PLANTING A NEW ORCHARD

January is a suitable time for planting a new fruit orchard in author of many books, brochures Texas. Accordingly says R.L King, nursery stock should be ordered at once. Stock is scarce and orchardists should be prepared both for new plantings and for replacen e-+ of worn-out trees in the old orc-

King suggests ordering a large variety of fruits for the home orchard. He suggests also to examine nursery stock carefully as soon as it is delivered. If it has knots or bead like growths on the roots it should not be accepted. The roots of all plants chosen for the orchard should be kept moist and protected from heat. If it should be necessary to hold the plants for several days before planting, trench or heel them in, and keep them well

In replacing old trees in the orchard, King advises replacing the soil which supported with new, rich sandy leaf mold to prevent possible disease attacks which may have caused the older trees to die. The site for new orchard should be away from the older one and be free of nematade, "New ground and air pockets should be avoided. After these precautions, a well drained sandy loam site ,if available, s a very desirable choice. Of course King adds, a site having a slight slope and is naer the house is no

The last step before planting is preparing the soil, which first shod be broken, disked and rowed. If terraces are necessary the trees should be planted on the contour. Give the terraces a slight fall if ifall is heavy and drainage is needed, but run them level if moisture conservation is necessary.

Cured salt pork can be sliced and

A LTHOUGH fall is still the popular season for butchering, freezer-locker facilities make it possible almost any month, according to Marjorie Griffin, Rural Home Editor of Capper's Farmer.

"Farm homemakers like to use their home freezers and freezer lockers to hold beef, pork, lamb, veal or poultry at its fresh best until needed," she writes in the magazine read by 1,250,000 farm families. "However, the old standby methods of curing and canning meat continue to be used.

"Many farm families find that preserving by all three methods gives greatest variety to the menus.

"A plan often followed is to freeze tender cuts from rib and loin; can shoulders, shanks and other less tender cuts; cure sides and hams of pork and the inside round of beef.

"Young chickens are frequently frozen; here may be canned. Poultry should be well fattened for alaugh.
