BRONTE TEEN-AGERS APPEAR ON DIVERSITY CLUB PROGRAM

A panel of teen-agers stressed that love from parents, proper home guidance and discipline, and a proper religious atmosphere were most important in making good citizens out of today's youth. The seven Bronte high school students made their report to the Diversity Club which met last Thursday night in the home of Mrs. Annie Wilkins.

The panel was presented by one of their instructors, Vetal Flores, and represented two students from each high school class. They were Gene Sherrod and Robert L.

Moore, seniors; Albert Grace and Ida Nell Shields, juniors; Linda Henry and Danell Dixon (who was not able to be present because of illness), sophomores; and Carolyn Glenn and Bette Blackmon, freshmen.

Gene Sherrod, speaking on delinquency, emphasized that young people are basically good, that they obey what they are taught whether it is right or wrong, and that money, since many juvenile delinquents come from well-to-do homes, can't buy love and discipline necessary from parents. He defined delinquency as "a neglect of duty" and concluded that much of it is actually "adult delinquency."

Bette Blackmon's subject was "Home and Family Relationships" and she also brought out the need for parents' love and suggested that parents should make children responsible at an early age, giving them chores and commanding their respect. When young people respect and love their parents, she said, the young people will always stay within the bounds set for them.

Robert L. Moore spoke to the group concerning honor systems in school and life. He concluded that life begins and ends with honesty and that if a child is taught to be honest from the very beginning, he will never be dishonest. Teachers and parents, he said, should show trust in youth. "A lack of trust causes inferior feelings, a loss of will power and maybe, sooner or later, dishonesty."

Linda Henry, in discussing "Bronte vs. Its Youth," pointed out that recreation facilities here include movies, picnic areas, swimming pool, tennis, basketball and croquet courts. But she felt there is not enough supervised inside recreation. She told of a lack of sponsored clubs and other special events for youth only.

Albert Grace told the group of the importance of good recreation, saying that Bronte youth turned mostly to the school for winter recreation. He said the worst recreation situation in Bronte is the hot rodding and fast driving and added that good leadership in all recreation is the most important factor in building good citizens.

Bringing in the teen-ager's view on religion, Ida Nell Shields said "religion and belief in God make happier persons and furnish

New Clinic Opening Set for Sun.

A formal opening of the new Harris-Adams clinic will be held Sunday from 2 until 4 p.m. The public is invited to attend and inspect the new structure which was begun last August and recently finished.

The new clinic has about 2,000 feet of floor space, more than double the size of the old one. Centrally air conditioned and heated, the structure adjoins the hospital on its south side. The southern part of the building contains a new laboratory and X-ray room on the east and an enclosed patio on the west.

The building also contains two doctors' offices and two examining rooms, waiting room, business office, consultation room and several wash rooms and bath rooms.

McDermitt and York, San Angelo architects, drew the plans and the general contract was awarded to R. E. Probst of San Angelo.

Front wall of the new building is constructed of brick with an aluminum and glass entrance. Brick was also used to form the north wall. Inside, the building is finished in gypsum wall board. Acoustical tile is used in the ceiling and vinyl tile on the floor.

Modern recessed lighting is used throughout the building. Drapes have been hung and carpeting is used in part of the rooms. Practically all of the furnishings are also new.

Drs. John R. Harris and Dean Adams are issuing a special invitation to everyone in this area to come by Sunday between two and four o'clock.

Dr. Harris Has Guided Destiny of Hospital and Clinic 10 Years

DR. JOHN R. HARRIS

Dr. John R. Harris is a familiar figure to almost everyone in this area. He has been practicing medicine here since July 7, 1947, and during that time he has attended most of the people here for one ailment or another. He came to Bronte from Colorado City soon after the hospital was built. It was then named the Karen-Gayl Hospital and was built by J. M. Rippetoe. The original structure had seven patient beds, and the doctor set up his office in a small room in the hospital.

In 1948, the doctor leased the hospital from Rippetoe and purchased it soon after. By 1950, the tiny office had grown too small and was moved to a new building adjacent to the hospital. The business office and part of the lab were also moved to the new office and the John Harris Clinic came into being.

By 1951, conditions at the hospital became overcrowded and two new wings were added, giving it a bed capacity of fifteen, and it was renamed the Bronte Hospital. At that time refrigerated air conditioning, a new operating and delivery room and a new kitchen were also added.

By 1956, the hospital again was feeling the pinch of "too little room," and the formal opening of another new wing was held in May. That addition, which brought the hospital to its present size, added a larger operating room, a nurses lounge, and eight new patient rooms, making it possible to care for at least 23 patients.

With the preceptees' arriving regularly, the association of a new doctor and the increased business and insurance to be handled by the business office. Harris began to think about a new larger clinic. The results of this planning and work are what the public will see this Sunday.

A native of Oklahoma, Dr. Harris received his Bachelor of Science degree from Oklahoma Baptist University in 1940 and his M. D. Degree from Baylor University School of Medicine in 1944.

He served his internship at Robert B. Green Hospital in San Antonio and served as a medical officer with the 249th Mobile Surgical Team in the Pacific Theatre of Operations during World War II. After returning to the United States, he set up practice at Moreland, Okla., where he stayed for a year before going to Colorado City.

Dr. Harris' family is also familiar to everyone. His wife is the former Mary Lewis. She is a registered nurse and serves as surgical nurse for the doctors. They have two children, Rex, 12, and Ann, 10, who are in the sixth and fifth grades at the local school.

The next plans for expansion? The doctor says he is going to rest on the building programs for awhile, but this reporter observed that there wasn't an empty patient bed in the Bronte Hospital late Wednesday.

Dean Adams Newest Member of Medical Team In Bronte

DR. DEAN ADAMS

Newest member of the Harris-Adams medical team is Dr. Dean Adams, who came to Bronte in July to be associated with Dr. Harris in the practice of medicine and surgery.

Dr. Adams is a 1956 graduate of the University of Texas Medical School in Galveston. After finishing his work there he went to Kansas City, Mo., where he interned for a year at the Kansas City General Hospital.

Originally from San Angelo, Dr. Adams finished high school there and attended San Angelo College for a year. He was also employed for a time on the San Angelo Standard-Times.

After leaving San Angelo, Dr. Adams attended Southern Methodist University, where he received his B. A. degree before entering medical school.

Other members of the Adams family are his wife, the former Zelda Caffey of Merkel and Dallas, and baby daughter, Kim, born soon after they arrived in Bronte. They purchased a home in the south part of town.

Dr. Adams served as a preceptee here during 1955-56.

"An apple a day," it's said "keeps the doctor away." Well, that old adage is being checked by Dr. E. H. Lucas, professor of horticulture at Michigan State College. For two years, 500 volunteer students have been munching an apple a day, while another 500 have spurned them. By the end of three years, Dr. Lucas may have some idea whether apples aid general health, and how much. —From Today's Health.

There are over 800 insurance companies in this country which sell hospitalization insurance.

Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how He said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.—(The Acts 20, 35.)

Often, when spontaneously bestowing a friendly smile upon a lonely person, or a word or deed of help and encouragement to one in distress, we have been wondrously rewarded by such an inner satisfaction as a fortune in dollars could not equal. Indeed we are blessed when we give, unselfishly, and in love.

20 Young Doctors Have Trained Here Under Dr. Harris

Dr. Dean Adams was first introduced to Bronte when he came here as a preceptee in November of 1955. He is one of 20 preceptees who have trained here under Dr. John R. Harris. The 21st one is due to arrive in March of this year and will begin training.

The preceptee program began when all senior students from the University of Texas Medical School at Galveston were required to go out to various places in the state to practice medicine under the supervision of an experienced physician. For a three months period, these students are placed only with qualified doctors who attend post graduate courses in the latest and best methods of medical techniques and who do the required amount of study-hours each year. Failure to comply removes that doctor from the preceptor rolls.

One of the preceptees who trained here wrote the following concerning his experiences here:

"One of the first lessons learned is that mercy is the mission, pain is the problem, and health is the goal. This momentous job is accomplished by the knowledge obtained in medical school, judgment refined by year of experience and independent study. The attitude in the small town is vastly different from the large medical centers in that every patient here is a friend and personal acquaintance, whereas in the centers he is merely a medical problem.

"The second lesson learned is that everything is relative; there are no absolutes when dealing with the whole man. The absolutes taught in school are simply the base lines of knowledge from which we are supposed to travel to wisdom. Lacking the numerous tests and aids of the large centers, we learn how the general practitioner must sharpen his diagnostic acumen, showing the graphic difference in a technician and a physician.

"The third lesson is that the doctor is an integral part of his community, and after years of isolation in the cloisters of learning, this is a revelation, indeed. We learn that he is a citizen as well as a scientist.

"So we leave with a greater feeling of humility as the scope of our profession has been broadened far beyond the indication given in Cecil's Textbook of Medicine.

In 1953, Texans spent 16,949,140 days in hospitals. In other words, on an average day there were 46,436 patients being cared for in the state's hospitals.

DR. HARRIS ON FACULTY

Dr. John R. Harris was appointed in 1953 as a permanent instructor for the University of Texas Medical School. This was made in connection with the preceptee program.

The practice of medicine is a way of life anywhere it is done; and the practice of medicine in the small town, that is, being a country doctor, has certain inherent qualities which makes it even more unique. At least that is the conclusion of the publisher of The Enterprise.

We believe that doctors, if they are good ones, have to give more of themselves to their profession than do most people.

From all indications, this has been and is being done. Not only are our local doctors willing to give everything they have when some person's life is hanging in the balance, they have been willing to gamble their futures by settling and investing in a small town.

In the fall of 1950 Dr. Harris moved his office from the hospital to a frame building just north of the hospital. This was no big thing. It was first called, 'again, an office; but then there were ideas of it's just being an office and seeing patients that were afraid to walk into a building where people were extremely sick. But about that time there were some opinions about "country clinics", that were becoming popular and maybe some local people went along with the tide. New techniques and diagnoses were coming out, and they wanted to give the service people deserved.

The practice of medicine is usually a routine affair. But suppose they pick up one case of early cancer, diabetes or a latent heart disorder (the acute ones are fairly easy to diagnose). Who says "what's it worth?" We have recently seen our own area hospitals being criticized, but we feel that the saving of one life is worth the price of them.

One of the most intelligent physicians of the past century was Sir William Osler. Some of his views and opinions are being printed here. Dr. Osler died in 1919 but the editor feels that his observations are of value today.

Osler said: "The environment of a large city is not essential to the growth of a good clinical physician. Even in small towns a man can, if he has it in him, be-

Tommy Stephens, Mrs. Warnock Hipp and Mrs. Rome Richards. These ladies spend many hours attending to the medical and personal needs of patients. Several of the nurses who work at the hospital were not present when this picture was made.

TYPICAL OF THE latest in equipment which has been placed in the Bronte Hospital and Harris-Adams Clinic is this autoclave, used for sterilizing surgical equipment. It is housed near the operating room.

Dr. Armond Goldman was the first student to come to Bronte under the University of Texas preceptee program.

PRACTICE OF MEDICINE—

come well versed in methods of work, and with the assistance of an occasional visit to some medical center he can become an expert diagnostician and reach a position of dignity and worth in the community in which he lives.

"For the general practitioner a well-used library is one of the few correctives of the premature sinility which is so apt to overtake him. Self-centered, self-taught, he leads a solitary life, and unless his ever-day experience is controlled by careful reading or by the attrition of a medical society it soon ceases to be of the slightest value and becomes a mere accretion of isolated facts, without correlation. It is astonishing with how little reading a doctor can practice medicine, but it is not astonishing how badly he may do it."

Dr. Osler was speaking to a young group of doctors when he continued: "May this be the destiny of a large majority of you. Have no higher ambition! You cannot reach any better position in a community; the family doctor is the man behind the gun, who does our effective work. That his life is hard and exacting that he is underpaid and overworked; that he has but little time for study and less for recreation — these are the blows that may give finer temper to his steel, and bring out the nobler elements in his character.

"And the master-word is Work, a little one, as I have said, but fraught with momentous sequences if you but write it on your hearts. But there is serious difficulty in getting you to understand the paramount importance of the work-habit as part of your organization. You are not far from the Tom Sawyer stage with its philosophy that work consists of whatever a body is obliged to do, and that play consists of whatever a body is not obligated to do.

"Many seek peace, few pursue it actively, and among these few, we are not often to be found. In one sense every one of us may be asked the question which Jehu returned to Joram: "What hast thou to do with Peace? since our life must be a perpetual warfare, dominated by the fighting spirit. The physician, like the Christian, has three great foes — ignorance, which is sin; apathy, which is the world; and vice, which is the devil. There is a delightful Arabian proverb two lines of which run: "He that knows not, and knows not that he knows not, is a fool. Shun him. He that knows not, and knows that he knows not, is simple. Teach him."

I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me.—(Philippians 4, 13.)

As He was in the days of the Apostle Paul, so is the Lord Jesus Christ present today at the side of every righteous man—giving us freely and overflowing of superhuman strength and power for good. . . . 'Lo, I am with you always.'

IN THE LAB—Mrs. H. C. Murtishaw, left, and her assistant, Mrs. J. I. Murtishaw, make up the lab "crew" of the Harris-Adams Clinic and Bronte Hospital. They are shown here in their quarters in the new building. Their work of running all kinds of lab tests on patients is of great assistance to the doctors in diagnosing illnesses. Behind where the ladies are standing and out of the picture is the room in the new clinic containing the X-ray machine.

Lab Room Plays An Important Roll in the Operation of the New Harris-Adams Clinic

One of the most important parts of the new Harris-Adams Clinic is the new laboratory and X-ray room. Previously, there was a lab both in the hospital and in the clinic and the X-ray room was in the hospital.

Under the new arrangement, the laboratory and X-ray room are located in the southernmost room of the new clinic, adjoining both the clinic and the hospital. This planning will save many steps, both for the technicians and the patients. The old X-ray and lab room in the hospital has been converted to a patient room.

Lab technicians are Mrs. H. C. (Christine) Murtishaw and Mrs. J. I. (Helen) Murtishaw. The two ladies are sisters-in-law. Mrs. H. C. Murtishaw is a long-time employee of the hospital and clinic while the latter began her duties late last summer.

The lab is one of the more important things which direct the doctor in fighting invaders of the body.

If a patient coming in complaining of pain is admitted to the hospital or clinic, tests are run not only as diagnostic procedures, but to determine the seriousness and cause of the illness. To find whether the pain is due to an infection, a white blood count is done—as the body defends itself by speeding up production of these cells which destroy harmful bacteria.

A high count means an infection somewhere in the body. A red blood count and hemoglobin determination tells the doctor whether the infection or illness is a chronic thing, whether or not there has been a steady loss of blood, a drop in blood production, or a lack of materials out of which blood is made, producing what is known as anemia.

This also tells him if the body is strong enough to fight this infection. The questions of how extensive this disease is and whether or not tissue is being destroyed is answered with another test, a sedimentation rate. Determining the rate at which cells fall through the fluid vehicles of the blood, while a simple procedure, is a very important adjunct in ascertaining where to point the guns of disease control.

A urinalysis is a quick way of telling whether the trouble is or isn't in the kidneys.

Maybe the larger guns of the doctor's armory must be used, so X-ray is brought into position. A chest film quickly tells the story of pneumonia, tuberculosis, lung cancer and many types of heart disease.

To see the inside of the digestive track, a metallic dye called borum is used. This procedure, though uncomfortable, quickly gives the doctor fluorescing the patient and makes permanent records of these discoveries when pictures are made.

An electrocardiogram is a painlessly taken but permanent picture of the health of the heart muscle, based on the fact that there are two electrical starters and definite paths of electrical conduction in healthy hearts.

The clinic is composed of four rooms, in addition to a bathroom and several closets. One room is used for the patient's waiting room and as an office. Another room is the doctor's office, while a third is the examining room. The fourth room is being used for a laboratory.

Main reason for the expansion, Dr. Harris, said, was the crowded conditions which existed in the hospital. He said, too, that with the clinic in another building, hospital patients will not be disturbed by persons coming in for office calls.

The clinic is furnished with the latest in office and hospital furniture. A large amount of new laboratory equipment has been purchased, also.

Dr. Harris, who has been in Bronte, for more than three years, has the Karen-Gayl hospital leased.

Free Services Rendered by Local Doctors

Drs. John R. Harris and Dean Adams provide many free services for this area. Dr. Harris is city health officer and receives no fee for his services on this job. In the line of civic duty, Dr. Harris has also served one term on the Bronte school board and is currently a candidate for mayor of Bronte.

As local representative of the State Health Department, Dr. Harris gave free typhoid shots to everyone who would take them after the flood here in 1953. He also furnished free Salk polio shots for anyone who wished to take them and was unable to pay for the service.

Each year pre-school children from the Bronte and Blackwell school districts are given a free checkup and any necessary shots before they begin their 12-year job of going through public school. This program is carried out cooperatively with the local Parent-Teacher Association, with the association furnishing the money for the vaccine and the local doctors furnishing their time, know-how and facilities.

Both Dr. Harris and Dr. Adams are always on the bench locally at football games. One or the other usually makes a trip or two onto the field during each game when some boy gets hurt to determine if he is seriously injured, or just got the breath knocked out of him. Too, football boys and basketball teams from Bronte and Blackwell receive free physicals from the local doctors before they start the season.

Our Sincere Thanks to Everyone

The sincere thanks of The Enterprise staff goes to everyone who helped make this special section possible.

First, we appreciate the cooperation of our advertisers, without whom we could not have even thought about putting out this section.

Second, the assistance of Dr. Harris and Dr. Adams was invaluable. Much of the data in this paper could not have been written without their information and advice, particularly on technical matters.

The entire staff of the Bronte Hospital and Harris-Adams Clinic was most cooperative and we feel sure became rather tired of our picture taking and upsetting their routine on a busy day.

Last of all, the publisher wishes to thank the other members of The Enterprise staff for their overtime and willingness to take on this extra job. Their cooperation was particularly appreciated this week as we have been plagued with mechanical difficulties.

We, as everyone else in this area, are proud of the new Harris-Adams Clinic and the Bronte Hospital and the services which are rendered by Drs. Harris and Adams and their staff. That's the reason for the publication of this section. We hope they like it and we hope you, our readers, like it.

No Person Has Been Refused Service at Hospital

Perhaps one of the most unique features of both the Harris-Adams Clinic and the Bronte Hospital is that no person has ever been asked to declare or present evidence of financial responsibility before treatment.

Drs. Harris and Adams go on the theory and will pay when they can. They say also "that when a person is ill, he has no desire to be hounded about his credit rating. Also when a person is ill, it makes no difference about his credit rating."

Operation of the Business Office Is a Giant Task

A firm which has grown as the Bronte Hospital and Harris-Adams Clinic has the past few years has a big job for the persons who operate its business office.

W. D. (Pete) McDonald heads this department of the hospital and clinic, and his assistant is Mrs. E. G. (Dorothy Ruth) Collins. The office which the two occupy is located in the northwest part of the new clinic building.

Among their many duties are keeping books on patients' accounts, buying for the hospital and clinic, and keeping up with employees' time and making their payroll.

A bigger job for the business office all the time is handling of hospitalization insurance claims. A large number of the patients who go to the local hospital and clinic for medical care have hospitalization insurance, and it is McDonald's and Mrs. Collins' job to see that the claims are properly filled out and processed.

CHECKING AN ACCOUNT—Here are Mrs. E. G. Collins and W. D. (Pete) McDonald checking through one of the ledgers of the Bronte Hospital. They are ready at all times to assist patients with their accounts at the hospital and clinic.
