Kiker of Bronte were among the 150 officers and citizens from a 10 county territory afflicted by the UCRA who met in the city hall at Ballinger Monday afternoon and organized the Central West Texas Conservation and Flood Control Association. Representatives from all ten counties were present except from Mills and Concho, roads from which points were impassible.

A board of directors composed of a representative from each county is charged with compiling on record sheets supplied by the board of water engineers, definite statistical reports of the flood ravages in the ten counties this year.

These figures and geographical and economical pictures of the area affected are to be presented to the U. S. Board of Army Engineers at a hearing of the Colorado project to be held in

Have You Seen Paul's Jacket?

If anyone has seen Paul Good's jacket, Coach Roach would like to have it returned to Paul or to himself.

It was during the flood Saturday that Mr. Roach rode a pony across the bridge and through the flood at the south approach. On the return the pony stepped into a hole and lost his footing and the coach dismounted. He was swept off his feet in the strong current and Paul Good's jacket, much too large for him, was washed off and carried downstream.

W. E. Newton Jr. went to the rescue and dragged the soaked but jovial coach to the land, minus his hat and Paul's jacket but still chewing his cigar.

Sick'em Nappy

A four months old pup belonging to Bill Wallace jumped a fox last Friday and chased it into a tree standing in about a foot of water caused by high waters from the Colorado river. The fox, shaken from the tree into the water, was met by the pup.

Later the combatants were dragged from the water nearly drowned and the fox was finished off with a club.

The fox was skinned and the meat offered the pup, but he declined the honor.

The pup, Nappy, also has to his credit two skunks.

Health Education Important Program

Assembling of students in the schools of the State this month calls to public attention the definite health responsibility of parents and teachers, as well as health workers, and is the subject of an address from the State Department of Health to the citizenship.

"A public health education program is an outstanding factor in the development of the physical, mental, and social welfare of the school children of today," said Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer. "Health teachings should be a basic part of every educational program."

"Practically every phase of the school system is related to health. Housing, screening, diet, disposal of waste, exercise, rest, even the manner of daily contact with others, all have a direct bearing on health. Schools must treat the child as a whole--with his physical condition related definitely to his mental and emotional capacities."

"Prevention is the all important factor in the control of communicable disease. Communicable disease, as we all know--describes that kind of disease which may be imparted or transmitted from one person to another, either by personal contact or through some other method. One by one, the communicable diseases, such as smallpox, diphtheria, whooping cough, and typhoid fever, are being controlled by preventive or immunizing agents. It is much better for all concerned that the child should be protected from ever taking these diseases, which often leave some condition that will cause trouble later in life."

"Assume your responsibility in the community and work for the development of health education which will pave the way to a better health for the future."

He Remembers Money In Bank

Bronte, Sept. 26. — Antonio Soso, a Mexican cotton picker, and his family earned $155 above their expenses here in 1927. He deposited this sum in the First National Bank and forgot about having the money.

So, in a manner of speaking, did the bank. L. T. Youngblood, president of the bank, was surprised when a Mexican this week asked him to let him have his money.

In reply to the question, "What money?" Soso produced deposit slips. Then he explained that he remembered the old deposit when his home was washed away in the San Angelo flood. He will use the money to rebuild.

Pay your water bill by 10th of each month or have your service discontinued. City Commission.

Estimates Raised

Supt. Taylor is in receipt of a letter, a copy of one sent from the PWA office at Ft. Worth to W. R. Griffin, architect employed to draw up plans to the proposed addition to the school building. The letter states that estimates on the project have been raised from $36,000 to $42,000. This much interest given the application for federal aid is proof that the Ft. Worth office has approved the project and that it is in Washington awaiting allotment.

Supt. Taylor suggests that if we want a school building as much we need one it is time we did something about it.

Mertzon Here Saturday

The Steers will go into the first conference game this week at considerable disadvantage. They have been rained out of two games that would have given much needed practice not to mention much needed funds.

If nothing unforeseen prevents the Steers will meet the Mertzon team on the home field Saturday afternoon for the first conference games of the season.

Will Attend Welfare Meeting

Mrs. Iva Scoggins, Coke county case worker, will attend the Social Welfare Institute at Abilene Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

Friday night is open to anyone interested in welfare work. It is thought likely Judge Wylie and the commissioners will attend.

Mrs. Scoggins will visit her daughter, Geneva, who is a student in A. C. C.

News On Old Age Assistance

Judge Wylie was in Austin on the 21st in the interest of the old age applicants of the county. In conference with Mr. T. E. Dorcey, it was learned that of the 300,000 applicants over the state for old age assistance 87,000 have been approved, 12,900 denied assistance and between 70,000 and 80,000 yet to be investigated. Mr. Dorcey explained that the work of investigation was being slowed up because of the magnitude of the job and a large number of unexpected complications.

In answer to Judge Wylie's question about what to do with cases in this county that are without means of support, Mr. Dorcey advised that a list of emergency cases be sent to him.

Judge Wylie advises that he is working up this list as fast as possible. He must of necessity be the judge of the cases that should be classed as emergency and he asks that the people be not too harsh in their criticism of his decision.

Roosevelt vs. Hearst

Red Backing
ASSERTIONS made by William Randolph Hearst and other opponents of the New Deal that the President "passively accepts" the support of the Communists have got under Mr. Roosevelt's skin. A statement issued through Stephen T. Early, his secretary, said:

W. R. Hearst

"My attention has been called to a certain notorious newspaper owner to make it appear that the President passively accepts the support of alien organizations hostile to the American form of government."

"Such articles are conceived in malice and born of political spite. They are deliberately framed to give a false impression, in other words to 'frame' the American people.

"The President does not want and does not welcome the vote or support of any individual or group taking orders from alien sources.

"This simple fact is, of course, obvious.

"The American people will not permit their attention to be diverted from real issues to fake issues which no patriotic, honorable, decent citizen would purposely inject into American affairs."

Mr. Hearst, who was in Amsterdam, promptly replied by cable, saying in part:

"The President has issued a statement through a secretary. He has not had the frankness to say to whom he refers in the statement. . . . I think I am justified in assuming that I am the object of the statement. . . .

"Let me say that I have not stated at any time whether the President willingly or unwillingly received the support of the Karl Marx Socialists, the Frankfurter radicals, communists and anarchists, the Tugwell bolsheviks, and the Richberg revolutionists which constitute the bulk of his following.

"I have simply said and shown that he does receive the support of these enemies of the American system of government, and that he has done his best to deserve the support of all such disturbing and destructive elements."

Al Smith Will Make Some Anti-Roosevelt Speeches

SPECULATION concerning what part Al Smith would take in the Presidential campaign seems to be settled by the news that he will deliver several anti-Roosevelt addresses, the first probably in Carnegie hall in New York in October. He is reported to be making out his own program and planning talks also in Massachusetts and New Jersey. It is said neither the Republican party nor the American Liberty league will be sponsor for his appearances.

Crop Insurance Pushed by the President

IMMEDIATE action toward putting in operation a two-fold crop insurance and drought prevention program was called for by President Roosevelt. It is designed to guard the farmers and the consumers against the danger of food shortages or price collapses. Two committees were named to work out legislation to be asked of the next congress.

M. L. Cooke

Mr. Roosevelt named Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace chairman of a committee directed to "prepare a report and recommendations for legislation providing a plan of 'all risk' crop insurance," and suggested that the system provide for payment of premiums and insurance in commodities. This is in accord with Wallace's proposed plan under which farmers would put part of their crops of good years into a pool from which they could draw money in years when they are low. It would serve, he believes, to keep surpluses from destroying the price structure in good years and provide an "insurance" against crop failures in other years.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, was named chairman of another committee to draft recommendations for a permanent land use program designed to avert drought emergencies.

Veterans of Two Wars Open Conventions

VETERANS of the World war and of the Civil war opened their annual gatherings, the American Legion in Cleveland and the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington. The Legionnaires, many thousands of them, started off with the dedication of the Peace Gardens in the Ohio city, for which soil had been brought from sacred shrines of foreign countries and the forty-eight states. National Commander Ray Murphy presided over an impressive ceremony and unveiled a memorial plaque bearing the inscription:

"These gardens, planned by men who know the horrors of war, were dedicated to the brotherhood of man and peace throughout the world."

Commander Murphy in his annual report said: "Whether our country shall be spared participation in another great international conflagration may well depend upon our courage as Legionnaires to stand up and demand that our government now take the steps which may save us, without the loss of honor—a sacrifice we are unwilling to make at any cost."

Only about nine hundred survivors of the Union army were able to attend the G. A. R. encampment, and many believe it will be the last to be held.

Virgin Islands Have New Federal Judge

GEORGE P. JONES of Minnesota, who has been serving as a special assistant to the attorney general of the United States since 1934, has been made judge of the federal district court for the Virgin Islands. This is a recess appointment by President Roosevelt and is subject to confirmation by the senate. Mr. Jones planned to leave for St. Thomas about October 1. He succeeds Judge Albert C. Levitt of Connecticut, who resigned August 1 because, as he alleged, the Department of the Interior interfered with the processes of his court.

G. P. Jones

The oath of office was administered to Mr. Jones in Washington by Ugo Carusi, executive assistant to Attorney General Cummings, in the presence of Mr. Cummings and a number of other officials.

McAlexander, "Rock of the Marne," Dies

MAJ. GEN. ULYSSES S. GRANT McALEXANDER, U. S. A., retired, who won fame in the World war as "The Rock of the Marne," died suddenly in his home in Portland, Ore., at the age of seventy-two.

The general won his appellation for his stand in stemming a terrific assault by the Germans in their final great offensive on the western front in July, 1918. He was then colonel in command of the Thirty-eighth infantry, and at the most critical period of the German attack he was told by headquarters that he might fall back if he thought best. He replied positively: "I will hold my lines," and he did. It was the Germans who fell back.

Spanish Rebels Rush Toward Madrid

SEVERAL columns of Spanish Fascists and Moorish legionnaires were reported to be making a determined drive toward Madrid under the direction of General Franco, and the loyalists were falling back at the rate of five miles a day.

The rebel garrison of the Alcazar in Toledo was still holding out though the government forces, after dynamiting part of the old fortress, made attacks with flaming gasoline. The defenders lost heavily but the rebels kept up their deadly machine gun fire and repulsed the charges of the loyalists. This heroic garrison had been holding the fort for nine weeks.

The American State department ordered the embassy in Madrid closed and warned all Americans still in the capital that they remained at their own risk.

Airplanes at $750 Each
Perils of Pacifism
The "Man of Calcium"
Improving Human Breed?

Fourteen concerns have offered to build small airplanes to cost as little as $750. That is important aviation news; the bureau of air commerce is to be congratulated on its effort to encourage individual flying.

Arthur Brisbane

The day is coming when there will be more machines in the air than there are automobiles on the ground now. More than 25,000,000 airplanes may sound like exaggeration. But it sounded like exaggeration some years ago when this writer published editorials urging citizens not to spread tacks and cut glass on roads, to puncture automobile tires, because, before long, automobiles would be used by workers going to and from work. That prediction came true.

Some one preparing a list of ten things that Christians would and would not do says:

"There would be no private wealth; Jesus denounced great possessions as alien to His gospel, and fatal to His kingdom.

"There would be no poverty and no war, because real Christians would refuse to fight."

In this civilization, if Christians refused to fight, they would rapidly diminish in numbers and the Pacific coast would be settled by Asiatics.

The founder of Christianity taught that what was due to Caesar should be rendered unto him.

If He were on earth now He might say the same of organized capital, knowing that it supplies, in our complicated system, the possibility of steady work.

Yebody, not even a clergyman, can be positive as to what Christ's commands would be if he returned in this age of flying machines, automobiles, public schools and the strange problem of too much of almost everything, combined with want among many thousands of families lacking food and the government wondering, occasionally what to do with millions of bushels of wheat.

Before long you may have football coaches feeding calcium to their players. You know what we call "a man of calcium."

The metal calcium in the blood, in quantities that do not change, or that change little, produces a steadiness of nerve lacking in men with a fluctuating calcium supply.

It is said that experiments made on four young men at an eastern university showed that a drop in calcium brought on "moodiness, depression and pessimism."

If there is high calcium content in the blood serum they are in a "happy, cheerful, optimistic, emotional state."

London thinks something should be done about "more than 250,000 mental defectives," and sterilization, on the German plan, is suggested, on condition that the individual consents. With such a law, government sterilization agents would have few customers.

Under one law suggested, the health minister would order the sterilization of "physically ailing persons shown to be carriers of transmissible disabilities."

The world is preparing to regulate and improve the human breed, as it has long regulated and improved breeds of cattle, swine and other creatures; a step in the direction of uniformity that may not be desirable.

One of the most enlightened educators in America tells teachers and undergraduates that the important individual welfare.

The baby wiggling its arms and kicking its legs in the cradle is building up one more strong baby, for its own sake, not for the general welfare, to which it, nevertheless, contributes. The parent is talking on his career, and on the care and education of his children, has chiefly in mind his career, children and family. But he also is building up the general welfare. Each tiny coral builder worked only for its own speck of coral, but the islands are the result.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It has been exceedingly interesting to watch the progress of the Democratic and Republican campaign committees in their efforts to shape and join the issues upon which the electorate will choose the next occupant of the White House. There has been a tremendous amount of hauling and filling, each side coming forth with trial balloons in an effort to find out what it is that will attract the most interest among the voters and to determine what particular matters afford the best vehicle on which they can ride into office.

Campaign Issues

From the beginning of this year, President Roosevelt has been trying to shape his issue on the basis of a single question—whether the American people in dollars and cents are better off than they were when he took office. I think admittedly that if Mr. Roosevelt could force that question into the center of the stage and make it the real issue, he would have very little campaigning to do. But the trouble is Mr. Roosevelt has been unable to accomplish his purpose and no little credit for his threat to force a joinder of issues on this point is due to the Republican leadership. The Republican managers simply will not be led into that trap. Thus, we must look elsewhere to see what the real issues are, or are likely to be, in this campaign decision.

It has nearly always been true that the issues prominent early in the campaign have proved not to be the issues at all near the end of a political battle. This year promises to be no exception. Political leaders attempt to figure out the proposition upon which their opponents are most vulnerable and obviously this figuring takes place in advance. It has to happen that way in order that methods of attack can be arranged in advance.

The New Dealers thought they could smoke out the Republicans by shouting far and wide that the people as a whole are better off than they were when Mr. Roosevelt took office. But, again, it was a case where political strategy did not work. Even though many hundred thousands of people are better off, the fact remains that there are some twenty million persons receiving relief in one form or another and the further fact remains that there are somewhere between nine million and ten million workers without jobs. Consequently, Mr. Roosevelt's question whether people were better off in dollars and cents did not quite click.

In the meantime, the Republicans have found what they believe to be a very vulnerable spot: in the New Deal armor and they are shooting at it with machine-gun rapidity. This question, this spot, centers around taxation. The Republicans apparently thought at the start of the fight that Democratic waste of federal money and the vast debt that was piled up would force a revulsion of feeling against New Deal policies. So they started out on that campaign horse. But they found that the question of taxation over-shadowed the other, even though the taxation about which the Republicans are talking has been an offspring of the alleged waste of the party in power.

I doubt that the taxation issue would have been as important as it is proving to be had not the New Dealers made a mistake in political strategy. This mistake, it may be said in passing, illustrates how very minor things influence the ultimate result in politics to a greater extent perhaps than in any other activity of American national life. The mistake which I refer to was made by Attorney General Cummings.

The story of the circumstance chronologically is something like this: The Republicans from their headquarters in Chicago began calling attention to increased tax burdens in connection with their exposure of the increase of more than thirteen billion dollars in the country's debt. They pointed out how, if the Roosevelt administration had not wasted money, preparations would not have to be made for raising the taxes and how, if this waste had not occurred, the taxes which we already have had would not have taken place.

Not as a part of the demonstration of increased taxation the Republicans issued campaign literature itemizing the amount of taxes each and every one of us pays on the common every-day necessities of life. They showed how each loaf of bread, each pair of shoes, each pork-chop, among other things, bears so much tax which all of us pay in buying those necessities of life.

Probably the distribution of this campaign literature by the Republicans would not have stirred up so much fuss in and of itself had it not been for the action of Attorney General Cummings. The Attorney General made some public threats that he would seek to indict those who were responsible for distribution of this information, claiming that a federal law had been violated. Being attorney general of the United States, any statement from him got wide distribution.

But the Republicans, recognizing the potentialities of this situation, issued a challenge to Mr. Cummings to proceed with his threat of indictments. Their publicity statement on the point was just as virulent as that of any red-blooded American boy who says to his playmate, "I dare you to!"

Well, the rejoinder of the Republicans rather put Mr. Cummings on the spot.

I presume probably the threat and the resulting challenge still would have amounted to nothing except that the method employed by the Republicans capitalized on that threat by accusing the attorney general of seeking to prevent free speech and to prohibit discussion of campaign issues. If there is one thing that the American people resent, it is any attempt at governmental agency of character it may stifle discussion. It is a sign where in the virus that overtook the birth of this virus. That is why the Cummings is so important.

President Roosevelt announced the other day that he is preparing to start reorganization of the federal administrative agencies. He said he had arrived at the conclusion that such a course was necessary because there has been overlapping in function and jurisdiction among the many agencies created by the New Deal. It is the second time that the President has proposed reorganization of the governmental units and his new announcement promises to attract as much attention as did his original announcement which was made when he was a candidate during the 1932 presidential campaign.

For a long time, it has been plainly evident to observers in Washington that New Deal agencies were literally falling over one another and that many of them were constantly in conflict with others because the laws or executive orders, chiefly the executive orders, by which these agencies were created, did not clarify their jurisdiction or their function.

I have known of numerous instances where one agency, under authority given it by the President, has promulgated rules and regulations hazing the force of law that did not conform to rules and regulations dealing with the same matters but coming from another unit of government. In addition, I have seen different interpretations placed on the same statute or the same regulation by two different agencies. In consequence, the citizen whose business practices or personal affairs were touched by government edict found himself prohibited from doing a particular thing on the one hand and ordered to do it on the other.

Thus, it would seem that it is high time for something to be done about re-organization. It would seem equally to be high time for elimination of some of the extra red tape of government which has been wound about the private lives of American citizens by the New Deal. Goodness knows, there was plenty of red tape before the New Deal; it certainly is worse now than it was before.

SYNOPSIS

Sleepy Cat, desert town of the Southwest, is celebrating the Fourth of July. Jane Van Tambel, beautiful daughter of Gus Van Tambel, hated owner of Gunlock ranch, has arrived from the East for the first time. She watches the Frontier Day celebration in company with Dr. Carpy, crusty, tender-hearted friend of the community. Henry Sawdy of the Circle Dot ranch, tricked in a fake horse race the day before by Dave McCrossen, foreman at Gunlock, plans revenge. He enters Bill Denison, a handsome young Texas wrangler, in the rodeo which McCrossen is favored to win, and lays heavy bets on him. Unknown to the crowd, Denison is a champion horseman, McCrossen and the young stranger tie in the various events. Denison then drops a cigarette carelessly. Racing down the track full tilt, he picks up the cigarette. The verdict goes to Denison when McCrossen refuses to attempt the stunt. Entreated by the crowd, Denison agrees to perform another trick. Jane Van Tambel is asked for her bracelet and throws it on the track. Just as Denison rides to pick it up a yell from Barney Rebstock, a McCrossen henchman, scares the pony, nearly costing the rider his life. Gun play is prevented by the intervention of Dr. Carpy. Back on Gunlock ranch after two years in Chicago, because of her father's illness, Jane gets lost riding in the hills and meets Denison, now a neighbor, who guides her home. Not knowing her identity, he speaks bitterly of Van Tambel. She tells McCrossen who brought her home and he denounces Denison as a cattle thief. Later she asks Dr. Carpy why her father is unpopular and he tells her it is because of Van Tambel's ruthless and unscrupulous character. Visiting her father in the hospital, Jane is warned to be wary of McCrossen's honesty, but her father urges her to be nice to him. Later McCrossen tries to woo her, but is sharply rebuffed. Once again Jane loses her way in the hills and meets Denison.

"Who was the man that brought you home?" asked McCrossen.

Jane looked at him, frankly amused. "Now wasn't that nice of you? Really, Mr. Denison, you make me perfectly ashamed of myself. Will you get mad now if I confess again? No, you mustn't. I just won't have it. But—I was kidding about being a circus rider. It was some of our crazy cowboys started that."

He repressed a smile. She saw it. "What amused you?" she asked.

"Nothing at all."

"Oh, yes it was. What?"

"You won't get mad?"

"Oh," she responded airily, "I never get mad."

"Well, I knew you were kidding because that time you rode up to Spring Valley, I happened to see you."

down the valley. It was after I'd read these stories about circus riding. I said to myself, 'if that young lady ever rode for a circus, they'd have to tie her on'."

Jane didn't like it—no girl could. But it gave her precisely the opening she wanted. "Now," she said with an attempted laugh, "it's my turn, and I hope you won't get mad."

"Try me—nothing'd make me mad."

Then, "You mustn't hate me because I am not someone you might have thought I was. I am Jane Van Tambel. My name is Jane—not Marie. I know you and Father haven't got along . . ."

They were jogging on, side by side. Then he looked over at her with an expression she had not before seen in a man's eyes. "I certainly won't ever hate you," he said very slowly. "I just—couldn't."

"Who Was the Man That Brought You Home?" Asked McCrossen.

asked discreetly about their neighbor, this man Bill Denison. She had heard so much about him that she'd begun to wonder what he looked like!

"Why, Miss Jane," answered Bull, "ordin' to what I hear, Bill's been down to Medicine Bend on his lawsuit."

"But why need a man go down to Medicine Bend for a lawsuit, when there are courts in Sleepy Cat?"

"Well, this is before the U. S. Land Office; that's different." Suddenly Bull, peering down the trail, straightened up. "Why, there's Bill, right now, on his way to town. The critter's back."

"Where is he? Oh, I see. The man that just rode around the bend?" Jane did some fast and bold thinking. She looked in her purse. "Bull!" she exclaimed in fancied alarm, "I've forgotten to bring Quong's grocery list for the kitchen. I'm afraid you'll have to ride back after it."

She was soon within speaking distance of the horseman ahead. Over-taking him, she slackened her pace.

"Good-morning," she said stiffly.

Denison looked around, checked his horse, touched his hat, and returned the greeting. But he was plainly confused, and Jane was correspondingly pleased. "We meet again," she said with a superior air. "And this time I'm not lost."

"I'm afraid I am, this time," he said slowly.

"How so?"

"Well, it happened I was just thinking about the other times we met, and wondering whether I'd ever see you again, when you dropped down out of the sky on me just now. It took my breath. On your way to town? So am I. Do you mind if I ride along with you?"

"I might mind if you didn't. In fact, if you don't mind a confession, I hurried a little to catch up. You were so kind before—"

"Nothing at all—"

"—and you gave me such good advice that I haven't been lost since. But I do feel safer, riding with company. So thank you again—if you're not terribly tired of being thanked."

"Just as much as you like, if you'll remember you're thanking me for nothing. I was afraid you'd gone back to Chicago."

"Where have you been all this time? I certainly couldn't have missed you, if you ride this trail as often as I do."

"I've been away—down at Medicine Bend. How long is it since that day?"

"Oh, I haven't an idea. It was an awfully hot day, as I remember. Wasn't it?"

"I can't remember a thing about the weather. If I measured the time by my feelings, it would be about three years."

"How perfectly ridiculous!" pouted Jane.

"What I was afraid of was, you'd gone back to Chicago and I'd never see you again. Then I figured that if you went back to Chicago, I'd look there next winter for a circus job and try to get into the same show with you."

She looked at him, frankly amused.

"Now wasn't that nice of you? Really, Mr. Denison, you make me perfectly ashamed of myself. Will you get mad now if I confess again? No, you mustn't. I just won't have it. But—I was kidding about being a circus rider. It was some of our crazy cowboys started that."

He repressed a smile. She saw it. "What amused you?" she asked.

"Nothing at all."

"Oh, yes it was. What?"

"You won't get mad?"

"Oh," she responded airily, "I never get mad."

"Well, I knew you were kidding because that time you rode up to Spring Valley, I happened to see you."

down the valley. It was after I'd read these stories about circus riding. I said to myself, 'if that young lady ever rode for a circus, they'd have to tie her on'."

Jane didn't like it—no girl could. But it gave her precisely the opening she wanted. "Now," she said with an attempted laugh, "it's my turn, and I hope you won't get mad."

"Try me—nothing'd make me mad."

Then, "You mustn't hate me because I am not someone you might have thought I was. I am Jane Van Tambel. My name is Jane—not Marie. I know you and Father haven't got along . . ."

They were jogging on, side by side. Then he looked over at her with an expression she had not before seen in a man's eyes. "I certainly won't ever hate you," he said very slowly. "I just—couldn't."

CHAPTER V

Two days passed. Jane ordered up her pony. "What's takin' you into town today?" asked McCrossen suspiciously.

Bull came up with the pony. Jane tossed the question: "I forget some errands the other day. I shan't be gone long."

"Who's goin' with you?"

"No one. The boys are busy. I don't need the wagon today."

She had ridden some two miles toward town, when a turn in the trail brought in sight a man riding out of the woods. He checked his horse and waited for Jane. His face was expectant.

Jane's cheeks flushed in spite of herself. "I hope I haven't kept you waiting long," she stammered. He smiled and shook his head as if perfectly satisfied. "I came early," he confessed. "But I'd have hung around all night for this and not thought it long. Are we going up in the hills?"

"Not today. We—at least I—am going into town." Jane had private feelings of reserve about riding into the hills with Bill Denison. "In the hills we might get lost," she suggested, naively.

"I might; but not in the way you mean. I'm lost right now. I've been lost for two days. Something came into my life two days ago that I hope will keep me dreaming the rest of my life."

"Don't talk nonsense."

"You don't dare ask what I was dreaming about?"

"Was it about another dreamer?"

"It was."

"I know who, then." He looked at her with pathetic hope. "It was about McCrossen," she added heartlessly.

"Never! It was—"

"Let's gallop," she exclaimed, cutting him squarely off. "I feel just like riding fast. I can beat you to that big pine!"

When she pulled up after a brisk run, her face was flushed, her eyes dancing, her lips parted in laughter. Denison was just behind her. "Why, you didn't race at all," she complained, looking around at him "Why didn't you try to pass me instead of sticking at my heels all the time?"

"If I passed you, how in the world could I see you? I wish it was fifty miles more to Sleepy Cat—don't you?"

"No."

"Well, don't you wish it was just a few miles farther?"

"No."

"Not even two miles?"

"No."

"Well, one mile then?"

"Well, maybe a mile."

"Say two."

"What a persistent tease! Well—two, then. And no more."

"We could make it two by riding a little farther into the hills."

"You might ride up that way by yourself."

"I'm just a groom. I have to follow my mistress."

"Oh, no! We mustn't ride into town together. You gallop ahead."

Jane lunched that day at Dr. Carpy's hotel, hoping she might see Carpy himself. Fortune favored her. The doctor was in the office when she came.

"By the way, Doctor," she said, "I rode into town, part of the way, this morning with a neighbor of ours who doesn't bear a very favorable reputation at Gunlock, but—"

"What's his name?"

"Bill Denison."

Many Tugboats U. S. Sold Are Sinking in Marne; Bought by France in 1916

At Bonneuil-sur-Marne, not far from Paris, an American fleet of twenty-five vessels is gradually sinking, writes a Paris United Press correspondent.

Strollers along the canal of the Little Darse, which leads from the Marne, come with surprise upon this graveyard of ships, some still afloat, some half submerged, some showing only their smokestacks, on whose bows are the words so strange to French eyes, Arkansas, Missouri, Ohio, Kentucky, Worcester, Georgia, and finally—not so strange—St. Louis.

They are part of the war stocks of twenty-five river tugs bought by the French government from the United States in 1916 for the Paris-Rouen service. They were handsome boats when they sailed up the Marne, Missouri leading the way, and turned into the canal of the Little Darse in 1916, and the French government had paid 250,000 francs each for them. They were tied up to the bank—temporarily. Coal was left in their bunkers so that they would be ready to move out in a few days and start their new service. They haven't moved since.

After a while the department of inland navigation took their engines out and presumably put them to work elsewhere. Later junkies came around and removed what fittings were left. Inhabitants of the nearby settlements had got the coal long before that. Thereafter the boats were forgotten. Some of them gradually settled to the bottom of the canal. Others still are afloat.

Once or twice half-hearted efforts were made to sell them. The offering price was moved as low as 50 francs and there was just one taker, an American. He turned the boat into a house boat and renamed it Noah's Ark.

Sixth Century Sculpture

Evidence that Athenian sculptors were producing masterpieces as early as the Sixth century B. C. is offered by an archaic Greek head in the collection of classical art at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Although the head is in a fragmentary condition, enough remains of the contours and modeling to give an idea of its original beauty. The crisp carving of the spiral curls bordering the forehead and the delicate modeling of the planes of the face testify to the artistic achievements of the ancient Greeks.

Alice In Wonderland

Could Lewis Carrell's Little Alice walk around this great Republic today she would see and hear things far more remarkable than she was said to have seen in the fabulous Wonderland which the author created. Carroll used imagination to produce his characters but there is no such artistry used in the production of those which today tread the boards of our life-stage—they are all too real.

She would see two East Texas farm boys, so bemused by seeing gangster pictures or reading popular fiction that they wrote a farming neighbor to put a hundred and fifty dollars under a certain railroad trestle or "get two slugs under your belt."

She would see three girls in a soft drink place with their heads together, one writing a note that almost results in getting a good citizen into trouble, thinking it a good way to get a thrill out of life.

She would see a husband sending a letter to his wife at home, while he was in another town, demanding fifteen hundred dollars be sent to his kidnapers so he would be released, the kidnapers being imaginary.

She would see graybearded men, whose experience in their long years of living ought to have convinced them that there is no something-for-nothing in this world, yet joining clubs that promise to get them more money than they ever imagined, all because they had lived to be a little past middle age.

She would see people holding a wheel that is made to control some of the most powerful engines ever built to go careening along streets and highways, happy in the belief that nothing can happen—until it does—and then blame it on the other fellows.

Many more people and things Little Alice could and would see today beyond anything she thought she saw in her visit to Wonderland. And we, like she, take them as a matter of course. Only ours are real and hers were imaginary.—The San Angelo Morning Times

BANKING SYSTEM SHOWS PROGRESS

State Bank Resources Grow More Than Three Billion Dollars in a Year

NATIONAL BANKS GAIN

American Bankers Association Gives Details of Banking Institutions and Notes Stronger Condition

NEW YORK.—Continued improvement in the condition of state chartered banking institutions, with an increase of more than three billion dollars in a year in total resources, is shown in a report just issued by the State Bank Division of the American Bankers Association.

The report was prepared by the division's Committee on State Bank Research from data furnished by state banking departments and parallels data issued by the Comptroller of the Currency for national banks which show similar improvements.

"The combined resources of 10,473 state supervised banks were $35,724,723,000 as of December 31, 1935," the state bank report says. "Total deposits amounted to $30,526,920,000. Total loans and discounts stood at $12,430,404,000 and total investments were $14,170,421,000."

A year previous, tables in the report show, there were 10,644 state supervised banks, with combined resources of $32,650,200,000. Total deposits were $27,297,959,000, loans and discounts $13,060,033,000 and investments $12,582,325,000.

Classes of Institutions

Of the reporting state banking institutions on December 31, 1935, 82% were commercial banks, the report states, 9% trust companies, almost 9% stock and mutual savings banks and less than 1% were private banks. The report adds:

"The parallel upward movements of deposits and total invested funds of total state supervised banks during the years 1934 and 1935, after declines in these items in 1932 and 1933, are indications of definite steps toward recovery in banking."

"Based on figures assembled for total state supervised banks on resources and liabilities as of December 31, 1931 to 1935, it is noted: (1) that deposits in 1935 rose approximately 12 per cent over the previous year, as compared with an increase of about 9 per cent in 1934 over the year 1933, and declines of 7 per cent and 12 per cent in 1933 and 1932, respectively, from the preceding years of 1932 and 1931; and (2) that total invested funds increased by approximately 2 per cent in 1935 and also in 1934, while they had decreased by 9 per cent in 1933 and by 11 per cent in 1932."

Analysis Shows Stronger Positions

In a survey and analysis of earnings and expenses of state banks doing a commercial business, it is brought out that in a majority of states they have increased their earning ability during 1935. On the basis of data covering 3,928 banks in 42 states, the report says:

"The most significant fact to be pointed out is that new profits of state banks—after deducting charge-offs on loans, investments, etc., and adding recoveries—were shown in 37 of the 42 states which reported in 1935, in comparison with net profits in only 11 of the 35 states reporting in 1934. Measured in terms of dollars per each $100 of invested funds, net profits in 1935 ranged between $2.46 and $10 per $100, with 19 states showing profits of $1.00 or over, per $100; while in 1934 net profits did not exceed $1.29 per $100 and only three states showed profits of $1.00 or over."

Tables showing the resources and liabilities of all classes of state chartered institutions, and detailed analyses of earnings and expenses by states and of insured commercial state banks grouped by size of banks.

Jeffersonian Democrats Declare Stand They Will Make In Coming Presidential Election

Texas Democrats Will Support Landon At the Polls In Nov.

With a full realization that our country faces a political crisis transcending all partisan interests, we Democrats of Texas now pledge our best services to the Nation upon a non-partisan basis. We reassert our belief in the Constitution, in the rights of the States, and in the Jeffersonian principle. Believing thus, we must condemn the Roosevelt Administration.

The issue before the American people today is not Roosevelt versus Landon; nor is it the Republican Party versus the Democratic Party. The issue here is the same as that which rock the rest of the world, and that issue is regimentation versus freedom and democracy. We are confronted with a change in our form of government from a Democracy, in which the government is the servant of the people, to a Socialistic and Communist state in which the individual becomes the servant of the state and loses all personal freedom and all property rights.

We charge that Mr. Roosevelt is not a Democrat and never has been in sympathy with the principles of the Democratic party.

We charge that Mr. Roosevelt has aided and abetted the aims of the Socialists and Communists, and has set up a board of advisers known as the "brain trust" which is largely made up of red radicals not in sympathy with our form of government.

We charge that few members of this "brain trust" have ever been connected with the Democratic party prior to the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt for President.

We charge that the key positions in the numerous bureaus set up by Mr. Roosevelt are now held by radical appointees selected for the most part by Felix Frankfurter, known throughout the country for his radical activities.

We charge that the radicals, whether they call themselves socialists or communists, now have the nation by the throat, thanks being due Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Perkins (a married woman following the Russian system of not taking her husband's name), Felix Frankfurter, Rex Tugwell, and others.

We charge that all New Deal agencies, such as NRA, AAA, and CCC, which business, farmers, and the rest of us were to be regimented and directed by some bureaucrat are the brain children of radicals, one of whom is Tugwell. We will prove to you before November 3rd, by quoting Mr. Tugwell himself, that he is a red or redder than Stalin, the Russian dictator.

We charge that Mr. Roosevelt has shown no interest in the 1932 platform of the Democratic party except to repeal prohibition.

We charge that most of the New Deal bills he forced through Congress were specifically called for in the 1932 Communist and Socialist platforms. We will prove this to you before November 3rd by showing you word for word the platforms of these two parties and showing you how the New Deal acts met the demand of these platforms.

We charge that when Mr. Roosevelt insisted on having all relief and PWA money given to him to use at his discretion it was for the purpose of getting control of Congress, by denying any Congressman money-spending projects in district if he voted against the President's bills.

We charge that Jim Farley, the Tammany politician and ex-prize fight commissioner, expended this money in building up a political machine to Tammanyize the United States, and has succeeded in doing so to an extent that it is as vicious as it is in New York City.

We charge that the nation cannot survive the continuation of the present, flagrant, wasteful spending far beyond its income. Mr. Roosevelt expects to continue it. Our national debt is now more than $35,000,000,000, or approximately $1,500 for the average family. The interest charges of 2 1/2% upon this debt amount to $880,000,000.

The President's program of soaking the rich by increasing the taxes on all income above $50,000 does not provide enough money to pay even the interest charges on this debt. If the entire income of this group were confiscated, it would just pay the interest charges, which as shown by the United States Treasury Department figures for 1934, was $890,936,207. The New Dealers have put the mill-stone of debt around the necks of our children and our grandchildren. We believe these debts are being piled up for the purpose of bankrupting the Nation to forward the plans of the Communists and Socialists.

We charge that the most active bureau in Washington today is that of propaganda, through which millions of dollars of taxpayer's money is spent to misinform him and sing praises of the New Deal.

We charge that Mr. Roosevelt is wholly undependable. His record is one of broken promises. The Nation and business cannot go forward when it cannot rely on the statements of the President.

We claim that Landon and Knox are the only national nominees defending the time-honored principles of Democracy. The most important plank in their platform is that in defense of State's rights to prevent the centralization of power in Washington, where some organized minority can seize control of our government.

We claim that we are going to carry the state against Roosevelt. The normal Republican vote is about 150,000. Add to this 50,000 Republicans who ordinarily do not vote because they feel that it is useless. Add to this 150,000 Democrats who will not vote for Roosevelt under any circumstances. You know your own community is full of this kind of Democrats. Add to this 150,000 Democrats who will gladly join us if they think there is any use to vote against him. This alone will mean the election against Roosevelt, but add to this thousands more who will vote against Roosevelt when they are shown the fallacies and frauds of the New Deal. We Democrats are not going to let the New Dealers and rammany Jim put any collars around our necks. A Texas voter is never a yellow dog unless he is a politician.

We want you to step out on the platform with us. We are going to help us in the distribution of our literature, or in getting money to forward this work? We have a large number of organizations throughout Texas. We want one in every town.

2 More Reductions in Long Distance Telephone Rates

Effective September 1st, long distance telephone rates are reduced as follows:

1. On calls to points over 234 miles distant, the charge for a 3-minute conversation is reduced by amounts ranging from 5c to $1.50, depending upon the distance.
2. Overtime charges on "person to person" calls are reduced after 3-minutes of overtime to the lower "station to station" overtime rate. (Overtime charges begin after 3-minutes of conversation.)

This is the second time in 10 years that voluntary reductions in long distance rates have been made. It is estimated that the new reductions will save telephone users in Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma more than one million dollars a year.

BANK GROUPS MAKE NATIONWIDE SURVEY

American and State Banking Associations Collaborate in Investigation

LOAN SERVICES STUDIED

Activities of the Government in the Banking Field Are Reviewed and Position of Banks Analyzed

NEW YORK.—Detailed bank researches, covering all phases of practical operating and economic facts and conditions related to banking, are being made by the American Bankers Association. The resulting material is being placed at the disposal of all state banking associations, which in many instances are extending the researches of the national association in their own states. These activities are said to be a part of the general program of banking development which is being carried on by the organized banking business.

Among the most extensive researches being conducted by the American Bankers Association is that of its Committee on Banking Studies, which is making a detailed survey of Federal Government lending agencies and policies. The basic material, which is kept up to date by continuing studies, shows where the Government agencies get the money they lend, what liability the Government assumes, what subsidy it extends, what return it gets, for what and to whom the money goes and on what terms it is loaned.

The Government in Banking
"It is not the intention of the committee to express its viewpoint about any agency," says the foreword to this material. "Its intention is only to determine the facts. These facts properly assembled and presented should help banks to meet Government competition if and where it exists. The committee believes the Government entered the lending field at a critical period in order to aid banks and financial institutions. If the time has come for the Government to withdraw, it is the duty of bankers to demonstrate their readiness to take care of all sound credit needs."

It adds that the banks will be supplied with full facts as to the Government's emergency lending activities and practices, and that full cooperation has been given the committee by Government agencies in obtaining facts. Binders of the material gathered have been placed by the committee in the hands of state associations.

Investigation of Postal Savings

The Committee on Banking Studies has also made a survey of the Postal Savings System throughout the United States to ascertain to what extent it is competing with chartered banks. Questionnaires were sent to banks in all places where Postal Savings depositories are operated and their answers will be analyzed as a basis for the committee's findings.

The Bank Management Commission of the American Bankers Association has made a nation-wide survey covering the movement among banks to increase their earning abilities "through fair and legitimate rates for services they render their depositors." It has developed a plan of account analysis as a basis of fair charges.

"All business in order to justify its existence is founded on the economic principle that a reasonable return should be expected from services rendered," the commission says.

Personal Income Loans

The Bank Management Commission has also formulated methods for installing and operating personal income loan departments in banks. "This plan contemplates making loans, primarily to individuals and small business concerns, based upon the character and assured incomes of the borrowers, as distinguished from the usual basis for commercial loans," the commission says.

It points out that a large part of the population is not now making use of available bank credit and that "to these people the personal loan department extends a valuable service which at the same time is profitable to the bank." It adds that it is "the duty of the banks to educate the public to come to the bank for all financial services. Small borrowers should be informed that the local bank is willing to care for their demands."

Other Researches

Other researches are being made by the Economic Pelley Commission of the association dealing with shrinkage of funds, commercial loans caused by economic changes in the nation's business methods while the National Bank Division has made studies on the savings and investment powers of the consumer. Also, the present status of the real estate investment field and of detailed data by

According to Judge Wylie, the late floods caused an estimated damage to the lateral roads of the county of $5,000 to $7,000. Temporary repair work is being done to make the roads passable and, as far as possible, to prevent any further damage but permanent repair work will not be undertaken for awhile. The state roads suffered but little damage in this vicinity.

FRED ASTAIRE, when he and his wife arrived in New York after their European vacation, staged what may be called either an outrageous attack of temperament or a burst of completely justified anger.

He was willing to pose for photographers for newspapers and news reels, but his wife was not. Somebody snapped her anyway—and Astaire proceeded to raise the roof until he got the plate.

He explained that Mrs. Astaire does not want publicity; that she is not a Hollywood celebrity, but his wife, and does not want to be anything else. She feels, apparently, that the public can have no interest in her.

Astaire would seem to be right. And there's a question as to whether he'd ever have got that plate if he hadn't made himself very disagreeable in order to do so. Perfectly calm and even-tempered people have discovered, the moment they came into contact with the motion picture business, that they weren't taken seriously unless they flew into a rage every so often.

Madeleine Carroll, whom you'll see in "The General Died at Dawn,"

(that is, you'll see it if you want to see a swell picture) is in pictures because she wants to be, not because she has to earn a living.

She is the wife of Capt. Philip Astley, who was considered one of the greatest catches in England before they were married. At that time she had not made a name for herself; she was just one more girl who was doing all right in pictures.

She went right on doing all right in them. Hollywood discovered her, and claimed her. Beautiful, intelligent, her career and her marriage very well indeed. One thing she couldn't manage—she and her husband had planned to go to their castle in Spain last summer, and the revolution spoiled their plans.

Madeleine Carroll

We're always hearing about the effect that the gowns worn in pictures have on fashions. So it may interest you girls to know that at the presentation of "Fashion Futures" at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, held recently by fashion authorities, these were among the dresses chosen from pictures which, it is said, will be modified for the rest of us to wear this year: Joan Crawford's red velvet robe, worn in "The Gorgeous Hussy"—it has huge sleeves, mink revers, and braided cuffs and shoulders. Loretta Young's blue challis, with shirred skirt and sleeves and a ruffled petticoat, worn in "Ramona." And Olivia de Havilland's bouffant organdie, with a pleated flounce for a hem worn in "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

When the football broadcasts get under way Albie Booth, who was chosen or the All-American team when he played at Yale, will describe them for WIIN, New York.

Last fall he attended one of the big games in the party with your correspondent. And, unlike many men at football games, he just watched the game. He didn't call plays, he didn't express opinions about players, he didn't even say what he thought of the game.

Jane Hamilton, RKO actress, bought a new coupe the other day and went into a huddle with the salesman over having it painted a special shade of gray. She couldn't decide on the shade, and was thinking it over when a gray car was driven in.

"Well," said Jane. "I think that color will probably do."
"It should," retorted the salesman. "That's Clark Gable's $20,000 Duesenberg."

—Mrs. Jas. Filer.
Adierka acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowel only. Adierka gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headaches for months.
Dr. H. L. Shoup, New York, reports: "In addition to intestinal cleansing, Adierka greatly reduces bacteria and colon bacilli."
Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adierka and see how good you feel! Just one spoonful relieves gas and constipation. Leading Druggists.

Many women, who formerly suffered from a weak, run-down condition as a result of poor assimilation of food, say they benefited by taking CARDUI, a special medicine for women. They found it helped to increase the appetite and improve digestion, thereby bringing them more strength from their food.
Naturally there is less discomfort at monthly periods when the system has been strengthened and the various functions restored and regulated. CARDUI, praised by thousands of women, is well worth trying. Of course, if not benefited, consult a physician.

Problem of Excess Weight
AS OVERWEIGHT does not cause much disturbance in young people, except that it spoils their appearance and interferes with their activity, not much is thought about it from the health standpoint.

But just as soon as the individual passes the age of thirty and is acquiring weight the records show that he is not as good a risk for insurance companies not only from the likelihood of diabetes but because of the burden placed on the heart by the excess of weight.

Now why does approaching middle-age make such a difference to the heart in those who are overweight? The answer to this takes us away back to the birth and early infancy of all of us. The records show that not many years ago, the death rate at birth and during the first year of life was about six in every twenty youngsters, and today, thanks to more knowledge and care, that death rate is not quite two in twenty.

Obesity Vs. Heart Trouble.

This means that four or five more youngsters in every twenty now get safely past the first year, a certain proportion attain manhood and to middle-age. However it is only too true that even those who have passed middle age are not likely, when they come to the age of 40, to be as strong as those who were born with normal weight. The ailments of these people are not only more numerous but more serious. The heart is the organ most affected by obesity. As a result of the extra weight, the heart has to serve a larger volume of blood.

L. Smith and Fred Willius, Mayo clinic, tell the Journal of the Iowa Medical Society, that they believe that the part played by overweight in producing heart failure in most instances consists in adding a burden to the heart which is at present bearing due to some other disease already present. The diseases likely to be present are high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, and any heart disease already present is distinctly more serious if overweight or excess fat is present.

In the opinion of Drs. Smith and Willius it is only in rare instances that the overweight of excess fat alone is the cause of the heart failure.

While most physicians may be inclined to agree with the above statement there are a number of cases of early failure, where, as far as the usual tests and examinations show, no real heart disease was present.

Drs. Smith and Willius studied the records of 136 obese (overweight) patients during life, and the results of the examination after death (post mortem).

Cases Are Grouped.

These cases were divided into four groups.

Group 1, 52 cases revealed no heart disease other than abnormal amounts of fat about the heart. Group 2 consisted of nine cases, four of which died of congestive heart failure. All nine showed signs of heart failure and were considered direct results of overweight.

Group 3 comprised 50 patients, all cases of overweight with high blood pressure. Group 4, cases of obesity with different forms of heart disease—hardening of arteries supplying heart muscle, the severe form of goitre, partial closure of heart valve—comprised 15 cases. Gall stones were present in 37 per cent of the 136 cases.

The above statements and figures show that while overweight of fat may not be the first cause of heart failure, nevertheless the overweight so weakens the power of the heart that it is unable to do the work necessary to keep the individual alive and in fair health. It is the added burden, the last straw as it were, to bring about the complete failure of a heart that would be able to carry on if excess fat were not present.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for October 4 THE MACEDONIAN CALL

LESSON TEXT—Acts 16:6-15; Romans 15:18-21.
GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye therefore, and teach all nations.—Matthew 28:19.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul's Wonderful Dream.
JUNIOR TOPIC—God's Call to a New Continent.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Cry for Help.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The World's Need of Christ.

The roots of American life, cultural and religious, reach back into the European soil on which our forefathers dwelt. The lesson before us is therefore of peculiar interest, for it relates the first step in the carrying of the gospel into Europe, and ultimately to America.

Paul, the missionary with a pastor's heart, felt constrained to go and visit the centers where he had ministered on his first journey. As he proceeded he was providentially hindered and led by the Holy Spirit to Troas. Here his next "step" seemed for a time to be a "stop," but soon God in a vision called him into Macedonia—and the gospel had come to Europe.

It is of interest to note that Paul, as he thus began his second missionary journey, was

I. Obedient to the Spirit (Acts 16:6-12).

He had certain plans in mind. He set out with a purpose, but he was willing to have his own itinerary changed as the Holy Spirit led. It is significant that the guidance was negative as well as positive. The stops as well as "the steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord" (Ps. 37:23). Christians will do well to remember that providential hindering circumstances may be as much the leading of God as the heavenly vision. We are to be obedient to any guidance He gives but we are not to be merely passive, but actively submissive to His will. Paul was obedient to the Father's business, not to his own. It is to such a man or woman that the Macedonian call comes even in our day, only now it comes from China, India, South America, or Africa.

II. Faithful in Testimony (vv. 13, 14).

Paul, with his companion Silas, Timothy who had joined them at Lystra, and Luke (note that the "they" of v. 8 becomes "we" in v. 10) came to Philippi in Macedonia, but they found no Macedonian man waiting for them. Had they been mistaken in their vision and call?

True missionaries are not thus easily discouraged. They had come to be fishers of men. The fisherman does not expect the fish to come to him. He goes after them. Paul soon discovered that there was a place of prayer at the river, evidently a gathering place of devout Jews for worship. There he met the man of Macedonia who turned out to be a woman. For some reason the men were absent from the place of prayer on that all-important Sabbath morning.

Lydia was a woman of distinction, business ability, and of high moral character. But Paul knew that even good people need to be saved. He spoke the truth of God. She accepted the message as God opened her heart, and at once she entered into

III. Fellowship in Service (v. 15).

Lydia proved herself to be one of that noble succession of women who have served Christ and the church. She and her household shared in the ministry of Paul by their Christian hospitality, thus helping forward the missionaries. Observe carefully that she was not saved by her works, but that her works followed naturally after her salvation.

Turning now to one of the epistles of Paul we look at his exposition of certain

IV. Fundamental Missionary Principles (Rom. 15:18-21).

Those things which Christ had wrought (Paul took no glory to himself) through him Paul had consistently directed into fields where no one else had preached the gospel.

The spirit of the missionary of the cross is that of the pioneer, pressing ever onward, taking a land, not duplicating the work of others, not jealous of their success, not seeking to be first. Men need the gospel, and we are to bring it to the yet unoccupied territory.

Hooked Fish

Fish do not seem to suffer much when they are hooked. About the jaw there are few nerves which could cause the sensation of pain. Some trout have been known to be hooked two or three times in the same day, the fisherman using the same type of bait.

Fish, no doubt, have a sensation of discomfort, but not as great as that of the higher animals. In general, a fish must feel some pain on some parts of the body, but has few nerves around the mouth, where it is apt to be hooked.

Says Dangerous Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced At Home

Rub Gently Upward Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, the best advice for home treatment that anyone in this world can give is to get a prescription known as Moone's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask your druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer troublesome. So penetrating and powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed.
