners accepted the County Auditor's Annual Report showing just over $125,000 more revenue than expenses for the fiscal year ended September 30.

Other business at the meeting included entering into a law enforcement dispatching agreement with the City of Ballinger for the period October 1, 2001 to September 30, 2002. The City of Ballinger will pay $29,995 for the service.

Commissioners nominated Preston Barker of Winters, Delbert Kruse of Winters and Billy Schwertner of Rowena as candidates for the board of directors of the Runnels County Appraisal District.

County Clerk Elesa Ocker told Commissioners she expected a very low turnout for the November 6 Constitutional Amendment election and Judge Egan suggested Commissioners issue an order to keep Runnels County offices open on that day. The order was approved unanimously.

Commissioners also adopted resolutions proclaiming See BUSINESS, pg. 2

by Reg Boles ©2001

The cry, approaching a whine, has become familiar lately: "We are victims of the current terrible situation and we need government assistance for our very survival".

No, you haven't been hearing those pleas coming from this end of the economy, but there are implications for the economy at large, as well as this business in particular.

yourself, you have to admit that people in the oil and gas business have been guilty of crying in our soup at times, too. We have begged for subsidies, import taxes, tax incentives, etc. all in the name of national security, the health of the larger economy, whatever the reason de jour. Now, there are a myriad of other businesses that are begging for help, that, if denied, "could spell doom for the overall economy."

While everyone does their job, if bigger-picture observers (like Congressmen, investment bankers, etc.) perceive a particular problem that is plaguing an industry, then those big-picture guys and gals should consider doing something to increase confidence. It's OK if an industry If you are really honest with leader wants to bring it to their attention, but, if they do, it should be in a way that does not involve totally selfish interest. It should be brought forward out of concern for a stable business environment and for some limited support for an industry that is suffering some temporary external affect.

We in the oil and gas business would do well to remember this when we are tempted to ask for our time at the free lunch trough.

There is a wonderful story in the Bible. You will find it in Luke 1:5. An angel came to an old man by the name of Zechariah and told him that he and his wife Elizabeth would have a son. The son was to be named John. The angel, Gabriel, said that John would bring "many of the people...back to the Lord" and would "turn the hearts of the fathers to their children." I do recognize that there are many loving fathers whose hearts are turned to their children. But it is still true that far too many have hearts turned elsewhere.

Russel Miller wrote a book called The House of Getty. It's all about J. Paul Getty, known at the time as the world's richest man. In the book is a story that makes the point. Timothy Getty, the young son of J. Paul Getty, the oil tycoon, had a frail body and was often ill. When Timothy was 11 and about to turn 12, his father telephoned him and asked what he wanted for 12th birthday. The son said, "I want your love, Daddy, and I want to see you." But the father felt he couldn't see his son then. He had too many business obligations.

Not too long after Timothy died in a hospital without seeing Class of 1951 will celebrate school. When we return, a his father, J. Paul Getty was devastated by the death.

I got this story from my son John, who is a pastor who serves an open country church near Balwin, Wisconsin. He put it in the church newsletter, because it hit home with him. It hit home with me, too. More than once in my life, when a child has died and I had the funeral, the father will say, with tears in his eyes, "I should have spent more time with my child." And it doesn't seem to matter what age the child is...the hurt is just as hard.

John also related to the time he spent a long night with a dear friend, whose son at 6 months had died of SIDS. (The initials that stand for a crib death. Very devastating to both parents). It was tragic that he had lost his son. It was more tragic that he could not remember the last time he had held him. He wasn't even sure that he had held him more than a dozen times in his short life. His painful cry through groans and tears was that he had been "too damn busy." And the sad part is that it was true.

John the Baptist did preach many hard-ball sermons. He istration, coffee, cookies, and alive, 34 plan to attend, joined other eats at 10:00 and the second alive states who were 'called 'the' people to repent. To repent means to change your ways. To straighten up and do the right thing. To go with God, and to spend time with your children. To love them and cherish them. And not be so busy. Fathers and mothers. Parents.

How much time are you spending each day with your children? A few years ago it came out that the average amount of time that a father spent with his child...one on one, was less that five minutes a day! Our children are a gift from God and are our most priceless possession. And if we have a heart for them we will take time to be with them. One on one.

I've talked to many men who are retired. Or who are nearing the end of their life. And I've never heard one say, "My only regret is that I didn't spend enough time at my job." And I've heard many say, "I do wish I had spent more time with my kids." One of the reasons that Ramona and I spend six months a year in our retirement visiting our kids and their young ones is that I'm still "making up for the times I was too busy." And my only regret is that I didn't spend more time with them when they were kids. I am grateful to God that He has given us this time to be with them. And not have to be looking at my appointment book. For sure I have changed by ways and am now "turning my heart to my children" more and more each day. And it is joy.

To be sure we have our differences. And there are times that I intrude where I shouldn't. But it sure beats being busy. And I can help out. Like today I trimmed 5 big old trees in John's yard. And yesterday I did 3. And hauled away the cuttings. Tonight I'm a little stiff, but it's a good feeling to be able to help out. This morning little Abigail and I had a good little visit. And yesterday she came up to me wearing the little orange stool we made together last year. She wore it like a crown. It really touched me. To be able to spend time with each one. And sometimes the car is full of them. This morning I hauled 3 to school. We sang all the way. Songs like "This is the day the Lord has made," and "Jesus loves me." What a wonderful way to begin the day! Sure beats sight-seeing. Travel. All those things. For me, anyway. The last thing I did of importance last Monday, while we were still in Tuscola, before Paul and Mary the kids left for Odessa, was to hold little Ella. For half an hour. She has changed! She looked me over. With her eyes wide open. And, I swear, she smiled. I don't know about her little heart ... whether it is turned to me. But, for sure, I know that mine is turned to her. And there is nothing like it in the world. Five kids and their spouses. Sixteen grandchildren. Wonderful Ramona. For me to love and turn my heart to. God is so good. He knows where the action is and lets us in on the action! God is so good.

ESCAPING SERIOUS INJURY on Sunday, October 7, 2001, were the occupants of this 2000 Ford pick-up which was hit broadside by a vehicle failing to yield at a stop sign. Kyle Alston and his wife Michaela of Georgetown were travelling east on Highway 153 when he realized a 1995 Buick LaSabre driven by J.C. Wilkerson, 74, of Winters was not going to stop at the intersection of FM 2647. After the Buick struck the vehicle, the pick-up traveled to the bar ditch and rolled twice. According to Winters Police Department Sgt. Terry Johnson everyone was taken to the hospital, but only Mrs. Alston sustained any serious injury resulting in a broken foot. All occupants of the two vehicles including Wilkerson's son Joe, were wearing seatbelts.

Richard Simpson is the son of Mrs. Emmett (Rosa Lee) Simpson of Winters and is a 1970 graduate of Winters High School. He and his wife reside in Grape Creek, Texas.

Against the clatter and bustle of the lunch crowd in a busy restaurant, Richard and Amy Simpson clasp each other's hands, bow their heads and say grace.

Earnestly, Richard Simpson thanks God for the food put before them, for the blessings of their life and he asks for strength to bear the trials of the days ahead.

said, to which his wife added, "We're very proud of her. We're proud of what she's doing" and, referring to Angela Renae's one-year-old son, Logan, Amy Simpson said, "We're proud of the mother she is." Logan's father is a Marine.

Richard Simpson's youngest son, Richard Earl "Ricky" Simpson, joined the Marines in August and is about to graduate from boot camp in San Diego. A bout with pneumonia has put him a week behind schedule, but the Simpsons have been assured he'll catch up in no time.

Amy Simpson's son-in-law, Scott Bourland, had finished his four years of Navy service and was a member of the Army reserves. After the terrorist attack, Bourland was called into active duty.

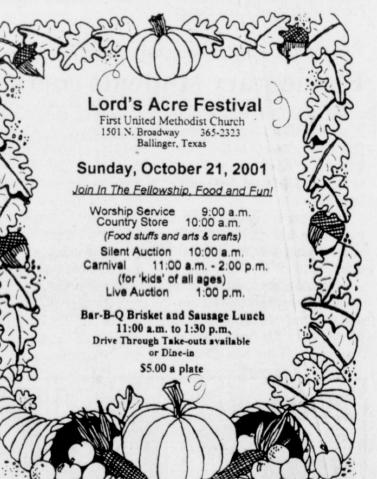

"They told him to report this morning (Sept. 18) with his duffel bag and uniforms," Amy Simpson said. There's an honest show of pride in each of the parent's faces. But they are well aware of the risks.

"I'm scared for the kids," Amy Simpson said. "I'm scared for all of them, but each and every one made their choice."

But having buried one Marine, her child, Amy Simpson can speak with authority of the risks of brave choices.

Last week, in the rush on stores everywhere of citizens wanting to buy U.S. flags, she took the triagular-folded flag that had draped Clayton Gill's casket. Amy Simpson said she didn't unfold the flag or take it out of its casing, but she left it where it would show - where people could see her patriotism. She said the flag was a reminder of great sacrifice, her own and the ultimate sacrifice of her son.

"I pray to God we don't have to do this again - bury another child. It's in God's hands and you just learn not to question."

 received report of vandalism in the 300 block of E. Broadway Street. A 72-year-old Winters female reported finding damage to her vehicle caused by several teenage females and males. Despite a witness observing these subjects the incident was not immediately reported. This subjects remain unidentified at this time, but this is under investigation as Criminal Mischief.

 received report of a theft in the 500 block of Van Ness Street. A female subject of Winters reported that several items were removed from her business during the previous weeks. A possible suspect has been named. This under investigation as Class B Theft.

· received report of an assault involving a knife in the 700 block of N. Fannin Street. Two 13-year-old Winters males reported that a 14-year-old Winters male pulled a knife on them and made threatening motions against the younger males. The suspect male was detained by school authorities and the knife was confiscated. Charges for Aggravated Assault with a Deadly Weapon are pending against the suspect male.

 observed and stopped a 1976 Dodge pickup on Willis Street for several traffic violations. An odor of alcohol was detected on the driver who exhibited signs of intoxication. The driver was offered and subsequently failed several field sobriety tasks. The driver, Tyrone Watkins of Ballinger, was arrested for Driving While Intoxicated Class A and taken to Runnels County Jail where he provided a blood alcohol specimen over the legal limit.

 observed and stopped a 1992 Honda passenger car on State Highway 153 for a traffic violation. After stopping the vehicle the officer observed one of the passengers make a furtive movement towards the backseat area. As a safety precaution the officer removed the driver from the vehicle and ordered the remaining occupants to keep their hands in view. An odor of alcohol was detected on the driver as well as the passengers. Alcoholic beverages were located within the vehicle. The driver, Edward Longoria of Sweetwater, was offered and subsequently passed several field sobriety tasks, but due to his age (20) he was placed under arrest for Driving Under the Influence of Alcohol Detectable Amount. The two passengers, identified as Gilbert Perez and Bobby Hollon of Sweetwater, were arrested for Minor in Consumption of Alcohol. All three subjects were transported to the Runnels County Jail.

· received report of a burglary in the 500 block of Enterprise Street. A Winters female reported that two juvenile males entered into her residence by cutting the screen to her door. When she confronted the males, they ran. A description of the males was given to officers who subsequently located the males. An additional burglary, occurring at the Winters Independent School District, was later determined to have been perpetrated by the same suspect males. Evidence, recovered at the scene of the second burglary, was apparently intended to be hidden by the males who thought the house was abandoned. Items taken from the school burglary have been recovered and the suspect males, both 15-year-old and who reside in Winters, face charges of burglary of building and criminal trespassing. The case is being referred to juvenile authorities.
