Extra Hour Tribute . . .

In some Washington quarters much ado has been made this week over a proposal by some War Production employees that the 3,000,000 government employees work an extra hour on the Monday after Memorial Day as a tribute to our war heroes.

The suggestion is a good one. But a lot of people will wonder why just one extra hour on one particular holiday should be singled out.

Judging from the many weeks it takes WPB to act on most priority requests, that "extra hour" could be put to good use there.

No National Holiday.

It may come as a surprise to some, but the United States actually has no holiday. July 4 generally is thought of as an official national holiday. But it never has been so finally designated. And both Labor Day and Armistice Day were so declared by the Congress only for the District of Columbia. General public acceptance has made the holidays, from Independence Day on down, what they are today. And general public acceptance right now has cut holiday observance to the minimum—for the duration.

Man Without a Country . . .

President Benes of Czechoslovakia spoke to the Senate and House a few days ago. He arrived here at the same time that Prime Minister Winston Churchill, General Wavell and the other conferees did. Churchill may make a better speech than the scholarly Dr. Benes, but he would not necessarily receive greater attention and sympathy. Czechoslovakia was a small country but a great country. Dr. Benes is a small man, a quiet man, but in United Nations thought he is one of the big men of the century—although today he is a man without a country.

The President of Bolivia spoke to Congress only a few days earlier. His ideas are worth considering, too.

But the most impressive outside speaker the Congress has heard this year, was, in my opinion, Madame Chiang Kai-Shek. She and the Generalissimo are the leaders of 275,000,000 "free Chinese" today. A woman of intelligence, personality and commonsense, the Chinese "first lady" bespeaks the determination of the democratic Chinese to repulse the Japanese aggression and build a nation dedicated to the principles of our Declaration of Independence and the Four Freedoms of today.

There's The Pacific . . .

The conferences of President Roosevelt, Churchill and the other war leaders here, and the joint planning by General MacArthur and Admiral Halsey, mean that the Japs aren't going to be overlooked. Victory in Tunisia was fine. But we must remember Pearl Harbor and Bataan. We will.

The Two "Graduates" of Coke County's First School

WILEY BYRD

LEE RICHARDS

And these are graduation days, eh?

Well—that being true, we want to inform all present day Coke Countians, readers of The Enterprise elsewhere, and especially the members of the Bronte school's 1943 graduating class, with reference to other "graduates" and their "graduation days."

This is one time that The Enterprise goes back to "the beginning of things"—to the very alpha of Coke county's undertaking to educate its youth. Coke's first school had two "graduates," according to the information afforded us by the two "victims." And from their reports of their wild ventures in the first school taught in the county, it is one of the world's wonders that the two survive to "tell the story." Talk of heroes at Bataan and other places throughout the world, these two "graduates" have "in 'em" the stuff of which men are really and truly made, or they would not have survived to relate the hair-breadth escapes they had from the ire and strong arm of the "pedagogue," who recognized that his only job was not simply to "teach the young idea to shoot," but also equally great was his responsibility to impress upon the recalcitrant youth under his tutelage he was "a man in authority," and that regardless of circumstance or consequence his mandates were as unchangeable as "the laws of the Medes and Persians, and his his orders must be obeyed regardless of circumstances or consequences.

The two gentlemen whose pictures grace the front page of today's Enterprise are THE TWO graduates of Coke county's first school. They are W. G. Byrd and Lee Richards. Now, nobody knows how old these two "boys" are—for, they themselves do not remember when "they and Columbus discovered West Texas"—but they were here when most everybody else came. It is evident, however, from their youthful appearance that they were mere youths when they stood before the camera, with trembling breath, and had their "likenesses" "struck" for the first time, for this, their "first public appearance."

From these "Two Graduates," The Enterprise has been given brief information regarding Coke's first school and "the wild exploits" of "the two" in question.

The school was near Old Fort Chadbourne, not far from the old R. E. Douglas farm home. It existed only about three years—1881, 1882, 1883—that was before the organization of Coke county and at that time was a part of Tom Green county. The students were the children of the scattered families from over a vast and wide area who moved in, near the school house, for its "educational advantages." There were but very few lumber houses anywhere in the country at that time. The houses in the school community were built of pickets and some lived in dug-outs. The walls of the school house were made of pickets and the cracks were chinked and daubed with mud. The roof was made of poles and the cracks were filled with bear grass—then mortar was made of clay and spread over the bear grass. The roof was finished by covering entirely with dry earth. Seats for the school house were made of split logs and the legs of the seats were short posts, cut and fitted into holes that were bored with a large augur. There were no backs to the seats.

Mr. Byrd says that he got a whipping more often than he recited his lessons. One day he got "the most terrible beating" he had ever had, and was told by the "professor" that the next, he would get a "sure-enough lickin'." It was only a few days, "Wiley" broke the ironclad rules" again, as did two other boys in school. The teacher sent Wiley out with orders to bring in "three extra good swit hes," that the three were going to get what was "due" them. Wiley said that when he got out to where the switches were the thought occurred to him, the teacher might decide not to whip the other two boys, and then he could use all the three of the switches on Wiley. So, it was out there, in the silent place, among the switches, with the little singing birds about him, that Wiley "graduated," and hence, he "turned his heels" on "the place of learning" and "fled from the wrath to come," never to go back as a school boy again.

Mr. Byrd says, "and that's the way I graduated from the old picket school house, with the mud top and dirt floor."

Lee Richards—well, Lee relates about the same thrilling, blood-curdling, adventurous, romantic story as that of Mr. Byrd—it was a time of "floggings" from the timethe school house doors opened until Lee was AWOL. "And that ol' cuss" said Lee, "was the outwhoopinest ol' son of a seagull I have ever seen. He had a way he

Bronte PTA Installs Officers For Coming Year

Friday afternoon, May 11, 1943 the Bronte Parent-Teachers Association met in the school auditorium.

Mrs. B. F. Kirk was leader for the program: "Health Is Life" The speaker was Miss Mary Mrs. W. W. Millikin and Mrs. Steele.

C. E. Arrott gave a report on the 6th District Conference in San Angelo.

New officers installed were: Mrs. Alfred Taylor, President. Mrs. F. E. Modgling, Vice-President.

Mrs. Pete Gentry, Secretary. Mrs. O. R. McQueen, Treasurer.

Installation services were conducted by Mrs. C. E. Arrott.

Mrs. B. F. Kirk presented Mrs. W. W. Millikin, retiring president, with a pen, a gift from the PTA for her two years of service.

TENNYSON SEEKS A PRINCIPAL FOR THE TENNYSON SCHOOL

Appeal has been made to The Enterprise by some of the good people of Tennyson to aid them in securing a principal for their school.

The young lady who has served as principal for the past two sessions has taken a position elsewhere. Due to the scarcity of teachers, patrons of the school fear that it is going to be difficult to secure one for the place.

Mrs. Lutie Dunn is the capable and popular assistant teacher—therefore, the principal will find a desirable place. The school building is a comfortable and beautiful red brick and romantically beautiful, nestling at the foot of the towering peak of Mt. Margaret. The patrons are a community of most excellent people and generally will give united and hearty cooperation. It is an eight months school term.

We give all the above that the teachers here and there who read The Enterprise may know the situation.

Mrs. J. P. Arrott of Tennyson was a pleasing caller at The Enterprise office Wednesday. Mrs. Arrott enrolled her husband as a paid-in-advance subscriber to The Enterprise—thanks to both.

could make the switch bend around you and lift you up and let you drop. Gosh, I still can feel the stinging thud of the switches that old man used on me."

But, with all the "wild and woolly days" of which these lines relate, it was a great people who moved into the school community of Coke county's first school that they might give their youth all the advantages of school that the country afforded. And they were not a poverty-stricken people by any means. Mr. Byrd tells us, he remembers that the family with whom he boarded sold their stock and holdings for the snug little (?) sum of $90,000, and returned to the sections of country that were more densely populated.

So, ladies and gentlemen, school boys and girls of Coke county, and all this area, especially members of the 1943 graduating class of the Bronte school, meet the two gentlemen of honor and distinction, whose pictures appear on our front page, as "The Two Graduates of Coke County's First School."

Bronte School Graduating Class Has 22 Members

In the circles of the graduating class of the Bronte high school today there are intermingled feelings of joy and sorrow—joy in the fact that they are now graduates of the school, after years of study and waiting; sorrow in the fact that they are no longer a part of the school and its student body, and in the further fact that after tonight they will drift apart and hence all that will remain for them are the memories of dear old school days.

There are 22 members of the 1943 class—but one of the number will not be present this evening to receive his diploma. Reference is made to Johnnie Gregg, who has already been called into the service of his country.

Dr. L. A. Woods, state superintendent of education, will deliver the address before the class, who is expected to arrive herethis afternoon from Austin. It is the first time, far as The Enterprise knows, that the state superintendent of education has ever come to Coke county to deliver an address at commencement exercises. It is hoped that a large number will hear Dr. Wood, for he is not only a great and scholarly man but he is a forceful and pleasing platform speaker.

Members of the 1943 graduating class are:

Maurine Miller
Pablo Olivas

Biography of Rev. Ira Key, D. D. in The Dallas News

Rev. Ira Key, D.D., who was reared in Bronte, died May 7. Notice of his death appeared in the next issue of The Enterprise, but having no information as to his life's work The Enterprise could give nothing in detail as to his activities.

The following from Bryan appeared in the Dallas News:

Funeral services for Dr. Ira Floyd Key, 57, who died of a heart attack, at a Marlin hospital Tuesday evening, were held at the First Methodist Church, of which he was pastor, Thursday afternoon. The Rev. C. W. Lokey, superintendent of the Bryan district, officiated, assisted by Bishop Frank A. Smith of Houston. Interment was in Bryan City Cemetery.

Dr. Key, who was born at Lingleville, was the son of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Key, a pioneer family in West Texas. He was graduated from Southwestern University, Georgetown, in 1908, and was admitted to the Texas Conference in 1909. He was li-

WASTE NOT, WANT NOT
The pioneer virtue of thrift is coming back with Victory Gardens. As Poor Richard so aptly pointed out, saving is as essential to prosperity as making, and for a century America grew and thrived mightily—not by making a great deal and spending it, but by saving some out of the little that the masses of Americans made.
Twenty million Victory Gardens in town and country constitute a splendid patriotic contribution to the Nation's war needs, but equally significant, they represent the spirit of self-help, of individual initiative and resourcefulness which is the very essence of democracy. "Despite not the day of small things," we are admonished, and in the total, Victory Gardens will produce more vegetables in 1943 than the commercial growers.

All this cannot be eaten during the growing season, but all of it should be saved. Judging from the demand for pressure cookers, Victory Gardeners are determined to carry thrift to the ultimate by canning surplus vegetables and fruits. There will not be enough pressure cookers to meet this demand, but a "good neighbor policy" on the garden front can multiply the output from the cookers which are on hand. Paraphrasing another Victory motto, let's "Keep 'em steaming."

Before the day of steam pressure canning, the pioneers found other ways of preserving food—drying, water-bath canning, brining, pickling, and storing in cellars. Modern "dehydration" is nothing but streamlined drying. Quick-freezing and cold storage are only improved processes of an ancient principle. "Where there's a will there's a way," and Victory Gardeners of 1943 will justify their heritage from the pioneers by finding the way to save the good food they are growing. Civilian Defense councils are lined up for an all-out job of food production and conservation, and information will be supplied to those who ask for it.

ATTENTION, FARMERS
Farmers still have time to get some feed wheat on a car which is being made up now. This will probably be the last car of feed wheat to be ordered for the present. The government set price is still $1.04 per bushel delivered on tracks at Bronte.
